Committees Set For Parley Here

Accidents One of Our Gravest Problems, Says President.

By Felix Bruner.

Asserting that "accidents constitute one of our gravest national problems," President Roosevelt yesterday authorized Secretary Roper to call a conference early next month to determine ways of reducing the number of deaths and injuries in the Nation.

Mr. Roper immediately announced plans for the conference, appointing transportation and safety officials as heads of committees. He said the conference was in response to "an overwhelming public demand that the Administration assume leadership in the war on accidents."

"I suggest," the President said in a letter to the Secretary of Commerce, "that you call in and confer with a group of patriotic and widely known citizens who will co-operate with you in formulating plans for the control of this distressed situation in our country."

"Accidents constitute one of our gravest national problems and it is important that we obtain wide co-operation and consider all possible counsel in applying the most efficacious remedies in the interest of preservation of life and property in this country.

"It is clear that jurisdiction over highways is almost wholly within the province of State, county and municipal government — not the Federal Government. Nevertheless, you can accomplish much by getting these other government agencies to proceed more actively than they have heretofore."

List of Appointments.

Mr. Roper appointed Senator A. Harry Moore, New Jersey, as general chairman of the council. Roper will act as chairman ex-officio.

Committee chairmen will be:

HENRY R. MEIMANN, Niles, Mich., committee on causes and remedies.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER, Kansas, rural and home accidents.

THOMAS J. WATSON, New York, president of the International Business Machine Co., urban street safety.

W. AVERILL HARRIMAN, New York, chairman of the Union Pacific Railroad Co., co-operation with common carriers.

Foreign Material Barred From Jobs

American Builders Win Fight for U.S. Products.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—American producers were disclosed today as winners in their battle to prevent use of foreign products in two construction projects here.

Col. Paul Loeser, director of the Tri-Borough Bridge Authority, said that a new contract had been approved under which American steel will be substituted for the German steel ordered for a Queens approach to the bridge. Col. Loeser said no delay in the work would be caused by procuring American steel from the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, of Pittsburgh.

Walter C. Martin, superintendent of school buildings, said that at his request contractors for two high schools on Staten Island have arranged to purchase American cement and cancel contracts for French material.

G.O.P. Called Here to Plan '36 Campaign

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Heralding the approaching Presidential campaign and real political fighting, Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, yesterday issued a call to that body to meet here December 16 to fix the time and place for the party's national convention next year and arrange other details for that gathering.

Mr. Fletcher at the same time appointed a Republican national finance committee of 16 industrialists, bankers and lawyers, headed by William B. Bell, president of the American Cyanamid Co. Several of the committee have been outspoken critics of the New Deal, although few of them have actively participated in politics previously.

Ahead of Democrats.

The Republican chairman asserted this committee would assist him in financing his party's campaign "against the alien doctrines and maladministration of the New Deal." Despairing of raising "a sum which can match the billions of the people's money the Administration is now using in many flagrant instances for purely political purposes," Mr. Fletcher said he hoped to "raise enough to defray the legitimate expenses of a straight-out fight against the New Deal."

Summoning of the Republican National Committee to meet here next month is the first definite step taken by either of the two major parties in preparation for next year's Presidential campaign. Mr. Fletcher has gotten the jump on the Democrats by getting his preparations started first.

The Democrats, in control of White House, Congress and most of the State governments, however, are not greatly concerned about these preliminary moves. Indeed, it has been the tradition for the Republicans to take the lead in arranging for the national conventions and the Democrats have been content to follow along.

Cities not Selected Yet.

In Democratic quarters there has been some talk of convening that party's national committee here in conjunction with a Jackson day dinner in January to make arrangements for the party's national convention. Due to the fact that President Roosevelt is virtually certain to be renominated and that his friends will control the meeting, there is less interest in the Democratic convention than in that of the Republicans.

There has been no definite indication where either national convention will be held. Chicago is biding for both conventions. Kansas City would like to have one or the other. Atlantic City is a quadrennial bidder for the national conventions. The choice depends in large part on the city willing to make the largest contribution.

The belief exists among political observers that both parties—if bids are approximately equal—would prefer to hold their conventions this year in the Middle West, destined to be the battleground of the campaign. The location of the national conventions, however, is not nearly as important strategically now as it was in the days before the radio. Anyone with a small radio reception set may now "go" to a national convention and in all probability will hear more than those present.

Will Plan Delegate System.

In addition to selecting the place and fixing the time—probably early in June—for the national convention, the Republican national committee at its meeting here next month will announce the apportionment of delegates to the convention and the manner of their selection and will transact such other business as may be brought up.

Mr. Fletcher's selection of a national finance committee was interesting chiefly because of the preponderance of industrialists in its membership and because he chose

Board to Scan School Books For Red Views

Inquiry Is Ordered After D. C. Citizens Charge 'Propaganda.'

A study of District of Columbia schools' textbooks, to examine their reference to communism, was voted yesterday by the Board of Education after members of the Federation of Citizens Associations had attacked three textbooks and eight other books recommended in the senior high schools.

George E. Sullivan, representing the federation, called on the board to find out who was responsible for having introduced the textbooks.

"The responsibility for the original selection and adoption of such textbooks should be promptly ascertained," he concluded after reading long extracts. "It should be made public by the Board of Education, and the action taken against the responsible official or officials also should be made public."

To Print Pledges.

Simultaneously the board started the machinery by which teachers and other school employes will have to pledge that they have neither taught nor advocated communism anywhere before they can collect their salaries. Printing of the pledges was ordered.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, school superintendent here since, 1920, told the board he would sign the pledge "without any mental reservations whatsoever."

He said he would cling to Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman's opinion of the meaning of the law that communism might be mentioned although it could not be advocated.

He said that, throughout, he recognized:

"* * * that he has not only an individual responsibility for signing such a declaration, but also an official responsibility of leadership and guidance for all other employes in the school system who are asked to sign a similar declaration."

Quinn Opposes Law.

Henry Quinn, a board member, yesterday came to the defense of teachers whose salaries might be jeopardized by doubts about the meaning of the 1936 budget rider which prohibited teaching or advocating of communism.

Shield Bought for $10 Is Believed Cellini Art

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Miss Flora MacDougall's belief that a cast-iron shield she bought for $10 is the work of Benevenuto Cellini was strengthened tonight by a letter from one of the foremost Italian connoisseurs on metal work.

He wrote that, from photographs, the shield appeared to be the work of "an artist whose skill was certainly not less than that of Cellini."

Miss MacDougall said that the letter, written by Senatore Adolfo Venturi, from Rome, had strengthened her belief so that she would send the shield to Europe for authentication.

Within a day or so, she said, she would go to Washington to arrange for the shipment of the shield, of such great potential value that it is removed from a bank vault only on rare occasions.

Ohio Strikers Gassed in Riot As Bullets Fly

Hundreds Return After All-Day Siege; Scores Trapped in Shop.

By the United Press.

Barberton, Ohio, Nov. 20.—A rifle crackled and bullets whined over the heads of strikers as rioting flared anew at the strike-ridden Ohio Insulator Co. plant tonight.

The unknown sniper succeeded in shooting out a huge searchlight on top the factory building. Under cover of the resulting darkness, a wave of pickets and sympathizers, including youths of high school age out for the excitement, stormed the plant, breaking windows with a shower of stones.

As the rioters rushed the plant, guards stationed on top the building dropped tear gas bombs. These had little effect, however, and the pickets continued to hurl stones until several hundred windows were broken.

Unions Pledge Support.

Earlier in the evening the strikers had withdrawn to attend a mass meeting at a local union hall. Representatives of other Barberton and Akron unions pledged their support in the strike, which started nine weeks ago over demands for a 20 per cent wage increase and union recognition. Some went so far as to promise to quit their jobs in order to go on the picket lines if necessary.

During the meeting, Sheriff James Flower, of Summit County, whose 50 deputized company-hired guards fought 300 strikers all day, arose and pleaded for peaceful picketing. He was immediately hooted down and the meeting broke up in disorder when no one was able to find Mayor Earl Davis, who had issued an anti-rioting proclamation earlier in the day.

After breaking most of the windows in the plant, the greater part of the crowd withdrew, called to another mass meeting. The purpose of the second meeting, it was understood, was to formulate some definite plan to cope with the situation.

Battle Throughout Day.

Violence flared earlier today when company officials announced the plant would be reopened after nine weeks of idleness. Three hundred pickets assembled in an effort to restrain 75 employes from returning to work.

Sheriff Flower assured the pickets that nothing could be gained by violence. As he held the crowd's attention, a cavalcade of 17 automobiles loaded with employes

Italian Army Beaten Back At Hill Pass

Many Slain in Fighting; 'No Land for Peace,' Selassie Says.

New Franco-British Step for Settlement Due Late This Week.

The Italo-Ethiopian War.

From the southern front, reports came to Addis Ababa that the Ethiopians had won decisively in two engagements, but had suffered heavy losses.

Italy's northern army anticipated counteroffensive and was stiffening its defenses.

Haile Selassie, in strong language, served notice on the League that Ethiopia will not consider a settlement that would permit Mussolini to "reap the reward of his crime."

At London it was reported a new move for settlement of the war in Africa will be undertaken late this week in Paris by French and British experts.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 20.—Slashing Ethiopian victories at the cost of hundreds of casualties were reported tonight from the southern battle front while Emperor Haile Selassie personally urged on the defenders of his ancient empire.

The successful ambuscade of a train of 72 Italian trucks, carrying Somali warriors and munitions, was described in unofficial reports from Harar.

May Be Same Battle.

More than 150 Somalis were killed or wounded, while Ethiopian casualties were estimated in excess of 300. The battle, south of Sasa Baneh on the left bank of the river Fafan, was waged without quarter.

Several Italian officers were wounded, but escaped, and 53 of the trucks were believed captured, the Harar dispatches stated.

At the same time it was reliably reported 1,000 of the empire's crack marksmen, under Fitaurari (Commander) Bakala Ayela, had halted an Italian push in an important pass in the Radowa Hills, inflicting heavy losses.

These hills are about 50 miles southeast of Sasa Baneh, to the east of the River Fafan, and about 175 miles southeast of Jijiga, key Ethiopian city of the south. Because of the similarity of the locale of the two reported battles, the reports possibly refer to the same engagement.

The "Conquering Lion of Judah," who left the capital by airplane yesterday for an unannounced destination, was reported to have passed through Harar by automobile, en route to Diredawa, on the Franco-Ethiopian Railway.

His movements were closely guarded, but it was believed he has inspected the headquarters of Ras Massibu, Ethiopian commander on the southern front, and had visited hospitals at Jijiga.

Selassie Serves Notice.

Geneva, Nov. 20 (AP).—Ethiopia served Notice on the League of Nations today she will make no peace that would permit Italy "to reap the reward of its crime."

Answering Italy's November 11 note to the powers, an Ethiopian note flatly refused to entertain any proposal for settlement of the war that might be based on territorial gains by the Fascist armies, and added:

"With the help of Almighty God, the Ethiopian government and people will fight to the death, no matter what may be the cost and however long the war may last, to escape this savage domination."

Japan, Wavering, Halts Plan to Divide China, Curbs Military Chiefs

2 Provinces' Heads Disavow Autonomy

Wang, Out of Hospital, Expected to Resign at Nanking.

By the United Press.

Tientsin (Thursday), Nov. 21.—The Japanese government officially has informed the Central Chinese government in Nanking that "all Japanese military officials in China have been ordered to abstain from any drastic or unusual action," Chinese leaders said today.

The first official Japanese assurances were received November 10 and were confirmed in last night's conversation between Japanese Ambassador Akira Ariyoshi and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in Nanking, according to Chinese information.

The Chinese said that Ariyoshi told Chiang that Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, chief political agent of the Japanese army in China, never had any authority to negotiate under conditions in north China. They believed Gen. Doihara shortly may return to Manchukuo and that the whole scheme for declaration of an autonomous north China state will be dropped for the present.

Japanese military leaders would not comment on the report, but foreign observers thought it was too early to predict the autonomy movement has been dropped.

Delay Reported Asked.

It was rumored here that advisers of Emperor Hirohito in Tokyo had counseled delay until a formula can be worked out which will cause a less unfavorable repercussion in Chinese and world opinion.

Events moved rapidly overnight. They included:

1. Leading Chinese figures heretofore believed participating in the separatist movement suddenly disavowed it. Governors Shang Chen, of Hopei Province, and Han Fu-Chu, of Shantung, intimated through subordinates that they had decided not to participate in any separatist movement now. Han Fu-Chu telegraphed Nanking from his seat in Tsinan-Fu that he was unable to go to the national capital "because of important business", and indicated also that he will not come here to consult Japanese military leaders. His decision apparently was to sit tight and await developments—jumping to the winning side as soon as the course of events becomes more apparent. Shang Chen's attitude was similar. He telegraphed from his seat in Paoting-Fu that he had "caught cold and entered a hospital"—an old excuse of Chinese war lords when they wish to evade an embarrassing situation.

Wang Leaves Hospital.

2. In Nanking Japanese Ambassador Akira Ariyoshi had a three-hour conversation with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Central government dictator, which he described as "very satisfactory." A spokesman for Chiang, on the other hand, said the dictator told Ariyoshi that "in event of unexpected developments, the Central government will take appropriate measures." This was presumed to mean that Chiang threatened armed resistance.

3. Wang Ching-Wei, Nanking foreign minister who was wounded by an assassin November 1, left his hospital and entrained suddenly for Shanghai. In view of his alleged pro-Japanese attitude it was doubted that he would remain in the government. His policies have been severely criticized in the Kuomintang in Nanking.

4. The official government news agency in Nanking repudiated its earlier versions of Gen Chiang's speech before the Kuomintang congress announcing a program of nonresistance to the North China movement and gave out a corrected version asserting that Chiang really announced his determination to preserve the nation.

5. Everybody concerned suddenly repudiated their earlier statements that the Japanese army, under direction of Maj. Gen. Kenji Doi-

Lord Jellicoe Dies in London; British Hero of Jutland Battle

Chill at Armistice Rites Fatal to Conqueror of Kaiser's Fleet.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 20.—Lord Jellicoe, 76, British admiral who commanded the biggest fleet in the history of the world against Germany in the battle of Jutland, died today.

By coincidence, the immediate cause of his death was an illness contracted during the recent Armistice Day celebration at the Cenotaph here. His illness was not announced until November 17, when a bulletin said the earl had contracted a chill and would be forced to cancel his engagements for three weeks.

Although one lung was affected by the chill, as late as this morning his condition was reported satisfactory. He died at 6:30 p. m. in his home in Kensington, surrounded by members of his family, including Lady Jellicoe.

The earl, whose long and distinguished naval career was climaxed by the gigantic battle of Jutland, became a viscount in 1918 and the title of Earl Jellicoe of Scapa was conferred upon him in 1925.

His only son, the 17-year-old Viscount Brocas of Southampton, succeeds to the title of Earl Jellicoe.

Lord Jellicoe was the commander of the greatest fleet the world has known in the greatest naval engagement since the days of sail. He led the British at the Battle of Jutland, fought May 31, 1916, between the British grand fleet and the German high seas fleet. Jellicoe had

Chest Expected To Exceed Goal Of $1,877,900

Drive Ends With Gifts Totaling $1,701,354 in Last Minutes.

Washington's Community Chest drive ended last night with gifts totaling $1,701,354.72 and last-minute donations expected to exceed the $1,877,900 basic goal.

While the campaign was officially concluded, an informal "clean-up" by the 5,500 volunteer solicitors will continue several days. As this year's goal was substantially more than last year leaders were enthusiastic over the showing to date and the prospects of ultimate success.

Even without including pledges signed after last night's rally opened in the Willard Hotel the grand total represented 90.59 per cent of the minimum objective.

Workers Congratulated.

There was a possibility that the returns yet to be received would not only close the gap of the minimum goal remaining, but would make a dent in the 20 per cent, or about $400,000, additional sought for direct relief over and above the sum needed to finance normal activities of the 65 participating agencies.

Dr. William McClellan, general campaign chairman, congratulated the workers on their achievement.

Numerous other key men in the movement praised the solicitors on their accomplishments.

He particularly complimented the publicity advisory board, consisting of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Washington Herald; Eugene Meyer, The Washington Post; Arthur Newmyer, Washington Times; Lowell Mellett, Washington News; Carter

Austria Seeks Hapsburg Rule, Swears by Otto

Leaders at Vienna Rally Announce Publicly for Return of King.

By the United Press.

Vienna, Nov. 20.—The Austrian government tonight emerged publicly in favor of restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy, when Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, vice chancellor and "strong man" of the republic, participated in a huge mass meeting to swear allegiance to Prince Otto.

Starhemberg stood at attention with the Royalists while Legitimists swore fidelity to the crown and saluted the Hapsburg colors of black and gold, and the Austrian royal flag.

Guards Favor Hapsburgs.

Starhemberg's presence at the meeting was particularly significant in view of rumors he hoped to utilize his command of the powerful Heimwehr (Home Guard) to establish himself as monarch.

The majority of the Heimwehr are believed Legitimists—that is, they want a Hapsburg restoration, not a new royal line—and apparently Starhemberg has decided to abandon his personal ambitions for the purple.

Leaders of the Hapsburg rally sent a telegram to Otto, hoping for his early reappearance to claim the throne, vacant since Charles I abdicated November 12, 1918, in the post-war ferment.

Place Hope in Otto.

The vice chancellor and power behind Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's cabinet was one of the honor guests. The rally was held in Vienna's largest hall on the occasion of Otto's twenty-third birthday. Otto is in exile at Castle Steenockerzeel, Belgium, with the former Empress Zita, his mother.

'The Stinger's' Widow Rushed Here for Wilson Murder Quiz

Police Seize Her in New York, Hoping She May Be Able to Tell Who Hired Killers to 'Eliminate' Mickey McDonald.

Mrs. Frances Cugino, 23-year-old widow of "Tony the Stinger" Cugino, wholesale murderer who hanged himself in jail last September was in custody of police here last night.

Arrested yesterday in the Staten Island, N. Y., courthouse, she was brought to Washington as a possible witness in the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, recently announced that "Tony the Stinger" Cugino fired the shotgun which brought down Wilson just after he had delivered a morning paper at the Takoma Park, Md., home of Edward (Mickey) McDonald, a local gambler.

Cugino used to say that the dark-eyed girl brought here last night was the only one he ever loved. Police are working on the theory that he may have bragged to her about his murderous exploits.

She will be taken before the Montgomery County grand jury in January in the hope that she not only will be able to name members of the gang that ambushed Wilson, thinking he was Mickey McDonald, but tell who hired the killers.

Police say that a "big shot" gambler, worried by McDonald's invasion of his territory with a "numbers" racket, put up a large sum to have him "eliminated."

Four men are now being held as suspects in the killing, which caused a furore that resulted in a Congressional investigation.

Mrs. Cugino, the second woman arrested in connection with the case, arrived at Union Station last night at 9:05 o'clock.

She was in custody of Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman, members of the special Wilson squad.

Fearful that an attempt would be made by gangsters to silence the girl, the officers declined to reveal her whereabouts. Earlier it was

Roosevelt, on Trip to Georgia, Seeks Billion Slash in Budget

President Roosevelt last night left Washington for Warm Springs, Ga., to be absent from the Capital until December 10. Before returning to the city the President will visit Chicago for an address to the Farm Bureau Federation and will receive a degree from Notre Dame University at South Bend, Ind.

Significance also is attached to a "home-coming" celebration being planned in his honor at Atlanta on November 29. Mr. Roosevelt's address on that occasion is expected to have a marked political tinge and is regarded in some quarters as the opening of his re-election campaign in the South.

Included in the President's personal party on the trip to Warm Springs was his assistant secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre; Capt. Ross T. McIntire, U. S. N., White House physician; his personal secretaries, Miss Margurite LeHand and Miss Grace Tully, and several other aids. The party will reach the Georgia medical resort late today.

Mr. Roosevelt took with him voluminous data concerning the budget for the next fiscal year, which must be ready for Congress by January 3. He indicated that much of his time at Warm Springs would be devoted to considering ways and means of reducing the total budget figures. Early next week he will confer on this subject with Chairman James P. Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee, and Daniel Bell, acting director of the budget.

The budget problem is the most

'400' Drops Countess Barbara, Puts All Roosevelts on Roster

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—Gotham's 1936 Social Register—the goal of the upper social strata—has "dropped" the former Barbara Hutton, now Countess von Haugwitz-Reventlow of Denmark.

The name of the Woolworth heiress, who early this year divorced the late Prince Alexis Mdivani, appeared in the 1935 edition.

She has been abroad since shortly after her last marriage, a possible explanation for her omission.

The name of James Roosevelt, son of the President, dropped this year by the Boston social register, appears. So does his brother Elliott, omitted in the 1935 edition, presumably because he was a principal in a divorce suit at the time of publication.

"The President and Mrs. Roosevelt," as they are listed, included for the first time their White House telephone number—Washington, D. C., National 1414.

Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, principals in the custody fight over little Gloria Vanderbilt, continue to be listed.

Revival Needs Are Now Past, Engineers Told

Berry Denies Conference Next Month Seeks to Restore NRA.

Business and labor leaders are in fairly general agreement that no further "emergency" legislation is desired, Maj. George L. Berry, coordinator for industrial co-operation, said last night.

He made the statement in a speech before the Washington Society of Engineers, in which he explained the purpose of the conference of industrial and labor leaders which he has called for December 9.

"I am in no way and no form whatsoever attempting to revive NRA," Berry said.

Policies Favored.

He added that while replies to his invitations to attend the conference indicated no further emergency legislation is desired, "I do find a widespread belief that the fundamental policies of maintaining fair competitive and labor standards are sound and desirable."

Berry also told the engineers that he questioned "whether voluntary trade alliances and voluntary codes will be strong enough to drive out cut-throat competition and banish the sweatshop operator and employer of child labor from the business scene."

The speaker assured his listeners, who included a radio audience, that the Government had no plan to offer and that "industry and labor can write their own ticket."

Asks Honest Plan.

"All I am asking these groups is to meet together, honestly and seriously seeking to formulate some platform to aid many of industry's present difficulties," he said.

"If the conferees honestly agree that nothing should be done at present, I expect them to report that fact to me.

"If legislation should be agreed upon by a majority of the council, it naturally will be proposed to the Congress.

"If management and labor agree only on some fundamental principles for stabilization of industry and solution of its problem, I shall have accomplished what I set out to do."

Concluding, he said:

"Industry must organize to tackle effectively the problems of unemployment, of an unbalanced budget, on an increasing national debt, and of rising taxes."

Business generally is keeping a watchful eye on the preliminaries of the conference, which Berry himself said has been described as everything from a revival meeting for the defunct NRA to a scheme to deliver industry bodily to the American Federation of Labor."

To Outline Program.

One of the most important meetings in which the forthcoming conference will be discussed will be that of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York December 4 and 5. Most of the Nation's leading industrialists are expected to attend the sessions at which a business program will be outlined before the conference and prior to the convening of Congress.

Robert L. Lund, chairman of the board of the association, in announcing plans for the meeting, said:

"Serious problems face industry and the country during the coming year, not the least of which is the proposal that another NRA program in a different guise be inflicted upon the people.

"The hope of everyone is that nothing will be done which might interfere with the advances toward recovery which we are now making, and that no new attempts at bureaucratic control will be permitted to interfere with re-employment in private industry of the jobless."

One of the most important committee reports to be discussed at the convention is one on Government relation to industry, by a committee headed by James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Co., New Haven, Conn. Other subjects will include Government finance and taxation, social security and Government competition with private enterprise.

Fears New Move

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Clifton L. Bardo, president of the American Association of Manufacturers, tonight said it was his belief that the business-labor conference scheduled at Washington in December would "attempt to institute industrial ideas which failed under the NRA."

"I willingly admit that some manufacturing groups at the meeting will try to agree on working hours and wages," Bardo said over the telephone. "I agree that co-operation is needed, but our group is not interested in 'new' NRA legislation.

"Personally, I am afraid that I will be unable to attend, according to present plans, but I think our organization will be present, at least in a 'listening-in' role."

Jury Fails to Return Miner Death Indictment

Pell City, Ala., Nov. 20 (AP).—The second St. Clair County grand jury to investigate the killing of a union miner in strike disorders near White's Chapel, October 25, reported today it had no indictments to return.

The second investigation was ordered by Gov. Bibb Graves after a first grand jury had returned only one indictment in the alleged ambush slaying of Virgil Thomas and the wounding of six of his companions in a march of striking miners on the nonunion workers of the Agmar mine of the Alabama Fuel & Iron Co. The indictment charged second degree murder against John Rich, a nonunion worker.

Ominous Note From Michigan: Townsend Man Swamps All In Race For Congress.

By Raymond Clapper

AN ominous thing has just happened in Michigan. It foreshadows the rise of the Townsend plan as a political issue and tends to confirm the conviction of many that this question is destined to become more troublesome than the bonus.

Five gentlemen entered the Republican primaries held this week in the Third Michigan District, which embraces Battle Creek and Kalamazoo. They were seeking the Republican nomination for Congress in an election to be held December 17, filling a vacancy caused by death. The district has been Republican for years, but that is not the point.

The significant thing is what happened to the one candidate out of the five who declared forthrightly for the Townsend plan. Dr. Townsend went into the district in person and spoke for this candidate, Verner W. Main, a Battle Creek lawyer. The other four candidates ducked. In varying degrees they said they were for workable old-age pensions. But, as for the Townsendites, there was no half-way position. Only one candidate committed himself to the Townsend plan itself and he was singled out for their support.

When the votes of 167 out of the 197 precincts in the district had been counted, the Townsend candidate, Main, stood with a total vote greater than that of his four opponents combined. He had 10,082 against a combined vote of 8,957, split four ways. This is less than half the vote which the late Republican incumbent received in 1934. But there it is—a Townsend majority which was run up for the purpose of putting the fear of God into candidates for office everywhere.

Dr. Townsend and his managers are copying the Anti-Saloon League tactics which put over national prohibition by going into the backwoods primaries to nominate and elect pledged candidates. They have grasped the fundamental principle of pressure politics, which means that a strong, aggressive minority which knows what it wants can, piece by piece, build up a bloc in Congress which will in time become dominant.

The East is scarcely aware of the power of the Townsend movement in the West. About a year ago it made considerable noise in Congress. Senators and Representatives were deluged with petitions. A small group of Representatives gave lip-service to the Townsend plan. But practically no one in Congress took it seriously. Leaders decided to fell the elderly Dr. Townsend with one blow and they let him appear before the House Ways and Means Committee, where he was riddled with slugs and left for dead. After that the Townsend plan was forgotton in Washington.

But Dr. Townsend finally struggled to his feet and left Washington. He went back to the people who elect the Congress. Now the Townsend groups are the most powerful organized body of voters in some Western States. They have "invited" prospective candidates to appear at their meetings. When Dr. Townsend arrives in a community, a leading political figure is "invited" to introduce him. That was how Senator Borah was hooked into the movement in Boise. He has been explaining ever since that he is not for the Townsend plan as it stands. The movement is stronger than ever. It has not only the old folks but the grown children who see in the proposal to give their aged parents $200 a month each a means of not only taking the old folks off of their backs, but of perhaps living off of the pensioned parents.

The significant thing is that even with the better times which are so widely heralded, the Townsend movement grows in force. Many doubt if the complete return of prosperity will damage it, one reason being that large employers now set a low age ceiling. Often it is difficult for a man of 40 to get a factory job. Therefore, a number of persons feel that no matter how good business is, there will be no jobs for them.

Freak movements always have blown up eventually. But there is no way of knowing how long the course of the Townsend movement will run. And while it is on, no amount of argument, no attack on its economics makes much of a dent. At the recent national convention of the plan, Dr. Townsend's portraits sold for 50 cents apiece. He is already being canonized as the old folks' saint. The Administration's social security plan seems puny in its benefits compared with those Dr. Townsend holds out. So it has had almost no effect at all in sapping the forces of the good doctor of Long Beach, Calif.

Political parade: Something may be doing on the retirement of Postmaster General Farley to take charge of the Roosevelt re-election campaign soon after he returns from the Pacific Coast early in December. No one seems to have nailed down the appointment as his successor in the Cabinet. Frank Walker, often mentioned, is not the sure bet that many have thought. Neither is Joseph P. Kennedy, retired chairman of the SEC, whom many have regarded as the next in line. . . . Herbert Hoover's attacks on the New Deal won't be answered by President Roosevelt—directly. However, you will find some of them answered indirectly. Mr. Hoover suggested in his New York speech that the Federal Government ought to get out of the relief business. Two days later Mr. Roosevelt told the mayors' conference that the Government would not get out of the relief business and let people starve. . . Mr. Roosevelt probably will attempt to sell the Canadian trade treaty to the country when he addresses the National Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago, December 9. The Administration is being cautious about bragging too much until Mackenzie King has had a chance to sell his people on the treaty. Indiscreet talk on the American side might have embarrassing kick-backs across the border. . . . Repubicans have given up all idea of nominating a conservative Democrat as Vice President, but when Republican National Chairman Fletcher named his finance committee, its chairman turned out to be William B. Bell, president of the American Cynamid Co., the boss of young Lewis Douglas, who resigned as director of the budget in protest against the Roosevelt fiscal policies . . . President Roosevelt has called a conference on prevention of accidents. It will consider prevention of land, air and sea accidents. Apparently no thought is being given to prevention of political accidents.

It was the last engagement Mr. Roosevelt had before leaving for Georgia.

Cabinet Heads See Prosperity In Canada Pact

Wallace in Press Message to Farmers Foresees Many Benefits.

By Robert C. Albright.

Cabinet heads of two departments yesterday rushed to the defense of the Canadian trade agreement, in what developed into an Administration broadside against Republican tariff policies, replete with recriminations and invectives.

Placing responsibility for trade breakdown on the Hawley-Smoot tariff act of 1930, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace labeled sponsors of that measure "enemies of agriculture," and charged they are leading the attack on the new tariff rates.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper contented himself with a statement laudatory of the Canadian pact, asserting there "perhaps has never been and may never be a trade agreement entered into between two countries where the benefits are so thoroughly mutual as related to business, to agriculture and to labor in the two countries."

Hoover Thrusts Cited.

Obviously replying to sharp thrusts by former President Herbert Hoover and others, criticism of the new imposts, Secretary Wallace mentioned no names, but declared "special groups" are attemping to "arouse" the farmers against agricultural features of the Canadian-American understanding.

He referred to the reciprocal tariff treaty—never approved by Canada—reached under former President Taft in 1911, contrasting the rates on farm commodities, and declaring the present agreement not "one-tenth as daring."

"I want to stress vigorously that there is no loss to agriculture as a whole in this pact, and no significant loss so far as I know to any particular branch of agriculture," said Wallace.

He declared efforts are being made to "stir up" the farmers.

Breakdown Charged.

"They are in the main being led by the same enemies of agriculture who, in the guise of helping agriculture, brought about the enactment of the Hawley-Smoot tariff law, with its exorbitant industrial rates," he added.

"It was the Smoot-Hawley tariff in considerable measure that brought about the breakdown in foreign trade which caused the depression of 1930 into world-wide aspects.

"True friends of agriculture would do best to check on statements of those who, by their actions in the past, have proven to be enemies of agriculture."

Wallace insisted this was "not a partisan statement."

The double-barrelled defense of the agreement came as George Peek, chairman of the Export-Import Bank and special adviser to the President on foreign trade, went forward with an analysis of the effects of the pact, and Republicans continued their critical assault.

"Word" to Farmers.

The Secretary of Agriculture devoted his entire weekly press conference to a discussion of the agreement, volunteering that he wanted to make a statement to farmers about the Canadian pact. He parried reporters' questions as to alleged sectional disadvantages with claims that gains in "the general welfare" would offset any losses. He finally granted that lowering of duties "may have an infinitesimal effect on seed potatoes."

Wallace made it a point to refer to dairy farmers, specificially mentioned by Hoover among the "hundreds of thousands" who the former President said would suffer hardships.

"The question," he said, "is whether dairymen would rather have exclusive possession of a poor market, or share in the possession of a good market caused by bettering the general welfare."

Hoover Criticism.

Hoover also had referred to the agreement as "hasty economic planning without full consideration of the consequences."

"This was not entered into hastily," he declared. "We had 20 to 30 men working on it for ten months, and they gave careful consideration to every branch of agriculture. I want to give farmers my opinion that this will not harm them, that instead it will benefit them, and both nations will profit mutually."

The National Grange, meeting in Sacramento on Monday, had demanded rescinding of the agreement, Wallace was asked if his phrase, "enemies of agriculture," was intended to apply to farm leaders. He replied that it was not, adding that "farm leaders, like anybody else," must be stirred up by agitation.

He hinted that further scaling down in trade imposts might be considered, however, when the present agreement nears the end of its three-year life.

"We have to move slowly in economic matters to avoid jerks" he said.

Wallace claimed Canada's 58 per cent cut in hog duties would enable American pigs to move into Canada to bolster supplies insufficient to meet England's demands.

Roper, at another press conference, said the agreement "should be helpful in stimulating the flow of trade between the two countries, and I visualize great mutual benefits."

He pointed out that sales to Canada, ranging from $800,000,000 to $900,000,000 for several years prior to 1930, contrasted with $300,000,000 in the last year.

Townsend Backer Wins in Michigan

Beats 4 in Race for G.O.P. House Nomination.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 20 (AP).—Verner W. Main, Battle Creek attorney who advocated the Townsend old age pension plan in his campaign, held the Republican nomination for Representative in Congress from the Third Michigan District today.

Nearly complete returns from yesterday's primary gave him a majority in a field of five. Howard Cavanagh, also a Battle Creek attorney, was unopposed for the Democratic nomination. The special election will be held December 17, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Representative Henry M. Kimball, Republican, of Kalamazoo. The district has been Republican since 1898.

Main said he would work for passage of the McGroarty (Townsend plan) bill is he were elected. He attributed his victory to his espousal of the plan and the help of Dr. Townsend, who spoke here and in Battle Creek, but pointed out that he also advocated immediate payment of veterans' adjusted compensation certificates, a balanced budget, sound money and neutrality.

Advisory Board Is Optimistic On U. S. Trade

Federal Reserve Officials to Consult With Business Men Today.

By the Associated Press.

A generally optimistic report on business conditions was brought to Washington from many sections of the country yesterday by the Federal Advisory Council.

Its members—one businessman from each Federal Reserve district—were said unofficially to have reported a continuation of the factors which they hailed at their last meeting two months ago.

They will meet with the Federal Reserve Board today to fulfill their function of assisting and advising it on problems peculiar to the localities they represent and of fitting together into a correlated whole their reports on local business conditions.

Yesterday's informal session was understood to have brought a brief discussion of mounting excess bank reserves and the continuing flood of imported gold, generally along the line of methods of controlling any inflationary credit boom that might be developed from them.

3 Billion Excess Reserves.

Despite Administration efforts toward a general expansion of credit, reserves today were more than $3,000,000,000 in excess of requirements. This situation is regarded by some as dangerous, but the board itself is known to believe it can be controlled without difficulty through machinery provided by recent banking legislation.

Excess reserves are simply idle bank capital. Many economists estimate that they are capable of multiplication into loans at a ratio of one to ten, or, in other words, that the $3,000,000,000 may become $30,000,000,000 in credit should a runaway boom develop.

The board, however, has authority to increase the amount of required reserves—virtually to double them—and is said to feel that in this way, or by imposing stricter margin requirements for stock exchange transactions or by open market operations the brakes may be applied.

The reserves, now at an all-time peak, have been pushed constantly upward in recent months by a steady stream of gold imports caused by unsettled conditions in Europe and the disturbed peace outlook there. In the last two months gold imports have exceeded $550,000,000.

The members of the advisory council, which has no executive authority in the reserve system, and the reserve districts they represent are: Walter W. Smith, St. Louis, president; Howard A. Loeb, Philadelphia, vice president; Thomas M. Steele, Boston; James H. Perkins, New York; Charles M. Gohen, Richmond; H. Lane Young, Atlanta; Solomon A. Smith, Chicago; Theodore Wold, Minneapolis; W. T. Kemper, Kansas City; Joseph H. Frost, Dallas; M. A. Arnold, San Francisco, and Arthur E. Braun, Cleveland.

Nebraska House Cites Counsel for Contempt

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 20 (AP).—The Nebraska House of Representatives today cited Franz S. Radke, chief counsel of the State bank receivership division, for contempt and ordered him to appear to defend himself tomorrow afternoon.

It marked the first time in Nebraska history a State officer has been so cited by the Legislature, local historians said.

A formal complaint, drawn by the attorney general at the House's request, charged that Radke, by filing a $50,000 libel suit yesterday against the House banking committee, attempted to influence and intimidate the committee and all other members of the House acting on banking matters.

Radke, out of the city on business all day, was unavailable for service of the summons when the House acted shortly after 5 p. m. (C. S. T.), but officials expected him to appear at 2 p. m. Thursday.

McCarl Bars WPA From Prison Goods

By the Associated Press.

Purchase of prison-made goods with work relief funds was prohibited yesterday by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl.

The decision came on a 60-cent prison-made brush bought by the War Department.

It paralleled an order from the procurement division of the Treasury, which held the work relief fund could not be used to purchase such goods, since it was intended "to provide relief, work relief and to increase employment by providing for useful projects."

Van Sweringen Tells of Stock Buying Policy

Testifies at Hearing on Missouri-Pacific Bankruptcy Case.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 20.—O. P. Van Sweringen, master of rail empire, told in a brisk, quiet voice today how he attempted to build up a strong capital structure for the Missouri-Pacific Railroad.

Van Sweringen testified at a Deposition Hearing conducted by Special Master Marion C. Early. The hearing was ordered by Judge Charles B. Faris, of the U. S. Circuit Court at St. Louis, where bankruptcy proceedings intended to effect a reorganization of the railroad are pending.

Van Sweringen, under questioning by Fred L. English, co-counsel for trustees of the railroad, progressed easily through the complex transactions attending the purchase of 11,300 shares of Mop common, and 23,500 shares of Mop preferred, which counsel for the trustees said brought heavy losses to the railroad.

Bought for $2,817,805.

Van Sweringen denied the allegation of counsel for the trustees that the purchases were made without authority. The purchases were through the Missouri-Pacific Transportation Co., a wholly owned subsidiary. The purchase price for the stock came to $2,817,805.

Van Sweringen said the purchase was discussed at a meeting of the railroad's executive committee in Cleveland on October 18, 1930. He said L. W. Baldwin, president of the road, and all the Cleveland members of the committee excepting Alva Bradley were present at the meeting.

"It was our policy always to bring all matters before the boards and committees," the M. O. P. chairman said.

Had No Memoranda.

Van Sweringen said he could not say how completely he explained the plan or what details he told the executive committee. He had no memoranda concerning the meeting because he was not in the habit "generally of building up a lot of memoranda," he said.

He did testify, however, that he had a memorandum showing that one of the things he wanted to discuss with Baldwin on his arrival here was the purchase plan.

English questioned him about each of the committee members individually, but Van Sweringen was unable to say how detailed an explanation of the plan he had given them. Asked why the Missouri-Pacific Transportatoion Co. was used to make the purchases, the capitalist said:

"It was more convenient as I see it now, for the transportation company to do it because the boards were closer."

Van Sweringen said the discussion with the committee members, who also constituted the board of the transportation company, were "without undue detail" because "they were all men of large caliber. They could get it with few words."

The railroad magnate said he did not believe J. P. Morgan & Co. were told of the purchase of MOP'S common and preferred stock. He was asked if "Morgan & Co. ever got after you for having done that?"

"No," he answered. "That wouldn't have been within their province. Our relation to Morgan & Co. was a straightforward one to sell them securities they wanted to buy."

Hunger Reveals Holdup.

St. Louis, Nov. 20 (U.P.)—Unemployed and attired in thin overalls, Arthur Steele, 26, accosted a policeman and confessed the 7-year-old robbery of a restaurant. Skeptical, the policeman escorted Steele to the restaurant, where the proprietor accommodatingly identified him. Steele faces a prison sentence of from five years to life.

As School Board Ordered 'Red' Textbooks Probe

He gave notice that, unless Congress did so of its own volition, he would urge the Board of Education to solicit clarification formally.

"I want to clear up my own position in all this," Quinn continued. "I'll say this—that if Congress does repeal the rider, I shall vote that the teachers should be permitted to teach factually about communism and to tell all about it."

Benjamin L. Gaskins, colored member of the board, remarked:

"I'm for the law as it is and I think it's a good law."

The other board members did not comment.

Five letters from Representatives in Congress were received by the board yesterday commenting on the members' understanding of the rider.

Will M. Whittington, of Mississippi, urged no books advocating communistic doctrine be permitted to be used in the District schools.

Representative Fred H. Hildebrandt, of South Dakota, held such a bar would be "both tyrannical and absurd."

With the board room crowded, four members of the Federation of Citizens Associations appeared to attack the school textbooks on the Red issue.

Citizens' Complaints.

His complaints included:

That in the ninth grade Harold Rugg's "An Introduction to American Civilization," textbook, says nature alone is responsible for the high American standard of living, omitting any reference to constitutional guarantees of freedom.

That in the same grade Rugg's "Changing Civilizations in the Modern World" praises Russian Communism for its "supposed accomplishments," quoting this paragraph:

"There are other important things besides wages and costs to be considered in judging the standard of living of a people. Schools, medical help and amusements are among these. In Russia all these things are free to factory workers and peasants."

That in the tenth grade Carl L. Becker's "Modern History" has a section entitled "Soviet Russia: How Nicolai Lenin Made Good the Prophecies of Karl Marx by Establishing the 'Dictatorship of the Proletariat,'" some of which says:

"Fortunately for the Bolshevists, Lenin possessed what many ideal dreamers lack—a hard, practical mind which understood that ideals cannot be realized by ignoring facts;" and

"The Russian revolution aims to effect a complete transformation of society—the establishment of a Communist economic regime and the acceptance of a Communist philosophy of life. This is why it is, of all the events of our time, the most interesting and perhaps the most important."

Readings Quoted.

Sullivan then quoted a list of readings recommended in Becker's book:

"W. H. Chamberlin: 'Soviet Russia.'

"B. Russell: 'Bolshevism: Practice and Theory.'

"H. N. Brailsford: 'How the Soviets Work.'

"A. Wicksteed: 'Life under the Soviets.'

"S. Nearing: 'Glimpses of the Soviet Republic.'

"M. Farbman: 'After Lenin.'

"V. Marcu: 'Lenin.'

"L. Trotzky: 'My Life.'

"Each and every one of these selected readings so recommended is by a well-known communistic writer and is in advocacy of communism," Sullivan asserted, charging also that Becker himself was "shown by the records of the Congressional Library to be a well-known communistic writer, with many such books to his credit or discredit."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president, said she would appoint the committee "within a day or two" to go into the question.

Moley Scores Trade Treaty's 'Furtiveness'

HitsSecrecy in Negotiation; Favored-Nation Policy Also Attacked.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—Raymond Moley, writing editorially in the current issue of "Today," deplores what he calls "the furtive character of the negotiations" in the Canadian-United States trade treaty, and critizes the Administration for refusing to depart from an unconditional favored-nation policy in effecting reciprocal treaties.

"The furtive character of the negotiations for reciprocal treaties by the United States (of which the Canadian negotiations are the latest example)," he says, "does not fit well with the liberal protestations of an Administration devoted to the masses of the people.

"Presumably, in a democratic Government, matters affecting great numbers of citizens should be considered and discussed openly.

"Not only was the Canadian treaty consummated without knowledge on the part of the people at large, but its details were kept secret even from persons high in the Administration for days after the treaty had been agreed upon. This secrecy is one of the most unhappy aspects of our reciprocal treaty policy as it is now being administered.

"The other deplorable aspect of our reciprocal treaty policy is that in carrying it out we refuse to depart from the unconditional most-favored-nation principle.

"Reciprocal treaties, if we adhere to the unconditional most-favored-nation principle, are not reciprocal treaties at all; they are general tariff reductions.

"So, conceivably, while we are standing at the open door of our inn warmly welcoming a paying guest, a horde of nondescript deadheads may be sliding in through the cellar doorway."

British Miners Vote Nation-Wide Strike

London, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—The executive committee of the Mine Workers Federation announced tonight that the organization voted overwhelmingly for a nation-wide strike in a recent poll, threatening Great Britain with the greatest industrial crisis since the 1926 general strike.

On November 11, 12 and 13, at every working pithead in the United Kingdom, coal miners voted their executive authority to call a nation-wide strike to enforce their demands for a national wage agreement and an increase of two shillings daily. The vote was 409,351 to 29,215.

Court's 'Advice' To Guide AAA, Davis Declares

Program Will Go Ahead, Administrator Tells Educators Here.

By the Associated Press.

The "advice we expect the Supreme Court to give us" was described yesterday by AAA Administrator Chester Davis as a guide for future farm policies.

The high tribunal will hear arguments next month on the constitutionality of the New Deal's farm act.

Speaking on the same program before the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities, Secretary Wallace insisted that the Farm Administration was proceeding in conformity with the "spirit and heart of the Constitution" to serve the general welfare.

Davis declared that "I have full confidence that agricultural adjustment will go forward, but we can't fix a hard-and-fast course until we get the advice we expect the Supreme Court to give us within a few months."

He forecast a gradual change in some aspects of the AAA.

"Every one of us must recognize," Davis said, "that an unspanned gap separates the point the farmers of the Nation have reached in their adjustment program and the goals and ideals set forth here today. No one man has any very clear conception of the precise step that must be taken in order that broad adjustments undertaken on a national scale may fit wisely and accurately the specifications for a region or an individual farm."

Wallace said that governmental powers in the past have been used for benefit of special groups, such as utilities, and that "it is increasingly necessary to study the situation from the standpoint of the general welfare."

Officers of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities elected today are:

J. G. Litman, dean of agriculture, Rutgers University, president; Alfred Atkinson, president, Montana State College, vice president; Thomas P. Cooper, dean of agriculture, University of Kentucky, secretary-treasurer for seventh year.

R. D. Hetzel, president of the Pennsylvania State College, was elected a member of the executive committee to serve until 1940, and was named chairman of the committee.

Egyptians Call Strike Against British Today

Violence Feared as Students and Lawyers 'Mourn' Victims of Riots.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Nov. 20.—Protesting Egyptians tonight proclaimed "a day of mourning" tomorrow for victims of anti-British riots and called on "all workers" to join a one-day, peaceful strike in the face of impressive maneuvers by the British armada off Alexandria.

The strike, called by students and lawyers, was expected to spread to provincial towns. Bakers and newspaper workers were reported ready to participate, the vernacular newspapers protesting in part against the refusal of Nessim Pasha to resign as premier.

Police took extraordinary precautions to prevent disorders and the interior ministry warned that any unauthorized assemblies would be dispersed, by force, if necessary.

Sponsors Make Threats.

Students were reported to have visited many business houses, threatening violence unless they closed for the day.

Authorities countered by ordering all shops closed on several principal streets, including the Kasr-el-Nil, Cairo's "Park avenue," to prevent possible clashes between students and shopkeepers who might defy their ultimatum.

It was believed most of the native shopkeepers would close voluntarily.

There was no official call for a general strike and the WAFD, leading Nationalist Party, issued no sort of orders, but the students hoped to get all workers to participate. The lawyers planned to parade in their legal gowns.

Universities Closed.

Authorities, learning the students were arming, ordered universities to remain closed another week. They were to have reopened Saturday.

The council of students, meanwhile, decided to send a delegation to Geneva to plead the Nationalist cause against British control of Egypt, and the Watani, a Nationalist Party more extreme than the Wafdist group, termed tomorrow's Alexandria naval maneuvers "insulting to national feeling at this time of national mourning."

Approximately 60 warships, including aircraft carriers, are to participate in the maneuvers, with massed aerial units overhead.

U. S. Is Concerned By Chinese Crisis

By the Associated Press.

American officials, while cautiously silent, looked with misgivings last night on north China events, which many interpreted as the fourth definite phase of Japanese penetration on the Asiatic mainland.

Secretary Hull declined to make any specific comment on the imminent creation of an autonomous North China under Japanese protection. But he told his press conference, in response to requests for his views on the Sino-Japanese situation, that this Government was studying carefully all international developments.

Later in the day, Hull conferred with President Roosevelt.

Some high Administration leaders privately did not conceal their concern. It was understood to be based on fears that the rich North China market might eventually be substantially closed to all foreign interests except Japan, as in the case of the Japanese-sponsored empire of Manchukuo to the north.

Pope Names 20 New Cardinals And Two American Bishops

College of 69 Will Lack One Member With Elevations; Frenchmen, Spaniards Included in Vatican Nominations.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Nov. 20—Twenty new cardinals and two new American bishops were named today by Pope Pius.

The cardinals, none of whom was an American, will become princes of the church at a secret consistory December 16. They include 15 Italians, two Frenchmen, one Argentinean, one Czechoslovakian and one Spaniard.

When they are elevated the College of Cardinals will number 69, one less than the limit fixed by Vatican law.

The list of cardinals follow:

Archbishop Luigi Copello, Buenos Aires; Mgr. Carlo Salotti, secretary of the Propaganda Fide; Mgr. Nicola Canali, assessor of the sacred congregation holy office; Mgr. Camillo Caccia Dominioni, papal master of ceremonies; Frederico Tedeschini, nuncio to Spain; Mgr. Luigi Maglione, nuncio to France; Mgr. Emanuele Suhard, Archbishop of Rheims; Mgr. Enrico Baudrillart, president of the Catholic Institute of Paris; Mgr. Dominic Jorio, secretary of sacrament of the Roman congregation, and Mgr. Massimo Massimi, dean of the rota tribunal.

Also Mgr. Enrico Sibilia, nuncio to Austria; Mgr. Francesco Marmaggi, nuncio to Poland; Archbishop Isidoro Goma y Tomas, of Toledo, Spain; Archbishop Carlo Kaspar, of Praha; Mgr. Carlo Cremonsie, papal almsgiver; Mgr. Vincento la Puma, assessor to the holy congregation, and Mgr. Frederico Cattani Adori, secretary of the supreme tribunal signatur.

Also Mgr. Dominico Mariani, treasurer of the papa ministries; Mgr. Ignazio Gabriele Tappouni and the Rev. Father Pietro Boetto, Jesuit priest.

Pope Pius selected the Most Rev. Joseph C. Plagens, recently Auxiliary Bishop of Detroit, as Bishop of the Diocese of Marquette, Saut Ste. Marie, Mich.

The Most Rev. Gerad P. O'Hara, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia since 1929, was named Bishop of the Sayannah Diocese, which comprises the State of Georgia.

Publication of the list of cardinals in the official Vatican organ had not been generally expected today.

Italy retained a majority among the cardinals, as has been customary. There will be 39 Italians and 30 foreigners.

It was expected a public consistory would be held three days after the secret consistory for investiture of the new cardinals.

King of Greece To Model Rule After Britain's

George Plans to Reign Above Party Strife; Visits Il Duce.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 20.—King George II of Greece intends to use King George V of England as his political model when he takes over his throne, a member of his suite disclosed tonight. The restored monarch came to Rome to confer with Premier Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel of Italy on Greco-Italian friendship.

He intends to place himself beyond the ebb and flow of parliamentary or party strife, and started off on this line today. When two deputies of the Kondylis Royalist Party arrived to announce themselves as a welcoming committee to accompany him to Greece, the King dismissed them and told them he would see them at home.

Despite his admiration for the British King, George of Greece has not forgotten his gratitude toward Mussolini. Members of his party recalled how the Italian dictator had slashed through red tape to give every assistance to Royalists desiring an honorable burial for his father, King Constantine, in this country.

Hence Fascists felt the Greek monarch would not carry his imitation of King George of England far enough to exclude the possibility of a distatorship in Greece.

Informed sources said his conference with Il Duce would embrace the question of British influence in Greece, a sector of influence which Mussolini has always desired to reserve for himself.

King Victor Emmanuel's special train will carry George II to Brindisi Friday, where he will board a Greek cruiser for Athens.

Fear of World's Reaction Held Cause of Delay in Penetration.

hara, was forcing the creation of the new state.

6. The Nanking war ministry announced that the visit of Gen. Sun Cheh-Yuan, commander of the Chinese forces in the Peiping area, to Tientsin was solely to visit his sick mother.

7. Sung's spokesman in Peiping, Hsiao Cheng-Ying, said that any declaration of the autonomous regime would have to be delayed a week because of a sudden shift in the Sino-Japanese negotiations to Nanking. He said Chiang Kai-Shek had telegraphed an order to discontinue the negotiations in Peiping and Tientsin with Gen. Doihara, "who appeared very angry at the interference." Hsiao told Doihara that "if you want autonomy you must force Nanking to instruct me."

"Will Consider Appeal."

8. In Tokyo the foreign office still thought eventual North China autonomy probable but suggested a loose connection with Nanking similar to that which now exists between Nanking and Canton. "In event the new North China government requests Japan's assistance, Japan will consider the appeal and decide it on its merits," the spokesman said.

Speculation on what really was happening in the secret negotiations taking place in a dozen cities included these reports:

That representatives of the great foreign powers, including Britain, had advised Chiang Kai-Shek to stand firm and prevent separation of the North China provinces because of their belief that any new North China regime would be controlled absolutely by Japan.

That advisers of Emperor Hirohito feared an eventual world economic boycott of Japan, similar to that now being enforced against Italy through the League of Nations, if the Japanese army openly forces creation of an autonomous North China state.

Chinese in Peiping and Tientsin believed there was no doubt that the autonomous state will come. They recalled that the Japanese army was delayed in its occupation of Jehol because of opposition in Tokyo and abroad, but that the occupation eventually was carried out. They thought the army again is prepared to act in defiance of everybody, if necessary.

Italians Dig In For Ethiopians' Counter-Drive

By the Associated Press.

Makale, Ethiopia, Nov. 20.—Italy's strongly entrenched northern army prepared tonight for an Ethiopian counter-attack.

Headquarters officers said Ethiopian warriors are massing in southern Tigre Province and may attack at any time.

Another official report said a strong column of the enemy was marching on Selicot, only 8 miles from Makale.

This movement, an Italian spokesman said, was being made despite the terrific defeat administered to Ethiopians by an airplane squadron two days ago in a valley 10 miles south of Selicot. He said apparently the advancing force is not the one routed by the Fascist bombers.

15,000 Near Dolo.

Headquarters officers here said from 15,000 to 20,000 Ethiopians are concentrating south of the Dolo-Makale line. The attack is anticipated from Buia, in the Antolo sector, or from Socota Selloa.

The officers explained they believed the Ethiopians intended to attack because they placed an exaggerated value upon numbers. A large group of the enemy was reported to be massing at Tzellemti, in the Sembien area, which faces the Italian right flank.

Flying columns from Hauzien, it was learned tonight, encountered strong groups of the enemy in the Tembien zone on Sunday and Monday, and dispersed them with heavy losses.

On the southern front, cloudbursts were reported to be impeding the Italian operations.

Seyoum on Right.

Forces of Ras Seyoum, northern Ethiopian commander, are in the Tehbien region, on the right flank of native Italian troops occupying Makale.

Scouting planes which flew over the scene of Monday's fierce battle said only a few Ethiopians could be seen and that the bodies of hundreds of warriors had been moved from the battlefield. It was estimated that 2,000 Ethiopians were killed.

Columns still are seeking Ras Seyoum and are penetrating deeper into the mountainous region.

Expressions of doubt greeted a report of some aviators participating in Monday's fight that they saw Seyoum fall from a horse, apparently wounded, when he attempted to flee the field of battle.

Three Italian fliers who made a forced landing in a mountain valley after the flight were rescued today by a suadron of Italian native troops. They were injured slightly in the crash.

Race Origin Sought In Japanese Islands

Honolulu, Nov. 20 (AP).—The Japanese mandated islands in the Western Pacific, obtained from Germany after the World War, will be explored by a scientific expedition to study the origin of the Polynesian race, Dr. Herbert Gregory, director of the Bishop Museum here, announced today.

The museum will finance the expedition. The personnel, exclusively Japanese, will leave Japan early next month.

ment's support of restoration, Schuschnigg tomorrow will attend a religious ceremony in memory of the late Emperor Francis Josef at the Church of St. Stephen.

It is reported Otto's adherents have obtained the approval of France and Italy for his return as king. Britain is reported prepared to assent, as well as Czechoslovakia, on Austria's northern border.

Czechoslovakia reportedly believes Otto's return the surest guarantee of Austrian independence from Germany, which has been a threat to the republic since Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's rise to power.

Baron Friedrich von Weisner, for many years Otto's representative in Austria, told the United Press: "The presence of a member of the cabinet, Vice Chancellor von Starhemberg, shows that restoration is approved by the government."

Otto Observes Birthday

Brussels, Nov. 20 (AP).—Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, celebrated his twenty-third birthday at Steenockerzeel Castle, seat of his exile, today. Messages of congratulation poured in from all over the world.

The entire imperial family attended an early morning mass and a continuous train of friends called on the young Hapsburg, heir legitimate, during the day.

No member of the Belgian royal family, however, was among the callers.

Tonight the village priest was among the many dignitaries and intimates who attended a dinner at the castle.

Utility Refuses Registration; To Test Law

Constitutionality of Holding Act Challenged by Philadelphia Concern.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—The United Gas Improvement Co., oldest utility holding concern in the country, today decided not to register with the Securities Exchange Commission under the utility holding company act, and challenged the constitutionality of the law in a Federal court suit.

The complaint, asking for an injunction to restrain the commission from enforcing the act on the ground it is illegal, was filed in United States District Court a few hours after the board of directors, meeting in special session, announced the company's defiance of the registration requirement.

Concerted Fight Seen.

By the action, the U. G. I., an $800,000,000 concern with holdings in many States, was believed to be assuming leadership in a concerted fight of holding companies against the registration. This belief was strengthened by the fact that Philip H. Gadsden, a vice president of United Gas Improvement, is chairman of the Public Utilities Executives Committee, which was in the forefront of the opposition to the bill when it was before the last session of Congress.

Today's suit differed from the recent action in the Maryland District Federal Court, in which the act was declared unconstitutional. In that proceeding, U. G. I. explained, trustees for a holding company questioned the constitutionality in connection with a reorganization of the company they were representing.

The U. G. I. suit is a direct attack on the validity of the law.

Named as defendants are the members of SEC, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Postmaster General James A. Farley, the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and the postmaster of Philadelphia.

Held Unconstitutional.

The suit held the act unconstitutional on several grounds, among which were:

That Congress, by the legislation, exceeds the powers conferred upon it by article 1, section 8 of the Constitution, in that it attempts to regulate matters which are not interstate commerce. The company contends it is not engaged in interstate commerce.

The Congress has invaded the field of State control over intrastate matters, and has vested that jurisdiction in a Federal commission to the exclusion of the State.

That the act is arbitrary, unreasonable and in conflict with the fifth amendment in that it deprives the company and its subsidiaries of the right to use the mails and other instruments of interstate commerce and deprives them of "liberty and property with out due process of law."

That Congress unlawfully delegates legislative powers to the SEC in violation of article 1 of the Constitution.

That it violates the eighth amendment of the Constitution by imposing excessive fines and penalties.

The decision to decline to register was made on the advice of the company's legal staff.

military barbarity and oppression and attempts to buy traitors for cash, and charged the invading armies have bombarded defenseless towns, killing women and children.

It further contended the Italians were attempting to prevent loss of Italian lives and establish Italian domination in Ethiopia "by launching against the Ethiopian people those who are its brothers by race and color."

The Fascists were accused of falsehood and deception by representing the war as one for the liberation of an oppressed people who "are alleged to be hailing the invader with enthusiasm."

Instead, the note asserted, only one chieftain, Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa, Emperor Haile Selassie's son-in-law, "has yielded to bribery," and "up to the present, Ethiopia has not defended its territory against the invader."

As a consequence, the note added, "the civil population has provisionally been obliged to submit to the enemy's yoke and the chiefs have negotiated with the enemy."

However, the protest continued, reports from Ethiopian military commanders have indicated that inhabitants of occupied territory, which was described as "only a very small part of Ethiopia," have risen against the invaders because of alleged atrocities committed against nuns and other native women. The note also ridiculed Italy's claims to having liberated 15,000 slaves.

Britain, France Plan New Step To Gain Peace

Experts Confer at Paris This Week; English Are Skeptical.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Nov. 20.—A new search for a settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war will be undertaken late this week by French and British foreign office African experts, it became known tonight.

Maurice Peterson, chief of the African division of the British foreign office, will leave for Paris tomorrow to confer with Rene Saint-Quentin, who holds a corresponding position at the Quai d'Orsay.

The attempt is being made at the suggestion of Premier Pierre Laval of France, it was understood, and British authorities are skeptical of progress.

British Dubious.

British sources believe any formula proposed will fail for the same reason as previous attempts—because it gives Italy too much to be acceptable to the League of Nations or too little to be agreeable to Italy.

An impression is growing that Premier Benito Mussolini expects to hold Italy's military gains in any peace settlement which is debated. The British view thus far steadfastly has opposed any such concession to Italian militarism.

Emperor Haile Selassie's message to the League of Nations today indicated Ethiopia would continue to fight any attempt by Italy to retain Ethiopian territory, whether blessed by the League or not.

The conference between Peterson and Saint-Quentin apparently is the outgrowth of recent conferences between Laval and British Ambassador Sir George Clerk. They discussed the general Italo-Ethiopian situation this afternoon and afterward the British Embassy spokesman in Paris said: "Press reports of renewed negotiations are entirely premature."

Would Wait for Italy.

The British were said to feel Italy should take the initiative in any new peace efforts, either directly or through the French.

The French official spokesman said: "France welcomes the new Franco-British conversations in which experts will prepare a detailed plan for solution of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, after which the Italians will join.

"Reports that the conversations are already agreed upon, accredited to British sources, are described by the French as premature, but in accordance with the French desire for a peaceful settlement."

Tropical Eye Disease Afflicts Italian Troops

London, Nov. 20 (AP).—Reuter's (British) News Agency reports from the Dodecanese Islands, via Athens, say 300 Italians suffering from eye trouble—some of them blind—were landed at Carpathos from East Africa. The islands are under strict military surveillance by sea and air, the dispatches state.

Exchange telegraph dispatches from Athens said great military activity was in evidence in the islands, especially at Rhodes, where gun shelters and emplacements have been constructed. Italians have installed a wireless station at Carpathos and constructed an airdrome, installing antiaircraft guns and buoys for the guidance of seaplanes.

Ward of Dictator Dies in Train Leap

Adopted Daughter of Turkish Official Dies.

By the Associated Press.

Amiens, France, Nov. 20.—The 16-year-old adopted daughter of Kemal Ataturk, president and virtual dictator of Turkey, died today after she jumped or fell from the window of an express train while en route from London to Paris.

Police made an official identification in the Amiens hospital in the presence of representatives of the Turkish embassy. The prefect of the Somme department, representing the French government, placed a wreath beside the body.

(A London dispatch said the girl, Mlle. Zehra, whose last name was Aylin before her adoption, attended an exclusive girl's finishing school in London's North Side.

(The Turkish leader's foster daughter was studying English preparatory to taking examinations to enter Oxford, friends said.)

U. S. Delegates Busy on Naval Parley Policy

Swanson Names 3 Advisers for London Sessions Starting Dec. 6.

By the Associated Press.

Hurried conferences to chart a course of action for the forthcoming London naval conference were begun yesterday by America's three-man delegation.

In the hands of Norman H. Davis, Undersecretary William Phillips of the State Department, and Admiral William H. Standley rested the task of perfecting in detail, preliminary to talks with other sea powers, the policies prescribed by President Roosevelt.

To newsmen on Tuesday the Chief Executive said that navies should not cost more than they do now. Mr. Roosevelt discussed the international situation with Secretary Hull yesterday.

Although no definite announcement has been made, the delegation was expected to sail November 27 or 29 for the London parley opening December 6. They will continue the deliberations begun yesterday while crossing the Atlantic.

Naval Advisers Chosen.

Some technical experts will accompany the delegates. Others were expected to follow soon after, probably December 3.

Secretary Swanson announced yesterday that three naval officers had been selected to accompany the delegation as advisers on technical questions. They are Capt. Royal E. Ingersoll, now in the Bureau of Naval Operations; Commander Roscoe E. Schuirmann, recently detached from command of Destroyer Division 19, and Lieut. Arthur D. Ayrault, jr., aid to Standley, the chief of naval operations.

Schuirmann served as a technical adviser at the preliminary naval conservations attended by Standley and Davis last year.

The State Department withheld announcement of a complete list of assistants but let it be known that Noel Field, special assistant on naval matters, would accompany the delegation.

The naval officers named are considered especially qualified in gunnery, ordnance and communications, as well as general naval construction and operation.

Swanson declined to discuss with newsmen the stand to be taken by the American delegation in an effort to secure a limitations agreement among signatories of the Washington and London treaties when those pacts expire next year.

He confined himself to an observation that the American delegation would strive for "the best treaty advantageous to the United States." Swanson said existing naval policies, involving the determination of the United States to build to the full strength authorized by the Washington and London treaties remained unchanged.

Life on Other Worlds Held More Likely

Star Census Shows Greater Chances of Life in Distant Universes.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 20.—An astronomical star census, by a new method reported to the National Academy of Sciences today, increases the theoretical mathematical chances of life like that on earth existing elsewhere in the universe.

Today's report does not discuss the possibilities of life, but shows a larger number of stars the size of our sun than previously identified. Its new star census fits directly into the statistics by which astronomers have been calculating the chances that there might be other suns with planet families and evolutions just like ours.

"Accident" of Life Possible.

Such an "accident" was once considered remote. Lately the almost incredible multiplication in the estimated number of stars has caused astronomers to consider the "accident" of exact similarity more possible. Today's census shows the existence of an increased number of specific places where there might be duplication.

The star count was made on "dwarf" and "giant" stars by P. Van de Camp and A. N. Vyssotsky, of the Leander McCormick Observatory, University of Virginia.

Two Kinds of Stars.

Broadly speaking, there are two kinds of stars, dwarfs and giants. Our sun is a dwarf. Most of the stars visible to the naked eye are giants.

As the dwarfs are faint at great distances, it has been impossible to distinguish in most cases between dwarfs lying nearer to earth and giants so distant that they are equally faint.

The Leander McCormick astronomers met the problem of distinguishing between them by applying the same reasoning a person would distinguish between fireflies near him and flashlights carried by men far away.

The nearby flies would appear to be moving faster than the lights carried by the distant men.

So among the dim stars, those which move rapidly across the sky are assumed to be nearby dwarfs, while equally faint stars moving very slowly are thought to be distant giants.

Universe Growing.

More evidence that the universe is expanding in all directions as far as telescopes can see was presented in a report from M. L. Humason, of the Mount Wilson Observatory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The spectroscope shows whether the distant nebulae, each of which is an aggregation of stars like the milky way, are moving toward the earth or away from it. Twenty-five new movements of nebulae have been found in the past year and a half, Dr. Humason's report stated, each moving away from the earth at a velocity increasing uniformly at the rate of nearly 350 miles a second.

Wife Shooter Paroled; Slays Her and Gets Life

Beattyville, Ky., Nov. 20 (AP).—Jesse Norman, who had served a term in the penitentiary for wounding his wife, was convicted by a jury today of killing her and given a life sentence.

The first sentence—two years—was given in 1934, but Norman was paroled, and last June the couple was divorced, Mrs. Norman going to Owsley County. A few days later he reported she had shot and wounded him and then killed herself. He repeated that statement on the stand at his present trial. The Commonwealth, however, contended he had induced her to return to his home and shot her.

5 Confess Looting Armory, U. S. Says

By the Associated Press.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, said yesterday five men had confessed to the robbery last Saturday night of the National Guard Armory at Berryville, Va.

The five—Oakley Sealock, Charles Ritter, James Duke, George Buzzard and John Rinker—were arrested Monday, Hoover disclosed, after investigation by Federal agents, Virginia State police and police of Winchester, Va., had located most of the 14 service automatics and ammunition in the vicinity of Berryville.

None of the five is a known criminal, but the bureau is checking their fingerprints for possible criminal records. The five are in the Berryville Jail, charged with stealing Federal property.

Najera in Mexico.

Mexico City, Nov. 20 (AP).—Dr. Fernando Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador to the United States, arrived by train tonight from Washington.

He said he came principally for a vacation.

said she would be taken to the Women's Bureau, but there was no record of her being there last night. not take her to the Woman's Bureau.

Marie McKeever, sweetheart of the murderous tri-State gang, is the other woman witness in the Wilson case. She is being held in an out-of-town jail, but police won't say where. They don't want her molested, either.

"Tony the Stinger" was regarded as the most dangerous killer in the Eastern underworld. His specialty was killing other gangsters.

He was arrested in New York last September in connection with the murder of a Philadelphia policeman.

Questioned by New York detectives, Tony blandly confessed to nine killings.

"There may have been more," he said, "but that's all I can remember."

In his cell Tony made a noose of his necktie and hanged himself.

Mrs. Cugino was in the Staten Island court yesterday awaiting arraignment on a charge of violating the Sullivan firearms act when she was arrested by Truscott and Hartman.

The girl, who had been married only three months when she became a widow, appeared willing to come here.

Besides the four suspects, a fifth is held as a material witness in the Wilson case. The five are:

Albert S. Sutton, described as a lieutenant of the gambler who wanted Mickey McDonald slain. He is in the District Jail, having been moved there from the Lorton Reformatory.

Secret Police Enlarged.

Rome, Nov. 20 (AP).—Italy's secret police will have 8,000,000 lire (about $640,000) more to work with than they expected during the coming year. A decree today authorized this extra amount "for political investigation." Well-informed sources interpreted it as another proof that Mussolini will carry his battle against sanctions to the limit.

RYE AND WATER
now the style!

America is developing a taste of its own. You'll hear folks who know ask for "rye-and-water."

Possibly some smart club served it first, and smart guests picked it up. Today it is everywhere.

And here's another tip. Rye-and-water fanciers are finding that Old Overholt is the real rye whiskey for their favorite mix. Aged 4½ years in wood and bottled in bond under U. S. Government supervision, this Pennsylvania straight rye whiskey has its own inimitable taste to turn plain rye-and-water into nectar.

Old Overholt's rich grainy flavor stands alone. Once you know it, no one can ever fool you on it. Try Old Overholt and find out for yourself what 125 years of leisurely and old-fashioned experience really mean when concentrated on real rye whiskey.

Norris Assured Of Election Aid By Democrats

Leaders of Both Parties in Nebraska Hail Guffey's Announcement.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris, Republican independent, was assured yesterday of national Democratic organization support if he decides to run for re-election next year in Nebraska.

Chairman Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, which directs the drive for election of Democratic senatorial candidates, would support Norris in Nebraska, if he runs.

President Roosevelt recently indorsed Norris strongly.

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 20 (AP).—Republican and Democratic leaders of Nebraska hailed with approval today the assurance of national Democratic organization support for Senator George W. Norris, if he decides to run for re-election next year.

"Norris is a Democrat, should be supported by the Democrats and should not be called a Republican," S. R. McKelvie, a Republican leader and former member of the Hoover farm board, asserted as he made plans for a campaign to defeat Norris.

Governor Jubilant.

Nebraska's Democratic Governor, R. L. Cochran, greeted the announcement jubilantly and said he would "be glad to join in any movement to keep Norris in the Senate as long as he lives."

J. C. Quigley, of Valentine, chairman of the State Democratic committee, said he would welcome Norris as "a powerful addition" to his party. He asserted, however, he was "only a hired hand of the State committee" when asked if he would lend his support to the Nebraska Senator next year, should he file as a Republican.

Norris always has run on the Republican ticket.

Confirmed as Democrat.

McKelvie, a Lincoln publisher and former Governor, said the announcement by Chairman Guffey, of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, that it is ready to support Norris was "confirmation" of a belief he has had for many years "that Norris is a Democrat."

However, C. A. Sorensen, Lincoln attorney and former State attorney general, who directed Norris' campaign in 1930, said he thought the Senator should seek office as an Independent next year without alliance with either the Democratic or Republican Party.

The Senator today was en route to Washington.

Miss A. L. Sargent Dead in California

Public school officials learned yesterday of the death of a former principal of the Harrison School, Miss Anna L. Sargent, who died at her home in Santa Monica, Calif., November 6.

Miss Sargent served in the District school system for 48 years, starting in 1873 as a teacher of a first-grade class that was being conducted in a rented house on H street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northwest. By 1895, she had risen to the principalship of Harrison School. She retired in 1921 and went to California shortly after.

An adopted daughter, Mrs. Gordon K. Smith, of Santa Monica, survives.

G. A. M. Kelchner, Of Rockville, Dies

George A. M. Kelchner, 53, of Rockville, Md., died yesterday at the Montgomery County General Hospital. He was an employe of the State racing commission. He was removed to the hospital Saturday after suffering an apoplectic stroke.

Mr. Kelchner was a veteran of the Spanish-American War. He is survived by a son, John Leo Kelchner, and three sisters, Mrs. E. L. Royer, of Rockville; Mrs. Annie Bowman, of Memphis, and Mrs. Daisy Robey, of White Plains, Md.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Colonial funeral home at Rockville. Burial will be in the Rockville Union Cemetery.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

There's a reason why so many people find reducing slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So why not lose fat the easy way—without starvation diets or back-breaking, bending and rolling exercises? Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists. Advt.

President Leaves on Holiday

important one now facing the President. On its solution depends in good part the strength of the Republicans against him next year. Their chief issue is that of Federal "spending, waste and extravagance." The President is confronted, however, by the demands of the regular departments of government, such as War and Navy, for increased appropriations. Consequently any reductions achieved must be made in relief and recovery expenditures.

The aim is to keep the figure for these at least $1,000,000,000 under the budget for the current fiscal year. But at the same time the President has promised that Federal relief expenditures will be continued as long as anyone is in danger of starving. Relief rolls have not shown any appreciable decreases, despite the pick-up in industrial production.

President Roosevelt devoted his last day in Washington to a series of conferences with departmental chiefs, regarding foreign and domestic situations.

He talked at length with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and also with Assistant Secretaries of State Sumner Welles and R. Walton Moore, regarding foreign problems. He had a brief session with Governor Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, who reported on his trip to the American Bankers Association convention at New Orleans.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes were other visitors. The general relief and recovery situation was discussed, it was explained. J. David Stern, Philadelphia and New York publisher, also conferred with the President.

The President left his office unusually early in order to receive, in the White House proper, the new minister from Latvia, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis. After the customary formal exchange of greetings the President received Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and the other members of the Supreme Court for tea.

as chairman of the group a man a who might be called "the boss" of Lewis Douglas, former close personal friend of President Roosevelt and former Director of the Budget. Mr. Douglas resigned the latter post because of the Roosevelt spending policies.

Mr. Douglas is vice president of the American Cyanamid Co., of which Mr. Bell is president. Both have been outspoken critics of the New Deal. Although a Democrat, Mr. Douglas has been mentioned in some quarters as a possible Presidential nominee for the Republicans. But this has not been taken seriously in practical political circles.

Bell a New Deal Foe.

Mr. Bell, who started out life as a lawyer, has been head of the Cyanamid Co. since 1922. He also is president of the Manufacturing Chemists Association. Speaking at the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia last summer, he arraigned the New Deal for threatening the elimination of profits and striking at frugality, thus adding to the reluctance of business to undertake new projects and, in general, menacing recovery by retarding employment.

Charles B. Goodspeed was named vice chairman of the committee. He was named assistant treasurer of the national committee last June and since that time has aided George Getz, the party treasurer. Prior to that appointment he was the Republican money raiser for Illinois.

Strawn Also Named.

Other members of the finance committee are:

WALLACE M. ALEXANDER, San Francisco, chairman of the board, Alexander & Baldwin, Limited.

SEWELL L. AVERY, Chicago, president and chairman of board, Montgomery Ward & Co.

J. F. LINCOLN, Cleveland, president, Lincoln Electric Co.

EDWARD L. RYERSON, Chicago, president, Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, member of Yale Corporation.

HENRY D. SHARPE, Providence, R. I., treasurer, Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co.

ERNEST T. WEIR, Pittsburgh, chairman of board, National Steel Corporation.

Mr. Strawn is a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and a close friend of former President Herbert Hoover. Mr. Weir conducted a successful fight against the constitutionality of section 7(a), or the collective bargaining section of the NRA act.

In naming this committee, Mr. Fletcher pointed out that "most of them never before have participated actively in politics." He described them as "outstanding men of achievement, vitally concerned over the welfare of their country."

"Realizing that the American system is threatened and that the future of the country is seriously menaced," he continued, "they have agreed to put their shoulders to the wheel."

President Calls Country-Wide Safety Drive

BARRON G. COLLIER, New York, education.

FRED M. ROSSLAND, Newark, N. J., former secretary of the Governor's street and highway safety committee, co-operation with safety groups.

SENATOR WILLIAM GIBBS McADOO, California, president of the National Aeronautics Association, safety in the air.

WALTER PARKER, New Orleans, safety at sea.

DR. E. L. CORBETT, Milwaukee, executive secretary of the Milwaukee Safety Commission, drivers' training and law enforcement.

Labert St. Clair, transportation assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, will act as director of activities in charge of the conference program.

"On land and sea and in the air," Roper said, "accidents are, according to best estimates, killing annually in the United States over 100,000 persons and injuring more than 9,000,000."

Roper outlined steps that can be taken immediately:

1. Drafting of a plan under which the Commerce Department, co-operating with State and local agencies, can gather and disseminate accurate current statistics on fatal and non-fatal accidents.

2. Determining the chief causes of major past accidents and arranging for prompt information on future accidents.

3. Determining remedies for accidents and putting these remedies into effect quickly.

"Emphatically, the new organization should not seek to supplant any existing agency which is satisfactorily discharging its duties," Roper said, "but it should act as a national clearing house and counseling board, which will make the work of existing agencies more efficient."

Roper named uniform traffic regulations as the outstanding need in prevention of street and highway accidents.

"While the highway accident situation is overwhelmingly in the public eye," the Secretary continued, "other types of accidents will not be ignored by the group.

"It is estimated that during 1934, about 101,000 persons were fatally injured in the following types of accidents: Motor vehicle, 36,000; home, 34,500; public, 17,500, and occupational, 16,000.

"Recent ship disasters have demonstrated the need for safer conditions on the water.

"Marked advances have been made in making flying safer, but it is important that there be no laxity in air-accident prevention. For that reason a special sub-committee to handle safety in the air has been created."

Plenty To Discuss.

There is no lack of pressing problems to engage the attention of the advisory council of the Federal Reserve system, now in session here. Since the council last met, the volume of excess banking reserves has been further swollen by an influx of gold amounting to more than $560,000,000. The current Federal deficit meantime has increased from approximately $724,000,000 to $1,565,000,000.

Thus the basis for an inflationary expansion of credit is being rapidly broadened, while the deficit, the size of which constitutes the greatest source of danger to the currency and credit structure of the country, continues to mount. Under these circumstances it is surmised that the council will consider possible means of controlling the volume of excess reserves, at least to the extent of trying to offset the effect of current gold receipts.

However, if a credit expansion movement were to acquire headway, it is obvious that much more drastic control measures would have to be taken to protect the country against the inflationary potentialities of excess reserves already above $3,000,000,000. Instead of worrying about these vital problems of credit control there is an official tendency to urge the banks to be more liberal in extending long-term credits to borrowers. This strongly suggests that efforts to reduce the volume of excess reserves would be unwelcome to those who regard a measure of credit expansion as desirable.

The commercial banks may well hesitate before accepting advice to tie up their resources in illiquid long-term loans and mortgages. The profession is properly anxious to avoid any repetition of the disasters which overtook our banking system in the deflation years when bank portfolios were loaded down with "frozen" investments. The charge that business recovery is being retarded by the timidity or greed of bankers, moreover, does not hold water under present conditions. With deposits piling up and the banks complaining of a lack of outlets for idle funds, there is no doubt about their desire to lend against safe security. The longer this situation continues, the greater becomes the danger that they will be tempted into fostering an unsound type of credit expansion.

The foundation for a solid revival of bank lending must rest upon confidence, and that will be lacking so long as the Administration pursues a policy of drift, neither reducing the size of the budgetary deficit nor taking a decisive stand against unorthodox monetary and credit policies. It is to be hoped that the advisory council will take this occasion to state the case for budgetary balance and credit control, making it clear that removal of present causes of disquiet can alone encourage the banks to finance business expansion.

Chaotic Tax System.

President Roosevelt told the conference of mayors that late next winter he proposes to call a conference to study revision of our chaotic system of taxation. The major purpose is to assist in establishing lines of demarcation between different types of taxes and in deciding how they should be allocated among the Federal, State and local governments. The obstacles in the way of giving effect to any expert conclusions in this field are patent. Indeed, a great deal of the present confusion and overlapping of tax systems could have been avoided if there had been any easy way of securing co-operative action on the part of governmental taxing units.

However, each year brings increases in our tax burdens, and the search for sources of revenues not already pre-empted becomes more and more difficult. State, local and Federal governments are, as President Roosevelt says, "stepping on each other's toes" with a frequency that makes it imperative to take protective measures before long. For that reason the chances that constructive action may follow the deliberations of next winter seem better than they have been in the past. Furthermore, the Treasury has for over two years been carrying on special studies in taxation with the assistance of outside experts. It should now be in a position to outline tax reform measures that would produce more revenue and also bring order out of the existing chaos.

While changes no doubt would have to be made gradually, there would be fewer conflicts in the future, and greater incentive to correct past errors, if the country's numerous taxing units were to reach a general agreement in principle concerning the proper allocation of taxes.

Catch As Catch Can.

The "perfectly sound relationship" between national and local governments, which President Roosevelt says is being developed through the WPA, will bear scrutiny. If that relationship had been working smoothly, the Conference of Mayors would not have heard so much criticism about the centralization of relief efforts in Washington. Nor would the President himself have complained about the "red tape" involved in clearing all WPA projects through the Budget Bureau, the Comptroller General's office and the White House.

As a matter of fact, one of the chief deficiencies of the work relief program is the absence of a sound working relationship between the Federal Government and local agencies. The President is certainly right when he says that the thousands of WPA projects ought not to require his necessarily perfunctory signature and that local officials should be responsible for them. But the very nature of the projects included in this gigantic undertaking tends to create a bottle neck in Washington.

Recognizing the need of local planning for any successful program of public works, the President created the National Resources Committee, which in turn has encouraged the organization of planning boards in 46 States. Many of these organizations have long been in a position, as Secretary Ickes recently said, "to render immediate aid to administrative officials in formulating harmonious improvement programs." But in allocation of the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund their recommendations have been virtually ignored.

In part this is because the WPA laid down arbitrary restrictions with regard to outlays for wages and materials, thus excluding a large percentage of the projects in which the State planning agencies were most interested. As a result local authorities can not justly be held responsible for the type of projects that are being carried out within their jurisdictions. And Federal officials have found it impossible, as the President's remarks suggest, to exercise any appreciable discretion in the approval of projects. Swamped by an overwhelming number of relatively minor undertakings, their approval is inevitably undiscriminating.

Such a scattering of responsibility invariably leads to waste and inefficiency. The President expresses satisfaction that "the new work this year, so far as lasting usefulness is concerned, has been infinitely more successful, better planned and better carried out than it was under the old CWA program of 1933." Such a comparison damns the WPA with very faint praise. If real progress is to be made, current undertakings ought to be matched against the most constructive plans available, and not against the incredible blunders of the CWA.

"I believe," said Mr. Ickes recently, "that the catch-as-catch-can method, which ignores the necessity of national planning, is a thing of the past. It is a wasteful, futile and unscientific method which deserves oblivion." Nevertheless, the WPA continues to follow just that method, a fact which can not be obscured by Mr. Hopkins' emotional efforts to conceal the basic issue.

A Partisan Attack.

Herbert Hoover's address in New York last Saturday was a fine example of constructive criticism of Administration policy, not distorted by partisan bias or seriously marred by that overstatement which defeats its own purpose. It is the greater disappointment, therefore, that he should so soon descend from those heights to pass an obviously prejudiced and necessarily superficial judgment upon the Canadian trade treaty.

The statement that the treaty is "just another instance of this hasty economic planning without full consideration of consequences" does the former President no credit. Nor does he make any attempt to weigh anticipated benefits against possible losses, or to appraise the value of the agreement in the light of the controlling objective of expanding our foreign trade.

Charges of haste and heedlessness are richly deserved when applied to some of the emergency governmental agencies established by the Administration. They are without merit, however, when directed against the trade agreements section of the Department of State, as it has operated under the leadership of Secretary Hull. The department has followed a consistent course of action, with a well-defined goal in mind, guiding its course with great care and by expert deliberation. There has been throughout abundant opportunity for the groups affected by proposed changes in tariffs to present their complaints to the authorities. Of course no encouragement has been given to prolonged public debate regarding the terms of a trade treaty. That would merely have led to endless wrangles and a return to log-rolling methods which in the past have blocked all attempts at rational revision of tariff schedules.

The political consequences of our unsuccessful efforts to conclude a reciprocity agreement with Canada during the Taft Administration should serve as a warning against "playing politics" with the present treaty. A quarter of a century ago such tactics split the Republican party wide open and paved the way for the G. O. P. debacle of 1912. In the light of this experience, other factors aside, Republican spokesmen would do well to feel very sure of their ground before attacking the new Canadian pact with unsubstantiated generalities.

At the very least it would be rational to avoid sweeping and ineffective charges until George Peek has had time to conclude his comprehensive survey of the probable commercial effects of the new treaty. And there is certainly no reason to expect that the President's special adviser on foreign trade will refrain from disclosing any weaknesses in the program, from the American viewpoint, which microscopic examination can reveal to his critical eye.

A Challenge To Leadership.

President Roosevelt was well advised in his selection of a distinguished and experienced delegation to represent the United States at the London Naval Conference in December. The gravity of present world conditions calls for more than merely perfunctory compliance with the terms of existing treaties, requiring a naval conference this year.

It is true, of course, that the outlook for naval reduction is extremely dark. Both Europe and Asia are shaken by the aggressive policies of Italy and Japan. Great Britain, long a leader in the disarmament movement, has just vigorously indorsed a platform calling for "more adequate national defense." Germany is rebuilding her navy. Japan and the United States have seemingly made no progress toward breaking their deadlock over parity. When all these obstacles are thrown into the path of the naval conference, observers agree that the world would be extremely fortunate to arrest the growth of navies at their present levels.

Instead of minimizing the importance of the London conference, however, this outlook makes constructive action the more imperative. The United States would be negligent indeed if it should relinquish efforts for naval limitation because the difficulties appear, for the moment, to be insuperable. Notable changes have taken place in the relations of some countries and latent international forces have been brought into play even since the three-power conferences in London ended in disagreement last winter. It is impossible to determine in advance what effect these new elements may have upon the naval negotiations.

While the outlook for an agreement remains dark the results of failure to agree would be far darker. A breakdown of the London conference would mean an end of naval limitations. Bilateral races in the construction of war vessels would be almost an inevitable consequence. Every nation can afford to make concessions to avoid a situation that would be so conducive to catastrophe. It is the action taken to cope with almost insoluble problems that measures true statesmanship. No country could afford to treat this gathering lightly without at the same time confessing bankruptcy in leadership at a most critical period in world history.

Philippine Conscription.

As the first installment of the price the Philippine Commonwealth must pay for independence, President Quezon has announced a universal military service plan. During the next ten years 500,000 youths who have been taught the advantages of independence from their earliest childhood are to be put through the rigors of military training because the dream of their elders is coming true. Certainly that is not the most idyllic aspect of the new venture in nationhood launched at Manila last week.

Fortunately, President Quezon is cognizant of the shadow side of independence. "The willingness of the Filipinos to make any sacrifice necessary for defense is the test of whether they wish to be independent or not," he says. "If they are not prepared to sacrifice, then they ought to stop talking of independence." His realistic grasp of the problem is refreshing. The outlook for success of the Commonwealth, and the completely sovereign government to be set up in its place, would be far more optimistic if the masses of Filipino voters were as keenly aware of the difficulties confronting their country as is their President.

From the technical viewpoint the new Filipino army will have the enormous advantage of guidance by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff of the United States Army. On the financial side, however, the Filipinos will have to dig deeper into their own pockets to provide for their national defense. One-quarter of the annual budget, it is estimated, will go to military preparedness. If there is any hesitation over this cost on the part of the electorate or the legislature, reflection on the turmoil in other parts of the Far East is likely to create a sympathetic attitude toward the new army.

A miracle is something that couldn't happen but did.

Noncitizens In Germany.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Citizenship, by traditional concept, is a reciprocal arrangement, whereby the individual is protected in his liberties by the state, and in return shares the burdens of the state, especially taxes and military defense. In most democratic countries, aliens, though not qualified to vote, hold office or bear arms, have equal standing with citizens under the law.

Fascism goes against this fundamental of democracy. This is shown by the German government's decree, foreshadowed in a speech by Hitler two months ago, depriving the Jews of citizenship, of the right to vote or hold office, regulating their marriages and imposing various other restrictions, all applicable even to persons of only 25 per cent Jewish blood. The duties of citizenship, on the other hand, remain. Jews will still pay taxes and be subject to the Nazis' edicts. In time of national need, they will certainly be conscripted for military service.

Never before since ancient and medieval times, when citizenship was a right only of the aristocracy, has a nation placed a group of its native-born population in the status of aliens.

Persecution In Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to commend The Washington Post for the space it gave in the issue of November 19 to the article entitled "Persecution in Mexico" by its special correspondent, Paul V. Murray. This is very appropriate in view of the effort being made by the present regime in Mexico to boost its stock with the American people.

Let me strongly urge those who desire a better understanding of this matter to get a copy of the report by the "American Committee on Religious Rights and Minorities." This is a short pamphlet of only 15 pages, and can be obtained at the headquarters of the above committee at 70 Fifth avenue, New York.

This committee comments upon article 3 of the Mexican constitution having to do with education, as follows:

> Insofar as religious teaching in the primary and elementary schools is concerned, inspectors of the board of education investigate the conditions in the private and public schools to see to it that no religious teaching of any kind is given.

In other words, no religious teaching is permitted in private, primary and elementary schools, which is exactly contrary to the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the famous Oregon School case. This report also says:

> It can be definitely stated that it is the view among educators in Mexico that socialistic education in one form or another is ultimately intended to provide a materialistic and atheistic form of instruction for the youth in the primary and elementary schools.

In Mexico parents have no choice, and even though they disagree with the "materialistic and atheistic form of instruction," they cannot legally provide private schools unless these schools agree to promulgate the same teaching.

It is such travesties as these and many others absolutely contrary to the rights guaranteed by the United States Constitution in our own country that prompt our liberty loving people in their objections to any show of good will which will be interpreted as an approval of acts of tyranny and injustice indulged in as a matter of policy and principle by those in power in Mexico. No Qualification Here.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of the American debut of Roman Totenberg with the National Symphony Orchestra, you recently published a letter from "An Auditor," who wrote: "I turned with interest to the comments of the critics next day. Not one but cautiously put in some qualifying phrase, mostly that in time, and with maturity, great things could be expected of the player."

As one of the critics to whom the writer referred, I take most emphatic exception to that statement. My review did not contain a single qualifying phrase of the tenor alleged, nor did it in any way whatsoever intimate that Mr. Totenberg is immature in technique and artistry. RAY C. B. BROWN.

Above Detraction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who had knowledge of the events as they took place, I can and do subscribe to every word of Mr. Baker's letter. There is nothing that the critics of Woodrow Wilson, his acts and what he stood for, can say that can detract from the results of his unselfish work for all humanity.

Reactions To The Chest Campaign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the time the Community Chest campaign got under way I felt that certain controversial issues would arise from it, and the letters from "Federal Employe" and William McClellan, campaign chairman of the Chest, bear out that conviction.

Speaking as another anonymous "Federal Employe," as indeed I must, I should like to comment in turn on Mr. McClellan's letter. One afternoon—about two weeks ago—all the employes were summoned inside the main hall at the request of a superior official. We were told that we were to be addressed by various officials of the department and the Community Chest in connection with the campaign that was about to get under way. Effective speeches were delivered extolling the merits of the Community Chest drive and we were all urged to do our part toward putting it across. Several days thereafter the chief of my particular division began to approach the individual employes for their contributions.

Now here is where I disagree whole-heartedly with Mr. McClellan's assertion that the spirit of the campaign is completely voluntary. While one may quibble over the exact shades of meaning implied in the term coercion, I nevertheless feel that the methods employed in my department amounted to nothing less than that. We had never before, in all the time that I have been with this department—some nine months—been rounded up in such a wholesale fashion to be urged to contribute to a cause.

Certainly, a far more honest appraisal of the employes' feelings would have been attained by means of circulars explaining the work of the Chest, why we, as Government workers should contribute, etc., distributed individually. This method of appeal would really have revealed those who wished to contribute voluntarily and those who did not. As it was, the general impression was that we "would have" to contribute.

Coercion pure and simple, however, was involved in the method of soliciting contributions. In every former case calling for a collection in our office, a clerk or secretary was put in charge; in the case of the Chest drive, none other than the head of the division came around bearing the individual pledge cards. Just try and refuse the "boss," Mr. McClellan—if you have one. This notwithstanding his words to the effect that we needn't contribute if we felt we couldn't afford it. I know of no case where a contribution was not forthcoming.

ANOTHER FEDERAL EMPLOYE."
Washington, Nov. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe that a few observations on the origin and technique of the Community Chest drives may be of interest. I am frankly critical of all organized charity, for I believe that the emphasis put upon private charity is generally in direct ratio of lack of social justice. However, since the state does not demand social justice of the responsible parties, who but private individuals and organizations will care for the needy, the sick, the impecunious and others?

Look now at some facts and the American scene. Economically, the vast majority of American families have an annual income under $2,000 (if I remember correctly). In view of widespread unemployment, rising costs of living and the criterion of $5,000 annual family income for the average American standard of living, one can deduce that private charity should expect less in donations today rather than more. Though one has to admit there is greater need of giving assistance, particularly since the present Administration is seeking to ease out of the picture which is unfortunately just as distorted as when it came into office. This reverts back to my belief as to what creates the need of private charity.

As to methods of solicitation it is understandable how Mr. McClellan, a Chest enthusiast, can oversimplify and possibly fail to appreciate the various possible forms of real but subtle psychological pressure that are at work during a Chest drive.

I believe that most signers of pledges intend to carry them out if they can. But it is the personal selling talk of solicitors that breaks down the resistance of those who do but should not contribute for good reasons of their own. It is rather too much to get them to give money, to sign a pledge, and go to the further embarrassment of calling for a refund in part or whole. Very few, I believe, will ever go that far.

I would suggest as to means of raising Chest funds the following general plan: Set opening and ending dates; have the policy of using the least possible personal solicitation except where it is freely requested; instead, have pledges and collection boxes placed in convenient but at as inconspicuous locations as possible in buildings where a number of possible contributors work or live; let contributors come and go unobserved by employers and others during the drive when they make their first payment or turn in their pledges; advertise all details of the drive sufficiently long before it starts and give a chart of the suggested percentages for income brackets that are recommended by the Chest officials in order to make the drive successful; also, for those who cannot be reached in this manner, use mail solicitation and/or personal solicitation when the latter is requested or circumstances justify it in view of the announced policy in the newspapers. I mean by this roughly outlined scheme that the minimum of personal solicitation should be employed and the maximum of unhindered, unobservable, freely voluntary donations should be encouraged during the period of the drive.

The Post Impressionist

"Her Picture As She Was."

Post Office, Thursday.

NEW YORK is always up-to-date. In a little theatre on West Fifty-Third Street, Manhattan, it will soon be possible to see such films as "A Fool There Was," with Theda Bara for star—"Intolerance," by D. W. Griffith—"The Covered Wagon"—and "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Perhaps you have seen these pictures before. They're not quite new. Their original production-dates were, respectively, 1914, 1916, 1923 and 1930. One of the news-reels to be shown along with them is that of the inauguration of President McKinley, 1897.

But this is exactly why that little theatre is up-to-date. It is collecting, keeping, showing, and will soon "lend out," films that form a complete record of the motion-picture as an industry and films that it considers examples of the motion-picture as an artistic creation.

It started only a few months ago. The Museum of Modern Art had been prospering as a patron preserver of contemporary art—as a missionary thereof as well, for it sent traveling exhibitions all over the country. It gave John D. Rockefeller, jr., an inveterate film-enthusiast, the idea.

He is one of that growing group who consider the motion-picture a form of genuine art—and there is no denying its modernity. Why then, he asked himself, shouldn't there be a Museum of the Modern Art of the Motion-Picture?

He answered himself: "There's no reason why there shouldn't be."

Whereupon he asked himself: "What is the obvious organization to foster a Museum of the Modern Art of the Motion-Picture?"

And his reply came pat: "The general Museum of Modern Art."

His final query was addressed to that organization. Would it take on the motion-picture—if properly endowed for the task? Indeed the M. M. A. would.

So, in May, 1935, the Rockefeller Foundation made a grant to the Museum of Modern Art "for the purpose of establishing a department of motion-pictures, to be known as the Museum of Modern Art Film Library." It was to compile a case-history of the industry, illustrated by film-examples. And it was to keep, for all time, the best movies of each time.

Supporters sprang up like growths from benevolent dragons' teeth. Alert Will Hays endorsed the plan the moment he heard of it—and he was just about the first to hear. He called for contributions as soon as there were shelves to receive them. Hal Roach, Carl Laemmle, the Paramount people—all the producers were willing to give. All the players were eager.

Samuel Goldwyn wrote "Apart from the purely entertainment side of motion-pictures, they have become for this century, as have books and paintings for the past, a living record, and as such they should be guarded. They are an accurate portrayal of the era—factual evidence in visible form."

And Mary Pickford said: "As one of the pioneers of the industry, I . . . believe the preservation of significant and outstanding films to be of great historic and educational value. I am only surprised that this important work was not undertaken long ago."

We're all wont to say, as a trivial truism, that the motion-picture changes radically in manner from year to year, and that its development has been phenomenally rapid. But, essentially, we all forget the past in the present. Nothing short of a visit to this Library can make you realize how radical and rapid change and growth have been.

Here, on the shelves devoted to the development of the narrative-film, are "Wash-Day Troubles" of 1895 and Mary Pickford's "First Biscuits." Here Murnau's "Sunrise" helps to exemplify the era of German influence. A scene from "The Jazz-Singer" will recall the early sound experiments. "Plain Crazy" startlingly reminds us that "Micky Mouse" was born only seven years ago . . .

And the value of the newsreels to the coming historian needs no emphasizing.

Miss Pickford is right: the Library's work is important. The Post-Impressionist happens to be aware that one person—the hereinbefore mentioned Will Hays, to wit—did want it "undertaken long ago." And the Post-Impressionist is glad that it has been undertaken at last.

THE WHIPPING-POST.

According to this newspaper, the Associated Press says that fifty-two governments are backing the economic blockade against Italy. Also according to this newspaper, the Associated Press says that the defense-attorney for those Croats accused of complicity in the assassination of King Alexander declares "the Jugoslav government has blocked the true political background."

Well, if fifty-two governments can back an economic blockade why can't one government block a political background?

Spain's 'Affaire Strauss.'

Madrid, Nov. 20.

MADRID, Nov. 20.—On further investigation of the celebrated "Affaire Strauss" your correspondent is able to report that the Spaniards are a civilized race, a people with a sophisticated sense of humor who will conduct themselves appropriately in these trying circumstances. In the celebrated "Affaire Strauss" a gambling man who had had experience in Mexico came to Spain to make arrangements, as he thought, to open the old gambling casino at San Sebastian. He also made arrangements to open a casino or store, as it would be called in the United States, on the Spanish Island of Majorca.

Senor Strauss then opened his store in both places, dealing a game which he called "straperlo," and to his surprise and disgust was tossed into the street, as the phrase goes in America, by order of the government. He then waited a reasonable time for the return of inducements which he had laid on the line, and when the inducements were not refunded he wrote a letter of protest to the president of the republic.

At the present time special prosecutors are under instruction to examine the evidence against eight individuals who have been named in the case, and two members of the cabinet have resigned because relatives of theirs were mentioned by Senor Strauss.

• • • •

NEVERTHELESS, there is small likelihood that anyone will be punished for being involved in the "Affaire Strauss," and the incident is developing into a historic joke. Just how much the senor laid down in the way of inducements has not been determined, nor has it been shown just who took advantage of the unhappy senor's trusting nature. But the sense of the meeting obviously is that the senor was trying to take the Spanish people for suckers and was taken himself instead, and that he acted with extremely bad grace in squawking to the president, who has heavier matters on his mind. "Straperlo," which Senor Strauss describes as a game of skill, has become part of the Spanish language. "Straperlo" is a verb which means to trim a sucker, and one who trims a sucker is known as a "straperloeador." A sucker is known as "Strauss," and although it's not a mortal offense to call a man a "Strauss" to his face in Madrid at this time, it is a good idea to smile when doing it.

SPAIN is occupied with other matters than restitution of Senor Strauss' inducements. The republic has turned Alfonso's palace into a public museum, with guides in uniform to show, for small tips, the humblest peasant or small town merchant through the bedroom formerly occupied by the King and Queen. The royal throne is a national relic. Paved roads have been constructed as a lure to tourist trade, which seems to be the capital industry nowadays in most European countries.

Madrid is a gay and from all outward appearances a prosperous capital, and those who can afford to gamble have sufficient opportunity in private clubs not only here, but wherever wealthy members of the community congregate in force. And, of course, for the poor who insist on gambling there's always the national lottery, which has been running 172 years and which is so much a part of the national government that it occupies a building of its own in Madrid as important as the war department and certainly no less respectable.

That is no great compliment to the Lottery Department, for the War Department has been one of the worst leeches from which Spain has suffered in the course of her many afflictions. Not that the common soldiers let her down, either. It is the high command which devised the disasters. All the soldiers were guilty of was dying heroically—and 10,000 of them, an entire division, died in Morocco in one day in 1921 when the King, whose coat of arms they wore on their belt buckles and cap device, was living the life of Senor Reilly in Deauville, France. That was very bad timing on the part of King Alfonso.

• • • •

UNDOUBTEDLY he was bored with life at home, and ordinarily people did not much resent his frequent excursions to the neighboring republic of France, which, ironically, is the favorite picnic grounds of kings and princes and ther nobility, active and passe, of all Europe and the Orient.

This takes us a long way from the celebrated "Affaire Strauss," but to cut back to the incident of the unhappy Mexican gambling man, your correspondent finds that he is only one of those rare specimens in the gambling business—a hard loser.

Several years ago in Florida, American gambling men paid their inducements honestly, sending money down to Miami in cash early in the fall, only to discover on their arrival in town just before Christmas that reform had reared its ugly head and that they would not be allowed to operate their games of skill. To their honor and to the eternal shame of Senor Strauss, of Mexico, they did not write any letters of protest but merely hoped for better luck next year. Senor Strauss, however, will always be known in Spain as a "Strauss" who was "straperloed" by some shrewd Spanish "straperloeadors."

Is Egypt The Goal?

Traveler Suggests Mussolini Has His Eye On Rich Nile Valley, Already Well Populated By Italians Easily Acclimatized.

By Maxfield H. Dunlap.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

SHOULD Mussolini ever decide to go to Egypt to find the place in the sun he demands he would find many of his admiring countrymen to welcome him. In fact, they outnumber the British there more than two to one. He would also find wealth far beyond anything poor Ethiopia has to offer.

The total number of Italian citizens in Egypt, together with those of Italian extraction, is estimated to be almost 100,000. Only French shops and restaurants outnumber the Italian. Italians are conspicuous in the professions. Several newspapers are printed in Italian. Over a quarter of the population of Port Said, Mediterranean entrance to the Suez Canal, is Italian. King Fouad could, in fact, speak to Mussolini in his own language. As a young man and private citizen, the nominal ruler of Egypt was a captain in the Italian army.

Egypt is worth several Ethiopias in present and known potential wealth. The average value of Egypt's annual exports alone is around $150,000,000. Ethiopia's annual exports usually average less than $5,000,000. Their annual budgets show approximately the same ratio. Egypt is not, therefore, the poor patch of desert sand, studded with a few pyramids, that is sometimes pictured.

During my two years in Alexandria, it never occurred to me that Mussolini might some day challenge England for this prize. Although Italians were numerous and popular, they and other foreign nationalities were so overshadowed by the unobtrusive might of the British that the present fear of Italian aggression would have seemed absurd. Yet the frantic military preparations now being made in Egypt seem to reveal England's view of the matter.

• • • •

IN THE light of recent events in Egypt, I wonder if I did not perhaps miss the significance of certain seemingly trivial occurrences while I was there.

In 1927 and 1928, the new Italian Consulate General, overlooking the Alexandria Bay, was pointed out as the finest consulate in the city. Did that explain why in 1930 Britain built a slightly more impressive consulate general also overlooking the new Cornich drive along the bay? Up to that time H. B. M.'s consul general had been housed in a dingy building at the edge of the business district.

There may have been no connection—certainly it occurred to no one then—but did a subtle rivalry account for the fact that the British consul general stayed for five or six years in order to succeed Conte della Croce, the Italian consul general, as doyen of the Alexandria consular corps?

In 1929 an Italian training ship disgorged two or three hundred midshipmen who were entertained by the large Italian colonies in Alexandria and Cairo. Although accustomed to foreign sailors, especially British, these midshipmen were a sensation. Their handsome features, strapping military physiques, and smart uniforms were almost too much for the susceptible girls of the two polyglot cities. It took several weeks for the young Englishmen to recover their self-assurance. Many people jokingly remarked that the midshipmen were not run of mine, but were handpicked beauties assembled for advertising purposes.

• • • •

MY penetrating hind-sight also recalls that Italian vivacity seemed much more at home in Egypt than English phlegm. Englishmen in Egypt wear wool socks the year round. They also wear baggy flannels, tweed jackets, and drink great quantities of whisky and hot tea, as though they were still fighting off the damp chill of England. And they also "even take their pleasures sadly," according to a British broadcasting official.

But not the Italianoes. They dress and behave with the gaiety which Egypt's color and climate seem to demand.

A few Americans in Egypt also found English phlegm somewhat irritating. Not that they preferred the gesticulating and screaming, but they did want some shirt-sleeve company occasionally which the English don't seem to fancy.

• • • •

I CAN recall that the American Minister to Egypt, J. Morton Howell, had a particular grudge against the British high commissioner, Lord Lloyd. Just why, no one seemed certain. The theory was, however, that Howell's habit of back-slapping, popular enough back in Bellefontaine, Ohio, where he was one of Warren G. Harding's intimates, was not a success at the British Residency.

Perhaps just to show that there was plenty of hard feeling, Howell—to the horror of the American career diplomats—became friendly, and openly so, with certain leaders of the anti-English political party, the Wafd. The recent riots in Cairo, it will be remembered, were fomented by the Wafdist leaders.

A year or so after his replacement in 1929 by Franklin Mott Gunther, as smooth as Howell was rustic, Howell published a book entitled "Egypt: Past, Present and Future." A consignment of two hundred or so copies intended for Prince Omar Toussoun and other Wafdists was seized by customs officials on orders from the high commissioner. The embarrassed American Legation was glad to cooperate.

Upon reading the book, however, more amusement was aroused than resentment. For Mr. Howell betrayed his motive in writing the book by making unnecessary references to the high commissioner, such as, ". . . then Lloyd, this little newly-made lord." Mr. Howell also betrayed rather abysmal ignorance of Egypt, past, present or future.

• • • •

THE foreign population of Egypt, totaling over a quarter of a million, consists of thousands of Italians, about half as many British, including its normal military force, and thousands of Greeks, French and Levantines from neighboring countries. The two or three hundred Americans are largely missionaries or teachers in the American mission schools.

Italians are prominent in several professions and in many lines of business, chiefly in shipping and in the exportation of Egyptian long-staple cotton so essential in the manufacture of rubber tires and certain munitions now being exploded in Ethiopia.

Italian law is also established in Egypt. By virtue of the extra-territorial privileges extended to all major foreign powers, all cases between Italians are tried in the Italian consular courts. Italian judges also sit in the mixed courts which have jurisdiction over cases involving two or more nationalities.

• • • •

SPEAKING of actors, is it so fantastic that Mussolini is feared to have ambitions in Egypt? At first blush, his theatrical adventure in poor Ethiopia appears to promise nothing beyond a dramatization of Fascism. It may well be, however, that this is merely a prelude to carving out a solid block of Italian territory in northeast Africa.

From a military point of view, Egypt looks like a pushover compared to Ethiopia. Mussolini's modern war equipment, his powerful air force and navy would be much more useful in the flat land and along the seacoast of Egypt than it is proving to be in Ethiopia's deserts and mountains. Should England's opposition force a clash with her before Ethiopia's subjugation is completed, Mussolini would no doubt withdraw from his present extended position and concentrate upon Egypt—a prize really worth fighting for.

The recent Wafdist riots in Egypt, whether encouraged by Italy or not, are typical of the increasing world tension slowly undermining the British Empire. Even if the present crisis is surmounted, England can never forget that during future European or Asiatic crises Italian armed forces next door will be able to choke off the Nile River, pounce upon a helpless Egypt and thus cut the empire in two.

End Of A Revolt

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

High Heeled Shoe.

OUT of the mountains of Virginia has come the very sad story of how Edith Maxwell up and boot-heeled her poor pappy to death just because he objected to her staying out late nights. True, her poor old pappy was a little bit canned on the night that he made his objection and tossed the gal around a bit before she reverted to the primitive and whacked him and whacked him until he was daid.

The story has attracted considerable attention because the gal was good looking and had come down out of the Virginia hills to take on a veneer of civilization and then had gone back to the hills to constant warfare with the old-fashioned belief of her pappy that a man might beat his family all he wanted to but any decent woman is always home by 9 o'clock at night.

Edith Maxwell is, I suppose, a sort of symbol of the eternal clash between the old and the new idea. Her father, a tall, gaunt hillman, for all his faults undoubtedly had his ideals. His world was a man's world, where man ruled and women folk were supposed to be weak, except on wash day and when it came time to hoe the corn. Then they were supposed to work pretty hard. But aside from work they were supposed to abide by a stern moral code, which kept them to themselves and allowed them few joys out of life besides occasional emotional purges at a camp meeting.

• • • •

NOW Edith didn't like this way of living. She was willing to do her share of work, so it seems, but she did like to get out once in a while and taste such delights as were afforded at such gay countryside resorts as the Little Ritz and she liked to scoot around the hill roads with her friends in their Ford cars. She liked to use rouge and she liked to wear high-heeled shoes. Edith probably wasn't a bad girl acording to any standards except those of her pappy and, if she had been tried by any jury except those of her father's peers, she would perhaps have been acquitted with the jury's blessing.

Trigg Maxwell made his position pretty plain to his daughter and she made hers pretty plain to him. While he was tossing her around and she was reaching for the high heeled shoe he shouted, "Why can't a man whip his own child?" It was just as simple as all that to Trigg Maxwell who set himself up to be the final law in his own home. He was intent upon preserving the old way of things, the way of his father and his father's father before him.

EDITH couldn't see it that way. But even when she was a-fighting her great revolution against constituted authority she was moved, so she said, to admit that, as Trigg said, she had a good home there. It wasn't that she didn't have a good home, but this hulking, interfering, tall Trigg Maxwell was there, imposing his will upon her whether he was drunk or sober. She made it pretty clear what was fundamentally wrong when she told him, just before she edged up to that high heeled, sinful shoe that she was to wield effectively the next minute on Trigg Maxwell's hard head.

"Yes, Pappy," she said, "I've got a good home here, but you fuss me even when I go to the neighbor's houses."

Don't you get the whole picture there?

TRIG Maxwell never tried to see his daughter's point of view or understand her way of life. Perhaps he could not have done so if he had tried. But he never made the effort. He was the father; he was law. As such he must be obeyed, right or wrong, drunk or sober. When he spoke, it was authority speaking, the voice of the dictator, fascism in the hills. He "fussed" his daughter, harried her with little things, fought against her when she would maintain those things she felt were her rights. And so there became an eternal conflict, because there was no love, no understanding, only authority and the iron fist.

Edith Maxwell could subject herself to this tyranny, although when she reasoned she knew she was wrong to lie down. It was her life that Trigg Maxwell was interfering with, her liberty, her own pursuit of happiness. Perhaps she exceeded these rights; certainly she did as far as Trigg Maxwell's code went; but still, she must have reasoned, that was her business, not his.

The world had changed. She was of another generation. She had gone forward. They didn't have to catch her and put shoes on her, as the saying goes in the South. She had been out beyond, and seen, and she had her dream of freedom. Her sense of values may have been distorted, but the right to pursue them at least was hers.

• • • •

AND then one night authority became enraged and unreasonable. The old way was his way, Trigg said, and didn't any man have a right to whip his child? He would put a stop to this rebellion; he would tell Edith where her place was. All this foolishness would end and he, the law, authority, the dictator, the upholder of the old, would stop it. So he arose in his wrath to put down what to him was sinful, what to Edith was, in its way, the march of progress. There was the inevitable clash. And Edith, with unconscious irony, reached for the heel shoe . . .

Relief Burden Beyond Them, Mayors Assert

Conference Calls Upon U. S. for Continuance of Direct Aid.

The United States Conference of Mayors made it clear yesterday that American municipalities have no intention of assuming the full burden of caring for their citizens who are on relief.

Following President Roosevelt's assurance that the Government "does not propose to let anyone starve," the mayors adopted resolutions asking for continuation of both work and direct relief. While pledging their co-operation, the city executives left no doubt that they expect continued help from Washington.

Concluding their meeting with adoption of resolutions, the mayors heard Secretary Morgenthau describe the importance of the conference on taxation announced by the President, and elected Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York president of their organization to succeed Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee.

Jobs for All Doubted.

In one of their relief resolutions the mayors asserted that "a careful survey indicates that regardless of business and industrial improvement all employable men and women cannot possibly be permanently re-employed, so that for some time to come, and particularly pending such times as adequate national security measures will become effective, it will be necessary to provide and care for such of our fellow citizens who are unable to find gainful employment."

The mayors also urged upon the Government "a longer range program for relief work instead of month-to-month allocations.

The mayors said that inasmuch as city budgets are planned on a yearly basis, more efficient co-operation would be possible if Federal relief and work policies could be synchronized with budget years.

Concluding the relief resolution, the mayors said:

"The United States Conference of Mayors petition Congress for additional appropriations for the fiscal year 1936-37 sufficient to meet a planned and comprehensive program for relief work and direct aid."

Officials of the organization were authorized to present their requests to committees of Congress.

In another resolution the mayors said that the care of transients is a national problem and requested a continuing Federal program of transient relief.

A third relief resolution, which also referred to the necessity of continuing work relief and direct relief, pledged the cities to take "proper steps" to obtain contributions from the States. It also pledged co-operation with the social security program.

U. S. Housing Aid Sought.

In reference to housing, the mayors urged upon Congress and the President "the vital importance of this problem and the need for a well-co-ordinated and extended housing program • • • which will be substantially financed by the Federal Government, though in the interest of economy and efficiency the responsibility for the administration of the specific projects of the program be in the hands of the local authorities where so desired."

Other resolutions pledged co-operation with the Department of Justice in the supression of crime, and asked that municipal employes be made eligible for old-age assistance under the social security program.

The mayors' request for Federal financing of direct relief during the next fiscal year was at variance with Government plans which President Roosevelt said call for ending this form of relief "substantially" by December 1. The President has left little doubt that Congress will be asked for substantial appropriations for continuation of work relief next year. However, with the works program moving more slowly than anticipated, it is expected that a substantial part of the $4,880,000,000 works-relief appropriation will remain unspent when the fiscal year ends June 30.

Morgenthau, discussing the planned tax conference, said he did not "suppose there is a more important question facing Government officials, municipal, State or Federal."

"There must be outlined certain zones of taxes, some exclusively for cities, some for counties, some for States, and some for the Federal Government," he said.

Morgenthau pointed out that at the beginning of the Administration the Government had to pay as high as 2½ per cent interest on loans, whereas at the present time money can be obtained for as little as ⅜ of 1 per cent. He said this reduction should make it easier for cities to borrow money.

Besides LaGuardia, the mayors elected the following officers: Mayor Hoan, honorary president; Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, vice president, and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, of Boston; Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, of San Francisco; Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, of New Orleans, and Mayor Neville Miller, of Louisville, trustees.

Ellsworth's Route Into the Unknown

Crippled Plane Of Ellsworth Forced Back

Explorer Had Hoped to Map Unknown Land in Claim for U. S.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—Lincoln Ellsworth, Antarctic explorer, has returned to his base because of a broken oil line, according to a radio to the New York Times and the N. A. N. A. Syndicate tonight.

Ellsworth took off from Dundee Island on his projected flight to the Ross Sea from the Weddell Sea at 2:50 a. m. (E. S. T.) today. Herbert Holick-Kenyon was piloting the plane. The route was across an unknown portion of Antarctica to Admiral Richard E. Byrd's former base in Little America. Ellsworth hoped to map the region.

When the oil leak developed, nearly 400 miles out, the plane returned safely to Dundee Island. The break was repaired in a few hours and Ellsworth radioed his associates here that he planned to take off again at 3 a. m. Thursday (E. S. T.).

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Lincoln Ellsworth took off from Dundee Island on his projected flight from the Wedell Sea to the Ross Sea at 2:50 a. m. (Eastern standard time) today—a dispatch to the New York Times and the North American Newspaper Alliance said.

Ellsworth was flying in a plane piloted by Herbert Holick-Kenyon. Their route will take them across an unknown portion of Antarctica to Admiral Byrd's former base at "Little America." Ellsworth hopes to complete maps of the region he describes as the "great unknown."

The plane was in radio communication with the supply ship at Dundee Island and at 3:38 (E. S. T.), the Times and North American Newspaper Alliance reported, Ellsworth reported "all is well."

The supply ship will sail for the Bay of Wales, which it expects to reach in five weeks. Ellsworth and the pilot will wait at Little America for the arrival of the ship.

Ellsworth, in an article copyrighted by the New York Times and North American Newspaper Alliance, said he expected to make the flight of 2,140 miles, 1,300 over territory unseen before by man, in about 14 hours' flying time.

He wrote that the tenth and eleventh hours of the flight will be the most critical in event of accident, "for then we will be more than 400 miles from the estimated coast line and possible source of fresh food supply."

James Roosevelt Quits Yeast Firm

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—James Roosevelt, eldest son of President Roosevelt, today announced his resignation as president of the National Grain Yeast Corporation of Belleville, N. J.

In a statement issued from his insurance office, Roosevelt said his resignation was effective as of November 1 and gave "the pressure of other business" as the reason.

He was not available for comment on a report published by the Newark Evening News that he had had "a disagreement with the board of directors."

His statement follows:

"Mr. James Roosevelt wishes to announce his resignation from the National Grain Yeast Corporation of Belleville, effective November 1, due to the pressure of other busines matters. He has served actively as president and a director through November 19, at the request of the board of directors of the corporation and wishes to state that while he is no longer connected with the National Grain Yeast Corporation, he will maintain his interest in the allied baking industry."

Jersey to Deny Barring Rights To Hauptmann

Will File Brief Today; Decision by Supreme Court Due Dec. 9.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 20.—New Jersey's formal denial that Bruno Richard Hauptmann's constitutional rights were violated in his trial at Flemington will be filed with the Supreme Court of the United States tomorrow.

Joseph Lanigan, assistant attorney general, said he would leave tonight for Washington with copies of the State's answer to Hauptmann's application for a review of his conviction of the Lindbergh baby kidnap-killing.

Filing of the brief tomorrow, two weeks before the deadline, may result in a decision on December 9. Should the court refuse to interfere with the conviction, Hauptmann would probably die in the electric chair sometime in January unless granted a new trial on newly discovered evidence or granted clemency by the court of pardons.

Hauptmann, in his appeal, charged his trial was a "circus maximus" and criticized the daily presence of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and the summation of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, both of which he said "unduly influenced" the jury. The New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals, in denying Hauptmann a new trial, dismissed both objections.

A statement by Dr. John F. Condon, "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh case, that he expected Hauptmann to confess and that Hauptmann had sent for him three times since being convicted brought from C. Lloyd Fisher, a defense attorney, the assertion that "no such thing ever happened."

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, prison warden, said Hauptmann had not asked him to communicate with Dr. Condon. The warden said such a request might have been conveyed through Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, the Rev. D. G. Werner, of New York City.

South Is in Path Of Prosperity, Governors Say

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Nov. 20.—Signs of returning prosperity are seen in the South by Governors of nine of its States, a majority of whom predict an accelerated climb toward better times in 1936.

From Arkansas to Virginia came reports today of improved conditions, with Gov. Dave Sholtz, of Florida, saying his State, enjoying its best season in nine years, "is leading the Nation back to prosperity."

"Our development this year has been safe and sane," said Sholtz. "From every standpoint, 1935 has been the best in Florida since the boom period."

Georgia "Getting Results."

Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, outspoken against the Roosevelt Administration, said "Georgia is making strong efforts to a sound, fundamental recovery. She is getting results in spite of the New Deal."

South Carolina's Governor, Olin D. Johnston, said his State has made "remarkable" progress.

Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina said better business conditions and improved methods of tax collection are being reflected in increased State revenues.

Budget Balanced.

"We are operating on a balanced budget," Gov. Ehringhaus said, "and this has enabled us to get lower interest rates for our securities, including an all-time low record rate of 2.76 per cent for bonds.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon said things have picked up in Kentucky, but that he was unsure of the future.

"Business and farming conditions in Kentucky have taken big strides this year because of the money handed out by the Government to the unemployed and the farmers," he said.

"The outlook for the future, however, seems uncertain. The Government will have to keep on spending money if the increased amount of money is to keep on coming in to the storekeepers."

Delta State Has Surplus.

Gov. Sennett Conner, of Mississippi, called attention to a surplus in the treasury as representing a healthy condition in the Delta State.

"My information is that business is much improved throughout the State," said Gov. Hill McAllister, of Tennessee.

Gov. George Peery of Virginia, said significant accomplishments of this year include a minimum eight months' public school term, keeping expenditures within income and at the same time restoring some of the deficit and a State control plan for alcoholic beverages.

An economy program in Arkansas' State government was said by Gov. J. M. Futrell to have brought results in trimming outstanding indebtedness.

Two Accused After 20 Die Of Soda Poison

Blanket Warning Rushed to Housewife Buyers of Lethal Stuff.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—A city-wide scare over poisoned soda led today to an investigation into 20 recent deaths, issuance of warrants for two men and a blanket warning to hundreds of housewives who bought the lethal stuff.

Three deaths and 13 severe illnesses already had been officially attributed directly to use of the compound, distributed by a retailer in a bargain sale.

How the soda became poisoned remained a mystery to officers, although they said they could not understand how so much virulent poison could have been put into the compound accidentally.

Warnings Broadcast.

Investigators apparently paid little attention to anonymous theories that the soda was deliberately poisoned by someone bent on mass murder.

The main concern of City Health Officer J. C. Geiger was to prevent consumers from using the 800 pounds they had purchased. The product was retailed in bags containing 1 or 2 pounds.

Warrants were issued for the arrest of Nick Manno, in whose establishment the soda was barreled, and for Morris Rosenthal, named by police as an executive of the store which retailed the compound.

Source Is Sought.

Subsequently, Joseph Rosenthal, an executive of the retail store, told the police warrant clerk that Morris Rosenthal had been dead for several years. Joseph, a son of Morris, accepted service of a corrected warrant and was released under $250 bail. Dr. Geiger said Joseph Rosenthal was one of the 13 made ill by the soda.

Dr. Geiger said 20 deaths might be traceable to the contaminated product. This was the basis of his investigation into that angle.

Police sought the source of the poison at the wholesale establishment where the soda had been dumped from broken retail packages into barrels for bulk sale.

They were advised by Dr. C. D. Leake, department of health chemist, that the poison was so mixed with the soda that it could not have just come from the sides of dirty barrels.

"It might have come into the soda," Dr. Leake said, "by being dumped in by mistake. With the only evidence we have, I can't say there is anything pointing to criminal intent."

"I have been salvaging soda from broken packages for years and have never had any trouble before," Manno said.

Indianapolis, Nov. 20 (AP).—Physicians who treated 72 prisoners stricken after eating the noon meal at the county jail today theorized tainted flour, used in preparation of gravy, probably caused their illness.

Five of the sick men were removed to the city hospital. Others were treated at the jail. Physicians predicted all would recover.

Dr. Rollo N. Harger, Indiana University toxicologist, began analyzing the food served the prisoners. He said his tests would require several hours.

Sheriff Otto Ray said only those prisoners became ill who ate the gravy served with hamburger steak, mashed potatoes, bread and coffee.

A 16-year-old prisoner was the first to become ill. He was stricken as he left the mess hall, and a few minutes later several others became nauseated.

The sheriff summoned three physicians, then bolted all jail doors, fearing some prisoners might attempt escapes during the confusion.

Madrid, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Lead poisoning caused by eating bread made from flour which contained a lead substance, today had spread to 5,000 persons in the villages of Murcia Province, it was announced. Previous tabulations showed 4,000 persons stricken.

Jose Merono Olmos, who sold the poisonous flour, is being held in bail amounting to 250,000 pesetas (approximately $35,000). Damage charges against him have been placed tentatively at 500,000 pesetas, or approximately $70,000. No criminal charge has been made so far.

J. W. Goods Dies In Alexandria at 69

J. William Goods, 69, died yesterday at his home, 228 South Washington street, Alexandria, after an illness of three weeks, following a stroke of paralysis. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Isabella Goods, and one son, Albert Goods, of Atlanta.

Mr. Goods was a merchandise broker in Washington for many years. He was a member of Post F, Travelers Protective Association.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

John A. Nugent Dies At Alexandria Home

John A. Nugent, 60, died yesterday at his residence, 917 Duke street Alexandria, after a long illness. For many years he had been employed as cashier by the Hecht Co, in Washington, but had been compelled to retire on account af ill health.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie L. Nugent; a son, William F. Nugent, and the following sisters: Mrs. Gray Hicks, Mrs. Clarence Leake, Mrs. Cecil Leake, Miss Annie Nugent, Sister Melita and Sister Clemenzo, the two last named of the Holy Cross Academy, Washington.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. Saturday at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, and burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Deputies Gas Strikers From Speeding Autos

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

roared into the unguarded driveway.

Suspecting that the sheriff's pacific address was a strategic move designed to decoy them away from the driveway, the pickets shouted in anger, snatched clubs and bricks and swept down upon the cars, smashing windows and denting doors and fenders. The frightened employes scrambled from the machines and ran to the shelter of the plant.

When it became apparent that serious trouble loomed, the company quickly mobilized 50 guards who were sworn in as deputies by Sheriff Flower and sent to quell the disturbance.

Hurling tear and gas bombs, the guards scattered the strikers. The next trouble came when a freight train, bearing supplies to the besieged workers, chugged onto the company siding. Strikers' sentries discovered food and bedding on the supply train. A cry went up and the enraged pickets fell upon the train and attempted to force it back. Again the guards were called out and again the pickets fell back under a gas barrage.

Sporadic skirmishes occurred during the morning and early afternoon, when more cars of workers sought entrance to the plant.

The riot was intensified late in the afternoon, when strikers stoned six electrical workers sent to the plant to repair a damaged transformer in the yard. This action caused Mayor Davis to issue a rigid anti-rioting proclamation directing all assemblages—legal or otherwise—to disband in two minutes.

The pickets ignored the edict. The guards drew up their ranks, reloaded their gas guns a[illegible] descended on the rioters. The strikers, pale-faced and retching from the effects of the nauseating gas, fell back time and again only to reform their stubborn ranks with renewed determination.

While the front lines of the guards battered at the rioters, armed only with bricks and clubs, rear ranks of deputies set up long-range tear-gas guns and backed up the hand-to-hand fighting with "heavy artillery."

E. W. Golsen Rites Set for Tomorrow

A high mass will be sung at St. Thomas' Church at 10 a. m. tomorrow for Eugene W. Golsen, 31-year-old special field agent for the Works Progress Administration, who was killed when a truck hit him as he was changing a tire on the highway near Bound Brook, N. J., last Tuesday.

He will be buried in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. The services were announced yesterday by his wife, the former Florence Cullon, Interior Department clerk, who lives at 2900 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Golsen left town on a field trip only a week ago. Before joining the WPA staff he had been connected with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Home Owners Loan Corporation. He graduated in 1925 from Georgetown University, where he had played center on the football team. With the WPA he was assigned to investigating charges of criminality.

Jennings reported the last-minute gifts obtained by his unit included an increase of $500 by Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, which made their total contribution $3,000.

The Jennings unit turned in 223 new gifts of $73,215 for a total of 633 donations for $512,417 or 91.96 per cent of the quota.

The governmental unit had the highest percentage of any division with 98.44 per cent of its assignment. It received 18,224 gifts yesterday for $110,842 or 100.828 donations all told aggregating $667,454.

1,890 Subscriptions.

Wyckoff's metropolitan unit added 1,890 subscriptions for $28,720.90, increasing its total to 10,632 gifts for $176,253.76 or 88.12 per cent.

Group solicitation unit gifts the last day from 12,182 sources totaled $77,873 and advanced the unit's grand total to 44,662 pledges for $339,066.66 or 88.1 per cent of the quota.

The Capital unit turned in 489 new contributions totaling $1,940.24. Its grand total stood at 1,243 pledges for $6,163.32 or 62.34 per cent.

A recapitulation showed 157,998 persons already have made gifts. Last day individual contributions came from 33,008 sources.

Mystery Donor Gives Chest 2 'Y' Buildings

An anonymous philanthropist yesterday presented two buildings to the Community Chest and the Council of Social Agencies.

The properties are known as the Elizabeth Somers Home and the Elizabeth Somers Annex and are located at the southwest and northwest corners of Eleventh and M streets northwest.

While the financial outlay made by the donor in buying the buildings from the Y. W. C. A., was not made public, it was known to be substantial. The Chest has been renting the annex from the "Y."

Both structures, it was announced, will be equipped for occupancy as offices. Several Chest agencies probably will move into the buildings.

There was much rejoicing over the gift yesterday at a special meeting of the Chest trustees, as the organization for years has hoped to obtain property for use in developing a social service center.

The trustees adopted resolutions in which they voiced "deep and grateful appreciation of this generous gift."

The name of the donor was withheld by request.

H. L. Rust, jr., was elected treasurer of the Chest to succeed William J. Flather, jr.

Claimed by British.

On the one hand, Jutland has been claimed as a British victory, since the German fleet remained practically immobilized in port from that day until its surrender after the armistice. On the other hand, the weaker German fleet inflicted more damage than it received and managed to make good its escape at the end of the action when it might have been annihilated.

Jellicoe was widely criticized for his handling of the British fleet, which was considered by some to have been overcautious and woefully lacking in the "Nelson touch." It occasioned no surprise, therefore, when at the end of the year "the little admiral," in spite of his immense popularity with his men and his great gifts as an organizer, was relieved of his command.

He became first sea lord and later chief of naval staff. In both capacities he rendered service to the general conduct of Britain's naval operations. His heart, however, seemed always to be with the gray ships far up in the north of Scotland where Beatty was commanding in his place.

Upheld by Experts.

Expert criticism since the war has tended to believe that Jellicoe was right in not venturing the grand fleet further at Jutland, for a severe British defeat would have meant irreparable disaster to the whole allied cause in the war, whereas the Germans, with much less to lose, could afford to take greater risks.

He had, however, to bear a share of blame for the defects in British gunnery, ship construction and signalling that manifested themselves in the battle; for in a long career of high office both at sea and in the admiralty he had played a great part in making the British navy what it was, for good or ill, at the outbreak of the war.

Jutland, as the supreme day of Jellicoe's life, crowned a long and brilliant career. Born John Rushworth Jellicoe, December 5, 1859, the son of Capt. J. Jellicoe of the mercantile marine, he was schooled at Rottingdean and entered the navy as a cadet at the age of 13.

Served in Egypt.

As a young lieutenant he saw service in the Egyptian campaign of 1882. Thereafter his rise was rapid and he was commander of the Victoria when that vessel was rammed by the Camperdown off Tripoli in 1893 with the loss of nearly 400 lives.

Jellicoe was in no sense implicated in that disaster, as he was below decks suffering from malaria when the crash came. He made his way to the deck, collapsed there and was flung into the water, where his life was saved by a midshipman, who supported him until help arrived.

The future commander of the grand fleet was on the China station from 1898 to 1901 and commanded the naval brigade which, with American and other forces, marched to the relief of the legations besieged by the boxers in Peking in 1900.

A number of posts ashore were succeeded with commands of ever-increasing importance afloat, and in all his duties Jellicoe earned commendation as a master of his profession and as a leader. He was "Hell Fire Jack" to his men.

His chief post after the war was that of Governor General of New Zealand, which he held from 1920 to 1924.

He visited Panama and the United States in 1920 and toured Canada again in 1931.

Lord Jellicoe married in 1902 Florence Gwendoline, daughter of Sir Charles Cayzer, Bart. There were five children, the heir, Patrick Viscount Brocas, who was born in 1918, and four daughters.

Gunnery Expert.

The future admiral made an early reputation as a gunnery expert. In 1880 he obtained his commission as sub-lieutenant and was awarded a special prize of $400 for gunnery. After the Egyptian campaign in 1882 he was posted to H. M. S. Monarch as gunnery lieutenant, serving in that ship till 1888.

While in the Monarch he had his first narrow escape from drowning. The gig in which he went to the rescue of a stranded ship capsized and he and his men saved themselves with difficulty. For the pluck which he displayed on this occasion he was awarded a board of trade silver medal.

Jellicoe spent the next two years on the senior staff of the gunnery school and as assitsant to the director of naval ordnance. His promotion to commander came in 1893.

Returned to Sea.

In 1902 he had a period of service as naval assistant to the controller (third lord) at the admiralty, but went to sea again in the following year in command of the armored cruiser Drake. From 1905 to 1907 he was director of naval ordnance at the admiralty, particularly devoting himself to the development of long-range firing.

In August, 1907, Jellicoe was appointed to flag rank and for a year was at sea in H. M. S. Albemarle as a rear admiral of the Atlantic fleet. He came back to the admiralty as third sea lord, then went to sea again in 1910-1911 to command successively the Atlantic fleet and the second division of the home fleet.

As second sea lord, Admiral Jellicoe was again at Whitehall from 1912 until the eve of the World War, when he was sent to Scapa Flow as second in command of the home fleet.

In recognition of his war services, Jellicoe received the thanks of Parliament and a grant of $250,000. He was also raised to the peerage.

Promoted admiral of the fleet in 1919, Jellicoe became Governor General of New Zealand in the following year. His four years in that office were a success and on his return to England he was created Earl Jellicoe and Viscount Brocas of Southampton.

War Secret 'Leaked' In Jellicoe's Prayer

By the Associated Press.

Earl Jellicoe was a deeply religious man, and it was because of his dependence on divine guidance that he inadvertently gave away the closely guarded secret that the long-expected battle of Jutland was imminent.

Just before this conflict was fought Jellicoe slipped quietly down to London for a visit with his wife and children.

He went with his wife to the little church near their home. There the couple knelt at the altar while the gray-haired fighting man prayed for help in the coming crisis.

Supposedly, the church was empty except for the rector, but from some source came a whisper, which sped from lip to lip to spread the news of the impending drama.

Captain Wood, Tax Attorney, Dies at Oteen

Internal Revenue Official Will Be Buried in Arlington.

Capt. Roy Gelder Wood, widely known income tax expert and attorney in the office of the general counsel, Bureau of Internal Revenue, died yesterday at Oteen, N. C., after a long illness. He was 53.

Born in Dundee, N. Y., in 1882, Capt. Wood entered the civil employ of the United States Army subsistence department in May, 1909. Transferred to the Quartermaster Corps in 1913, he was commissioned captain six years later. He resigned his commission shortly after the World War to take the position at the Internal Revenue Bureau that he held at his death.

He was a member of Lafayette Lodge, F. A. A. M., and for many years had been national treasurer and general counsel of the Quartermaster Association.

Surviving are his wife, Alice Musselwhite Wood, and his mother, Mrs. Jane Wood, of Penn Yan, N. Y. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Rockville Gets Grant to End Rail Crossing

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Allotment of $150,000 for elimination of the railroad grade crossing at Rockville was announced yesterday at Baltimore by Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the Maryland State Roads Commission. Bids will be asked on the project before December 15, he said.

The project is included in a $1,898,000 program for grade-crossing eliminations in Maryland under the Public Works Administration. Fourteen school children were killed at the crossing last April when a school bus from Williamsport, Md., was struck by a train.

The spectacular attack on the Fusion members of the board of county commissioners Tuesday by Richard H. Lansdale, Democrat, may cost several of his supporters their jobs, it was indicated yesterday.

Stung by Lansdale's criticism, two of three members of the Fusion majority were advocating immediate dismissal of all Democratic office holders whose appointments they control. A small number of Democrats managed to retain their positions after the Fusion victory last November.

Congress should give the President the power to act in matters of international affairs in the absence of a session of that body, said Dr. Ellery C. Stowell in speaking to the Women's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday afternoon. Dr. Stowell, who has spent much time in Europe and is now professor of international law at American University, spoke on "Our Rights and Duties in the European Crisis."

While expressing the greatest respect for Congress, the speaker denounced the idea that the President might be influenced by business interests. "The embargo works well," he said, "but it does not shut off some of the supplies which Italy may need." If we had been a member of the League of Nations our moral influence would have been felt, he added.

A plea for support of the Montgomery County Social Service League budget campaign was made by the drive chairman, George W. Davis, of Silver Spring. Davis said that since its organization the league has been supported by the clubwomen and he asked for their co-operation in the present effort to raise funds to carry on the work among the sick, aged and children. He commended the work of the Chevy Chase chairman, Mrs. Edward Helmuth.

The treasurer, Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, reported the membership of the club is 563. Ten additional women were elected upon motion of Mrs. G. Edward Rowland, membership chairman.

Announcement was made of the gift of $160 to the Washington Community Chest and of $15 to a scholarship in an art course to be established in honor of Mrs. Annie M. Wilson, fine arts chairman of the county Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke briefly on the recent general session of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Detroit.

The Bethesda branch of the Public Health Lay Council of Montgomery County yesterday appropriated $50 for the proposed oral hygiene clinic in Rockville. The branch also voted to furnish a first-aid kit for a classroom in the Bethesda Elementary School.

Elimination of the traffic hazard on Conduit road at the entrance to Brookmont, Md., is urged in a resolution presented to the board of county commissioners by the Potomac Valley Citizens Association.

The resolution holds the location of the school bus stop at this intersection is especially dangerous, pointing out that last week three children were injured at this point.

A Montgomery County jury yester day awarded $15,500 to Mrs. Louise Bateman, widow, and her four children, in their suit against Sidney L. Hechinger, trading as the Hechinger Co.

In the suit the plaintiffs alleged that on November 28, 1934, Robert A. Bateman, father of the family, crashed into the rear of a truck owned by the Hechinger Co. on a road near Suitland, Md., and was killed. The suit also charged that the rear of the truck was not lighted and asked damages of $75,000. Attorneys J. Wilson Ryon and Walter W. Dawson represented the plaintiffs.

Bids for construction of additions to the Rockville and Damascus elementary schools will be opened in the board of education offices in Rockville December 6 at 3 p. m., it was announced yesterday.

The Rockville and Damascus units are the first in the $794,000 county building program which has been approved as a PWA project. Six rooms will be built at Rockville and three additional classrooms at Damascus, according to Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of schools.

Mrs. Peyton Whelan, president of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs, will be toastmistress at the annual luncheon meeting of the Montgomery County Homemakers Clubs, to be held at St. Martin's Hall, Gaithersburg, Md., at 12:15 p. m., today.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of schools for Montgomery County, will address the meeting on "The Extension Service, a Pioneer in Adult Education."

Other speakers will be Mrs. Frank Hoadley, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Randle, professor in music at the University of Maryland, and Mrs. Mary Hargett, a member of the Cooperative Farm Women's Market, who will speak on the subject, "Going Into Business After Sixty."

According to Miss Edythe M. Turner, home demonstration agent for Montgomery County, who is arranging the meeting, the following slate of officers is to be presented by the nominating committee: Mrs. William H. Ward, president; Mrs. A. D. Oursler, first vice president; Mrs. Jones Hoyle, second vice president; Mrs. Elgie Hawkins, secretary and Mrs. Agnes Weisman, treasurer.

The Silver Spring Lions Club has adopted a resolution urging the county commissioners to rezone the area about the Montgomery-Blair High School as residential section. The resolution was proposed by the civic affairs committee following a report by its chairman, Allan H. Gardner, at a meeting in the Brooke tea house, Silver Spring.

Howard Waters, chairman of the boys' committee, reported that 900 questionnaires have been sent to church pastors and parents of Silver Spring in an effort to find out recreational needs for the youth of the community. About 100 replies have already been received.

The annual praise and thank offering meeting of the Woman's Society of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church was held at the parish hall, Maple avenue. About 100 members and their husbands attended.

Featuring the affair was a one-act play, "The Doctor Decides," by Fred Eastman, dealing with national mission work. In the cast were Mrs. William Greene, Mrs. John O'Neil, Miss Dorothy Schearer, Leonard Kephart, Will Carleton and Robert Jewett. Mrs. E. V. Crittendon is president.

A dance will be given at the Indian Spring Country Club, Silver Spring, Md., for the benefit of St. Michael's Parish School Saturday night. Mrs. Ronald Alvord is in charge.

The Montgomery County branch of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association will hold a luncheon tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the Hungerford Tavern to discuss plans for the annual Christmas Seal drive. William B. Matthews, managing director of the association, will give a talk.

The newly formed Brookmont Scout Troop under Hugh Davis will hold meetings Friday evenings at the Brookmont Community Hall.

Early Budget Report Asked For Arlington

Women Voters' Group Also Urges Beverage Act Amendment.

A resolution urging legislation to require the county manager to submit the budget at a date sufficiently early to permit its study by interested citizens was adopted yesterday by the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County.

The group also adopted resolutions requesting that the alcoholic beverage control act be amended to give local authorities power to regulate closing hours, that women be given the right to serve on juries and that a law be passed by the General Assembly limiting the salary of the county clerk to $7,000.

The guest speaker at the meeting, held at Ashton Hegihts, was Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, United States Civil Service Commissioner. She spoke in favor of the merit system for Government workers and urged women to give more time to the problems of government.

The organization went on record as asking the county board to see that all provisions of the county manager form of government were carried out. It also voted in favor of the construction of a Junior High School in the county, to be ready in September of next year.

Members of the membership committee are Mrs. Ruth Marcey, Mrs. Tillie Ahalt, Mrs. Anna Green, Mrs. Louise Payne and Mrs. Edith Simpson.

Philip O. Shepherd, of Clarendon, has been appointed delinquent tax collector for Arlington County, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Freeland F. Chew, recently elected member of the county board.

The appointment was made by State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissette.

Early returns from roll call workers indicate an increased membership in the Arlington County Red Cross Chapter, George A. Collier, chapter chairman, announced last night. Further gains will be necessary to reach the quota of 1,500 members, the chairman stated. The rapid growth of the chapter's activities makes it imperative that at least 1,500 members be enrolled in Arlington County this year, he said.

Plans have been started for the organization of classes in home hygiene and care of the sick, and for extension of first-aid training to additional volunteer firemen, school teachers and other groups.

The approach of winter is adding to the need for this work, Collier said. With clothing and other material made from the Government allotment of cotton exhausted, increased funds will be required to provide material and garments for sick and needy war veterans and their families and for school children in homes where incomes are inadequate for family needs.

Chevy Chase Group To Hear Dr. Jarvie

Members of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church forum will consider "The School and Character" in the seventh of a series of discussions on current social problems at 7:45 p. m. today in the assembly room of the church.

The subject will be presented by Dr. Lawrence Jarvie, assistant adviser on character education in the District public schools.

Fairfax Club of Young G. O. P. Is Organized

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST. P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The Young Republicans of Fairfax County, Va., have completed the organization of a county Young Republican club, which brings to a conclusion a movement launched several months ago.

The new organization at a county-wide rally in the Fairfax courthouse elected G. Ramsey Bready, jr., of Herndon, president. Other officers elected are Pat McKenna, of Burke, secretary, and Paul Rinehart, jr., of McLean, treasurer. The following vice presidents, who will also serve as district chairmen, were elected: Harry Middleton, Dranesville District; Miss Marian Erwin, Falls Church District; Herbert Lee Baker, jr., Lee District, and Frank Burkholder, Providence District.

An advisory committee composed of old-line Republicans was named to co-operate with the younger group. It includes Dr. F. M. Brooks, J. Sidney Wiley, George R. Bready, Mrs. R. R. Farr and L. B. Morris.

Farr, Wiley Speakers.

Col. Richard R. Farr, of Fairfax, and J. Sidney Wiley, of Lorton, former deputy United States collector of internal revenue at Alexandria, addressed the meeting and stressed the need of a Young Republican organization in the county atnd urged the year-around support of the party.

The club voted to participate in the Young Republican convention to be held at Culpeper, Va., on Saturday. The following delegates and alternates to the convention were elected: Lee District, H. L. Baker, jr., delegate; Kenneth Baker, alternate; Centerville District, Alex Height, delegate; Miss Louise Millner, alternate; Dranesville District, G. R. Bready, jr., delegate; Miss Nancy Morris, alternate; Falls Church District, Miss Marian Erwin, delegate; Mrs. Willie Sipes, alternate; Mount Vernon District, Mrs. E. Nell Berry, delegate; Mrs. K. Truax, alternate; Providence District, Galen Weller, delegate; Frank Burkholder, alternate.

Delegates at large are Dr. F. M. Brooks, Frank Latham, William Harlow, William Blanchard, G. R. Bready, J. Sidney Wiley, Paul Rinehart, jr., and L. B. Morris; alternates, Mrs. Ethel A. Davis, Miss Rebecca Middleton, Miss Jean Bready, Mrs. S. N. Cook, Joseph Mathy, Mrs. John McDaniel, L. L. Freeman and Roy Hollis.

Found guilty of housebreaking and theft of articles valued at $200 from several summer cabins at Springfield, Mrs. Elsie Weadon, 40, and her son, Howard Weadon, 16, received suspended sentences in the Trial Justice Court of Fairfax County, Va., before Judge Paul E. Brown.

Mrs. Florence Schindell, 23, daughter of Mrs. Weadon, arrested at the same time and similarly charged, was found not guilty. Robert Abel, 40, who lives at the Weadon home, was found guilty on the same charge and sentenced to six months in the county jail.

According to Sheriff E. P. Kirby, Abel is wanted by Prince William County authorities for escaping jail at Manassas, where he had served four months of a six-month sentence for driving while under the influence of liquor.

The members of the Herndon, Va., Congregational Church have completed plans for a home-coming for all members and friends of the church, at 11 a. m. Sunday. Immediately after the morning service a basket luncheon will be held.

Miss Margaret Pinch, daughter of the late Rev. Pearse Pinch, who was pastor of the church for a number of years, will sing at the morning services.

The Vale Home Demonstration Club will have a social and group singing at the new Vale Community House at 8 p. m. Saturday, with Mrs. Florence Jodzies in charge of arrangements.

Alexandria Needle Guild Re-elects Effie L. Baggett

1,500 Garments Received for Welfare Agencies; Memorial Table Arranged With Flowers for Deceased Members.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Alexandria 323.

The annual election of officers of the Alexandria branch of the Needlework Guild of America was held yesterday in Lee Camp Hall, Alexandria, in conjunction with the annual collection and distribution of new garments for the various charities and welfare agencies of the city.

Mrs. Effie L. Baggett was re-elected president. Other officers were also re-elected as follows: Mrs. Edna Joyce Davis, first vice president; Mrs. Walter G. Rogers, second vice president; Miss Constance Boush, third vice president; Mrs. George W. Roop, fourth vice president; Mrs. Llewellyn Dyson, secretary, and Mrs. William A. Moncure, treasurer.

The business meeting was held during the morning, when the garments were received and arranged on tables. A memorial table, decorated with white chrysanthemums, was held for the deceased directors, Mrs. James R. Caton, Miss Mary E. Carlin, Mrs. Marian Ballenger and Mrs. Percy E. Clift. Each director of the organization collects two new garments each from ten persons.

Fifteen hundred garments were received yesterday and later in the day distributed to the welfare nurses, probation officer, American Legion Auxiliary, visiting nurses, and representatives of all charitable organizations, to give to worthy poor in the city.

An entertainment program in the afternoon was held under the direction of Mrs. Margaret F. Bailey, and musical selections were given by Mrs. Frank Perry, Mrs. Cameron Roberts, Mrs. Stephen H. Field and Miss Marguerite Moncure, with Mrs. Bernice Coleman Whitestone at the piano. An interesting talk on the aims and purposes of the organization was given by the Rev. John Paul Tyler, D. D., pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Tea was served, with Mrs. J. Owen Lynch, Miss Constance Boush and Mrs. Donald Campbell presiding, assisted by other members of the guild.

The George Washington High School Library is celebrating National Book Week, designated by the National Association of Book Publishers as November 17 to 23, inclusive. The observance was opened Tuesday with an address by Mrs. Walter DuB. Brookings, president of the Alexandria Women's Club. Miss Louise Dinwiddie, school librarian, made introductory remarks concerning book week and the library displays, illustrating the ideal reading for pleasure. The guests were conducted through the library, and inspected the posters on display, many of which were the work of high school students.

The Westminster Bible Class of the Second Presbyterian Church will entertain the men of the congregation at supper at 7:30 o'clock tonight, followed by an entertainment program. The supper will be served by the ladies of the church, headed by Mrs. Joseph Everly. Joseph Everly, class president, will preside.

Dr. Russell J. Clinchy will be guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Alexandria Kiawanis Club today in the George Mason Hotel. His subject will be "Education and the Whole Life." The Rev. Oscar W. Brittingham is program chairman.

Robert W. Eaves, president of the club, has announced that the monthly meeting of the board of directors will be held at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the George Mason Hotel, to which all members are invited.

Members of the Senior Dramatic Club of St. Paul's Episcopal Church have been requested to meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the Norton Memorial Hall for a rehearsal of the three-act drama, "The Little Clodhopper," which will be presented on Friday, December 6, for the benefit of the junior choir.

A petition is being circulated on behalf of amateur basketball players requesting the city council to permit the use of Armory Hall for Sunday afternoon games. The petition, it is expected, will be presented to the council at its meeting on November 26.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c. Advt.

"In Person" Affords Ginger Rogers a Pleasant Vehicle for Her Stellar Debut

Is a Film Star In Play Within Play on Screen

Pleases Crowd at Keith's; Those 'Nutty' Marxes; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"IN PERSON." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Samuel Hopkins Adams, adapted to the screen by Allan Scott, starring Ginger Rogers, with George Brent, Alan Mowbray, Grant Mitchell, Samuel S. Hinds, Joan Breslau, Louis Mason, Spencer Charters and William Davidson. Music and lyrics by Oscar Levant and Dorothy Fields; musical director, Roy Webb. Directed by William A. Seiter. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon.

Stemming from the same facile source—a short story by Samuel Hopkins Adams—it is perhaps not surprising that this gay little charade should possess something of the breezy quality and informal comedy of "It Happened One Night."

Not that it seems destined to win any world awards as the best picture of this or that, for decidedly it does not, but "In Person," nontheless, is extremely pleasant entertainment, nicely attuned to the talents of its star and productive of several fruitful roles for the genial actors delegated to constitute her major support.

If one had to catalogue this carefree fable definitely in the mind of the seasoned theatergoer he probably might best do it by saying that it bears an uncommonly close blood relationship to "The Misleading Lady"—and that would lead in direct line of ancestry to that riotous farce of Master Will Shakespeare's, to which the Lunts this season are lending their lusty talents to the great edification of all concerned, with the possible exception of Mr. Shakespeare, "The Taming of the Shrew."

A Rich Young Tamer.

"The Taming of the Shrew," whether he knew it at the moment or not, really was the tale Mr. Adams was penning when he wrote "In Person," for it concerns the practical kidnaping by a clear-thinking and slightly stubborn young man of means of a beautiful motion picture star, suffering a nervous breakdown from too much mob violence during a tour of personal appearances, and in self-defense wearing a disguise that caused strong men to shudder and weak ones to faint, and his drastic method of convincing her that they ought to be married.

The method pursued by this strong-willed young fellow was completely negative—even after he had discovered that his "patient" was a blonde beauty instead of a black-wigged twin of the third witch, he refused to concede her identity as Carol Corliss, the cinema's queen regnant. A visit to the small theater adjacent to the mountain lodge where they were living in innocent isolation, and unabating belligerence, to see one of her pictures, had no effect beyond precipitating a trumped-up shotgun marriage, engineered by the small and unkempt daughter of the sheriff and the immaculate Jay Holmes, the Corliss leading man in all her flickers.

Even the double-barreled wedding didn't hold, because Mr. Holmes' name appeared on the license in place of the urbane Emory Muir's. It was Mr. Muir who owned the will of iron and the temerity to marry the gal.

At any rate, Carol went back to the studio and was in the midst of a scene for her next picture, when in bursts Emory, still testy, still argumentative, still opposed to the Holmes person and still intent on marrying the star in his own right at the urge of a great but concealed passion that had been raging in his bosom all that time. So there it is.

Boasts Scenic Beauty.

In the screen telling there are many neat and effective touches. The mountain lodge is set amid natural beauties that in themselves are almost justification for the making of the picture.

Then, too, opportunities are logically introduced for Ginger Rogers to do the first solo dancing she has essayed since way back yonder before she made her first costellar vehicle with Fred Astaire. And it is very good solo dancing, too. And the songs to which it is done are catchy and sung in an assured and throaty manner by the constantly improving young actress who made her first impression in this sort of thing in "Forty-Second Street."

The men in the case are George Brent and Alan Mowbray. Both are gentlemanly comics who lend their work a polish and literate glibness that add greatly to its effectiveness. Then there are the rural comic types, impersonated no less successfully by little Joan Breslau, as the inquisitive youngster of the hills; Louis Mason, as her paw, and Spencer Charters as the convenient justice ever present in times of marrying. On the urban side are Grant Mitchell and Samuel S. Hinds.

Disguise Is Perfect.

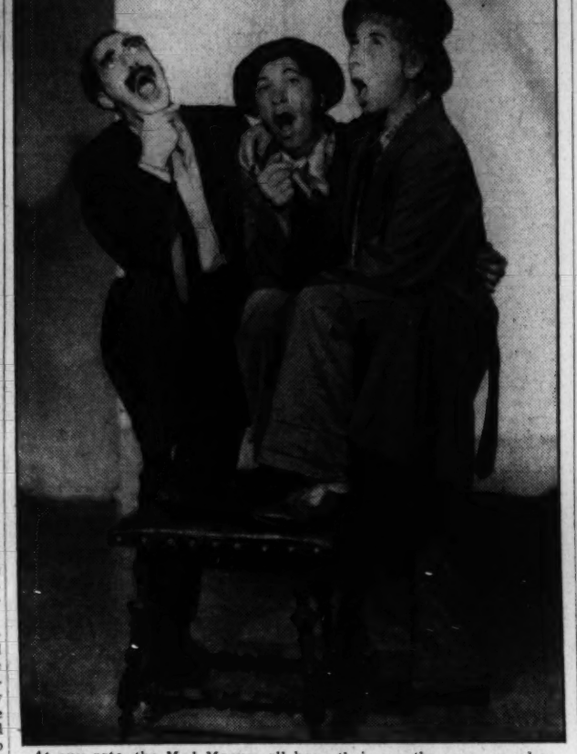
And you would be no less than struck dumb by the terrific metamorphosis that can be wrought in Miss Rogers' platinum loveliness by a black wig, a pair of spectacles and a set of "buck" teeth!

No wonder Mr. Brent almost fell off that rock when he saw her indulging in her matutinal ablutions out in the chill waters of the lake that early morning!

The supplementary features of the bill are headed by "Metropolitan Nocturne," a tragic story of Manhattan at night, told wholly in music and action without a spoken word. The composition of a fine bit of melody under the inspiration of a beautiful girl leads through slum, Park avenue, a jazz dance palace and Carnegie Hall to suicide when the girl betrays a crushing faithlessness. This is a sterling example of the cinema's unassisted power of dramatic expression that won a round of applause from a rapt audience yesterday afternoon.

"Molly Moo-Cow and the Indians," a cartoon comedy in the new Technicolor — a superlatively good one, by the way—and a new issue of the Pathe News, which leaves that disputed Army-Notre Dame play as much a puzzle as ever, are the additional auxiliaries of a feature that does rather ample justice to Ginger Rogers' debut as an individual star.

This Might Be Opera, at That!



At any rate, the Mad Marxes all have their mouths open, as when singing. It is their task in "A Night at the Opera," however, to do the clowning and let the singing take care of itself—which it extremely well does through the excellent voices of Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones, whose vocal efforts throughout the picture are as serious as the Marx boys' activities are lunatic. Singing from left to right, the boys are Groucho, Chico and Harpo, all of the Marx tribe. "A Night at the Opera" opens on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow and no judicious moviegoer will miss it.

Regarding that Pathe News matter of the penalized pass interception in last Saturday's Army-Notre Dame game in the Yankee Stadium in New York, it seems that if the defensive player touched the ostensible receiver of the pass before he touched the ball, it was an illegal play; if he touched the ball before he touched the receiver, it was a legal play under the rules. The film shows the play three times in slow motion, the last, in comparative close-up, and I don't know yet precisely what happened at point of contact of ball and players. Paul Gallico and the rest of the commentators who appear in the reel are smart to leave decision in the controversy up to the spectator. They probably don't know what happened, either.

Home-Town Gal Makes Good.

There is a home-town girl who made good in "Anything Goes," coming to the National the week of Monday, December 2.

This gifted young woman was born and educated in Washington and made her first local stage appearance of note as a protege of Joe Brown's in the first "Going Native" all-Washington revue, staged by Gene Ford at Loew's Fox Theater.

She is Marjorie Mitchell, former student at Western High School and George Washington University.

Deciding, after her sophomore year at G. W. U., that she had had her fill of academic work, Marjorie took up dancing in a serious way and began to go places in taps, eccentric, ballet and acrobatic. It was she who did a dandy bit with Jay Kimmel and Eddie Perkins, the then dancing and singing ushers at the Fox, in one of those "Going Native" skits. And now she comes home on the big time.

In achieving this distinction Miss Webster joins a distinguished roster of other Washingtonians who have gone on to fame and fortune in the theater and on the radio.

There will be a good-sized delegation of "I-knew-her-whenners" down front on that Monday night when "Anything Goes" opens.

And speaking of Jay Kimmel, as we seem to have been, briefly, he is the surreptitious lad who has been leaving all those packages of "nuts to you" greetings on the drama desk every night since Sunday. Finally we caught him smilingly in the act. That was last night.

They were peanuts last night and, as this is written, we are about to burst.

At least, there is no hope in the kindly message conveyed with the provender by the Mad Marxes, through the proxy of the loewcal Loew executives. This is what it says: "If you keep eating these nuts, they'll probably kill you. So will the Marx Brothers' insanity. But it's pleasant to die laughing!"

As if we didn't know. We died laughing at the Maniac Marxes over in Baltimore a couple of weeks ago—as we told you at the time.

But what the boys expect us to say is that Groucho, Chico and Harpo open on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater in "A Night at the Opera" tomorrow.

Naturally, we have no intention of saying it, what with that big ad on this page and all!

Personal Preference Note.

Tomorrow night, if it's all the same to everybody, how's about making it cocoanuts glace?

Marx Brothers Reach New Top In Insane Fun

Latest Comedy Leads List of Thanksgiving Week Theater Bills.

Since nuts are practically synonymous with Thanksgiving, the Loew executives have seen to it that the foremost "nut" comedians of stage and screen will be prominent among the stars of their local bills next week. Beginning tomorrow and continuing over the holiday, the attraction on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater will be the Three Marx Brothers—Groucho, Chico and Harpo—in "A Night at the Opera," the most hilariously lunatic feature ever filmed. With a background of legitimate grand opera, this subject runs the gamut of comical lunacy. The action is initiated in Italy, moves to an ocean liner and comes to a cyclonic conclusion backstage in a theater where a performance of grand opera is doing its best to survive the assaults of the three madmen who have taken possession of the place. The stars are at their ridiculous best and are supported by a competent cast vacally led by Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones.

On the stage, Ed Lowry will smile his way through the vaudeville bill as master of ceremonies and raconteur. Among those whom he will introduce will be the Slate Brothers, dance funsters; Norman Frescott, June Carr, the Allen Kent Foursome and the Five Jansleys.

Fox Movietone News and a Phil Lampkin overture will complete the gala bill.

• • • •

"Frisco Kid," the Warner Brothers' pictorial rehabilitation of the Barbary Coast of the San Francisco gold rush days, will be the major film offering on the screen at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with James Cagney in the title role, supported by Margaret Lindsay, Ricardo Cortez, Lili Damita, Donald Woods, Barton MacLane, Fred Kohler, George E. Stone, Robert McWade and scores of others.

The story principally concerns Cagney's experiences from the time he landed as a shanghaied sailor until he reached the peak of his career as the Golden Gate's greatest gambler and racketeer.

The Three X Sisters, vocal harmonists, will headline the Thanksgiving stage bill at the Earle. Their talents already are known here. Others on the program will include Edgar Bergen, ventriloquist; Helen Reynolds and her skating champions, and Cherry and June Preisser, dancing starlets and gymnasts from the South.

Newsreel and orchestral contributions under the conductorship of C. Frederick Clark will complete the bill.

• • • •

Jan Kiepura, Polish singing star of the European cinema, now in this country under contract, will be pictured on the screen of the Belasco Theater, beginning with Friday evening's late preview in "My Song for You." In this subject the voice that first thrilled the Capital from the screen of the Rialto Theater will be heard in both operatic selections and ballads. The supporting company is one whose talents lend themselves to both drama and music. The program will be rounded out by a varied list of short subjects including a new issue of the Pathe News.

• • • •

Warren Hull, Margaret Lindsay, Ruth Donnelly and Anita Louise are the principal players in "Personal Maid's Service," a new comedy-drama, which opens a week's engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow. The story is a gay one of a maid's influence on the members of a family by which she is employed. Warren Hull in the role of the young husband is a comparative newcomer to screen roles of importance. Short sound subjects and full, 15-minute newsreel will complete the program.

• • • •

Compiling attendance records, regardless of the inclemency of the weather, that seldom have been equaled in the history of the motion picture in Washington, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Mutiny on the Bounty" tomorrow will enter its second sensational week as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater. Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone, Dudley Digges, Stanley Fields, Henry Stephenson, Donald Crisp and a host of others are cast in the roles of prime importance. This is a feature that should be on every "must" list.

• • • •

William Powell, Rosalind Russell, Binnie Barnes, Lionel Atwill and the others prominently cast in the M-G-M production of "Rendezvous" will renew the F street popularity of this breezy picture beginning tomorrow on the screen of Loew's Columbia. The story is a thrilling one of spies and cryptography in Washington in war times. News events, a comedy subject and added short reels will complete the bill.

• • • •

Beginning today at the Little Theater on Ninth street and continuing the chief feature of the bill through Saturday, "Whoopee" will be offered in revival. This was one of Eddie Cantor's greatest screen successes. Based on the stage comedy of "The Nervous Wreck," the picture is executed in Technicolor and enlists the services of a huge beauty chorus.

• • • •

After an absence of two seasons, E. M. Newman will return to the stage of the National Theater on Sunday in the first of three successive Sabbath afternoon traveltalks. His initial topic will be "Italy," which will be followed by the no less timely and interesting "Ethiopia." The final subject will be "The South Sea and Cannibal Isles," Sunday's talk will be illustrated with both motion pictures and "still" photographic studies.

• • • •

Herbert Faye will be the chief funster in the cast of "The Rainbow Girls," opening a week's engagement at the Gayety Theater with the usual Sunday matinee. The Lovely Lolita will be the featured feminine member of the cast. Others in the troupe include Lew Brown, Zuleika, Jean Wade, Barbara Janis and the Lester Montgomery Girls. As an added attraction, Princess Chang Lee will offer her dance. "Lanterns of China."

'Dummy' Park Bank Accounts Charged by U.S.

Entries Opened by Stuntz With 'Overdrafts,' Is Government Claim.

Two dummy accounts, one totalling $10,000 and the other $14,000, were opened in the defunct Park Savings Bank by Robert S. Stuntz, former vice president and executive officer, with "overdrafts," it was testified in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Government witnesses, in the trial of Benedict M. McNeil, a former assistant cashier of the bank.

McNeil is under indictment with his father, Alexander McNeil, and Stuntz, on charges of conspiring to embezzle $50,000 from the bank, and also with conspiring to commit larceny of $50,000. His father died soon after the indictment, and Stuntz, whose accounts were approximately $1,250,000 short, committed suicide when bank examiners refused to permit the institution to open its doors after it was closed early in March, 1933.

Government witnesses yesterday stated two dummy savings accounts were utilized by Stuntz. One, in the name of Robert P. Smith, was for $10,000. Smith denied he had ever had a savings account in the bank. The other, in the name of A. G. Williams, was for $14,000. Smith had a commercial account in the bank, it was shown, but there is no such persons as "A. G. Williams," the witnesses said.

Asked why the two accounts were started with overdrafts, Miss Emily Harrison, savings bookkeeper, said:

"They were dummy accounts."

Assistant United States Attorney J. J. Wilson expected to conclude his case against McNeil today, after which Defense Attorneys R. E. Lynch and James F. Reilly intimated they would ask a directed verdict of not guilty.

Police Hopeful Of New Hot Tip In Loring Death

Itzel Asserts No Story Book Theory Can Clear Up Mystery.

Investigation of the Corinna Loring murder has now reached the stage where police, though not admitting that they are up against a stone wall, are hoping for a "break."

This might come in the form of a telephone call to the inquiry headquarters in Upper Marlboro. Or it might come in the form of an anonymous letter, or a visit by somebody with real information to impart to the investigators.

Already, of course, there have been many mysterious telephone calls and letters. But, so far as the investigators have been able to determine, these have come from well-intentioned persons who were repeating silly rumors or from a particular type of individual who finds it impossible to stay out of a murder mystery.

"Tips" Versus "Theories."

Somewhere, police believe, is a person—not necessarily the killer—who can supply them with the information that will lead to a solution of the crime.

Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, the Baltimore detective in charge of the crime, is a practical investigator. He is frank to tell reporters that crimes are not solved in reality as they are in story books. A "hot tip," in his opinion, is worth a thousand theories.

Yesterday Lieut. Itzel was in Baltimore to attend the funeral of a relative. Upon his return he plannned to go over the mass of testimony that has been taken down by a stenographer from various persons who have told their stories in the Marlboro Courthouse.

Itzel wants to check these statements to determine whether anybody has been withholding facts.

Meanwhile Robert W. Hicks, Washington criminologist, who has been given the tangible evidence in the case, is attempting to learn something from a torn piece of a man's shirt sleeve which was found on Saddleback Ridge in Mount Rainier, not far from where Corinna's body was discovered.

Seeks Clew in Shirt.

Hicks said that if he could establish the size and make of the garment, police could focus their attention on men known to wear such shirts.

Some of the investigators feel that the shirt fragment, together with other pieces of so-called evidence, is without value. Saddleback Ridge, they point out, has been a dumping place for all kinds of debris.

The only real evidence, as these investigators see it, is the wrapping cord with which Corinna was strangled and possibly the man's driving glove found near the murder scene.

Murder in the Capital

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Who was the slayer of quiet Corinna Loring, almost on the eve of her bridal day?

As ace detectives seek to unravel this ghastly crime, The Washington Post has been delving into the histories of unsolved murders in and around the District.

The fifth of the series, "Murder in the Capital," appears this morning. It deals with the murder of pretty Beulah Limerick, who was mysteriously shot in her humble home.

Even the most imaginative tabloid reporter could not lift the murder of Beulah Limerick above the cheap and sordid crime that it was.

Were it to happen today the chances are it could not be made into the sensation it became in the garish booze-struck jazz-mad days that saw prosperity die.

Beulah Limerick was a child of her age, without standards, without education, but not without a certain charm that went well with her companions. Despite her nympholeptic attributes, her craze for gin, and her futile search for satisfaction along the honky-tonk road of pleasure, she had imagination and perhaps she had a soul. At least she had a yearning. She was to die with a bullet in her brain and her name, known secretly and briefly cherished by too many men, was to flash as brazenly on the front pages as the dance hall lights she loved above all else.

It wasn't because Beulah Limerick was murdered that her name became familiar to newspaper readers. It was because the police, since that December day in 1930, when she was found dead, have sought in vain for her slayer. It is a crime that is twisted about with mystery and futility. It has been deafened by the crying of hounds up dead alleys following footsteps that have not even disappeared as definitely as the legendary Dorsey Foutz, who slipped into the sewers toward nothingness to become the ghostly scourge of the Metropolitan Police. It's a case that gets nowhere because it began all wrong.

Beulah Limerick was the nymph of the Anacostia flats. She was 19 years old and in a coarse way gifted with certain graces and good looks. Dissipated, nevertheless it did not show in her face. Her figure was youthfully attractive. But she had no standards, except those of jazz, and she knew more about the vagaries of sex than most girls of her age. Her whole philosophy may seem in the name of the club to which she belonged. They called it the "Sky High Whoopee Club."

Married at Age of 15.

She lived at 18 Nineteenth street. Beulah had lived there for some time after her marriage—at the age of 15—had been annulled in 1925. She worked as an usher in Poli's Theater, a task which did not bring her much money. Her nearest friend was a married woman who did not let that state of affairs prevent her from going almost nightly to cheap dances with Beulah. In the house also lived her brother, Vernon Limerick, 18, and Richard Reed.

On the night before her body was found Beulah went to a dance. Her companion was one William Paddy, a 22-year-old boy friend. They went, that night, to the Capitol Heights Odd Fellows Hall. They drank a bit and danced a lot, making whoopee sky high. They listened to the band. Beulah was sweet on the band leader, and her strange, discordant diary, found later by detectives, made frequent reference to him. About 1 a. m., Paddy took her to the house on the flats. That much is known.

Apparently Beulah went straight to bed, but perhaps she never went that night until, dead, she was placed upon one. But she was seen lying in one at 4:45 when Reed, aroused as usual by his alarm clock, went downstairs to light the fire in the kitchen stove. He passed within 6 feet of her body, he was later to tell police. He said he saw her there, curled up like a kitten, the bedclothes tight about her form. It was very cold.

Then there is a lapse.

At 8:30 her brother, Richard, shook her to awaken her for the day. She failed to respond. Richard was startled. This was the first time he had seen death quite so close. Just what he did is not clear. He called members of the family. Someone notified the police.

Then there is another delay.

Dead for Several Hours.

It is not until 10 a. m. that a Casualty Hospital ambulance rolled up to the door of this house with a young interne riding the front seat with the driver. He testified later that he found the girl all "laid out," her cheeks red with rouge, lipstick on her lips. She had been dead several hours, he believed. She was cold and white beneath the pathetic attempt to make her look vividly alive.

He was later to tell that sheets and the pillow of the bed were immaculate, as if they had been freshly placed. He looked the still form over. He found blood in her mouth. "Hemorrhage," he said, and went his way, leaving it to the coroner to issue a death certificate.

He didn't find what had caused the hemorrhage, and it was this that delayed police even more.

He didn't find the bullet in her head.

He said her hair was smooth and unruffled, there was nothing to lead him to the hole in her head.

At 6 o'clock that night an undertaker found the hole. Police were notified. They went to the house. There they found two sofa pillows soaked with blood, and there were indications, they said, that the body had been tampered with before the interne had seen it. But the lead was 12 hours cold.

Bullet in Mattress.

They found in Beulah's bedroom an exploded .25-caliber cartridge. Through the matress a bullet had ploughed, lodging in the floor. They did not find the gun.

It is problematical whether the bullet the detective found was the death bullet.

The policeman on the beat later told a story of constantly watching the house. Not, he said, for any interest in any one but because he planned to have the place raided. He told of indescribable orgies, when he testified at the inquest, that startled even the most hard-boiled listeners. Beulah, he said, took part in them willingly, even eagerly.

He said that the day after the body was found he entered the house and found another empty cartridge in a teacup in the kitchen.

But Mrs. Dora Limerick, Beulah's mother, said she had come to the house after her daughter's death and washed and dried all the cups and dishes. She had seen no shell.

Four Acquaintances Arrested.

He said he saw a man leave the house at 2 a. m. and that at 4 he flashed his light through the window, saw the girl lying in bed.

Four of her acquaintances were arrested as suspects, and others, including a man who at one time she was supposed to marry but whom, her diary revealed, she didn't like, and a middle-aged man who had given her money were questioned.

Assistant District Attorney Julian Richards presented the case to the grand jury. None was indicted. The suspects were freed after being held 47 days.

Later a golf pro admitted the murder. His story was proved a hoax, he having told it in the hope of collecting a reward to pay $800 to his brother, who was pressing him for the money.

Last spring a Washington newspaper claimed it had found the "death gun" in an ash heap behind the house. It was a .25 caliber, but because of its rusty condition tests failed to prove it was the gun.

The case is still open.

Sylvia Meyer Is Symphony's Soloist Today

Harpist Will Be Heard in Afternoon Concert at Constitution Hall.

A young woman, whose interests were in college athletics and geology before she turned to a career in music, will appear as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall this afternoon.

The artist, Miss Sylvia Meyer, will be presented by Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, when the orchestra plays its first midweek afternoon program of the year at 4:45 p. m.

Miss Meyer, while making her first appearance as soloist with the National Symphony, has been its first harpist for two years. She now lives in Washington, coming East after receiving her college education at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wis., her home city. There she took part in musical events, as well as in other campus activities, but because of her special interest in sports she held offices in the university's girls' athletic association.

Her harp lessons were started at the age of 7 in Holy Cross Academy here. In 1929 she continued her musical studies in the East by enrolling in the Peabody Conservatory at Baltimore. The conservatory in 1934 awarded her the only artist diploma it has even conferred on a harp student.

This afternoon she will play two numbers for harp and orchestra, Debussy's dances, "Sacree" and "Profane," and Ravel's introduction and prelude. Dr. Kindler also will conduct the orchestra in Brahm's First Symphony, and in Mendelssohn's overture, "Fingal's Cave."

Missing Boy Reported On His Way to Tampa

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 20 (AP).—Thomas B. Pearce, wholesale merchant here, today said he had received word that his missing son, Tom, jr., a sophomore end on the Citadel football team, had spent a night at Gainesville, Fla., and was seen at Orlando, apparently on his way to Tampa.

Pearce expressed a belief the boy was going to visit his grandfather at Tampa. Tom, jr., left the Citadel, at Charleston, a week ago without notifying his parents or college authorities.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Nov. 20.

FRED ALLEN, after fumbling lines while doing a scene in "Thanks a Million," merely said to the director and the players: "It should be cool here—the way I'm blowing."

This gives a picture of Allen on the set. He was greatly concerned, nervous in the new medium, but always Fred Allen. He was given the scenario. He read it and wrote in gags for himself, or he changed lines so that they sounded like him.

His real name is not Allen, but Fred Sullivan. He also has been known as Paul Huckle, European entertainer, and Fred St. James, world's worst juggler.

He was born in Cambridge, Mass., a Sullivan, on May 31, 1895. He was working in a hardware store in Boston when his theatrical career began. A friend had been booked to appear in an act, salary $5. The friend became frightened. Allen went on for him. He was then billed as Paul Huckle—and he had yet to visit Europe.

• • • •

He then went into vaudeville. He was a juggler. He wore a red wig. He called himself Fred St. James—World's Worst Juggler, before other people called him that.

After he returned from a tour of Australia, he changed his name to Allen so that the Keith vaudeville office wouldn't continue to give him the same small salary. This explains the change in monickers.

He wears expensive clothes, but they don't look it. He always has a pocket filled with notepaper. He also carries a card on which he lists the things he has to do during the day. A card will read: "Get shoes shined. Take banjo lesson. Buy book. Meet wife at 5 o'clock."

The wife is Portland Hoffa, who is on the radio with him. He met her when they were both in the "Passing Show of 1922." He hasn't a nickname for her. She hasn't one for him.

• • • •

HE ISN'T a big eater, but he is a slow eater. Once a week he likes to have an Italian dinner. One night several years ago he suddenly stopped drinking. He is now a very moderate drinker. He smokes cigars. He chews tobacco when no one is looking.

It was during a rehearsal of the show, "Polly." He was chewing tobacco when he was summoned to sing the song he had in the show. He couldn't get rid of the tobacco. His singing voice wasn't any too good, and what with the tobacco, the song was taken away from him.

He took a summer course at Harvard in public speaking. When in New York he goes to a gymnasium daily, works on a rowing machine and plays handball. He seldom goes to a night club. He says he'd rather spend an evening with William Shakespeare than with N. T. G.

• • • •

He actually likes to stay at home reading and working. He has one of the greatest collections of books on comedy. He claims that he knows the origin of many gags, and is proud of the fact that he can take seasoned jokes and give them seasoning.

When a youngster, he worked in a Boston public library. He was popular at school. He had access to the teacher's room—and often knew in advance the questions which were to be asked in class.

He shaves himself, prefers a bath to a shower, and is taking hair treatments to keep from being bald.

He insists upon getting eight hours sleep. He doesn't object to company, but they must know when to leave. He has a sign in the living room which tells the guests that they can stay and have a good time until 2 o'clock. Then they must leave because, says the sign "I need my rest."

• • • •

HE SLEEPS in a twin bed, wears the coat and trousers of his pajamas, doesn't snore very much, likes to read in bed and favors his own bed so he can eat in it if he wishes.

He owns a bungalow at Old Orchard, Me., where he goes when he's really on a vacation. His idea of vacation is to go to this bungalow with just Portland Hoffa. They are alone. There aren't any servants. Portland does the cooking. It isn't always her idea of a vacation.

His back teeth are all chipped, the resut of a trick he used to do while juggling.

His Hollywood movie debut was in rain sequence. He'd play the scene with water being poured down on him. He'd have to do the scene again and again. He said the radio was much nicer.

Landon Dodges Candidacy Issue

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 20.—Gov. Alf M. Landon, replying to queries at a press conference today, said friends had asked that he permit use of his name in Presidential preference primaries next year.

Asked what course he would take, the Governor, mentioned as a possible Republican candidate for President, said:

"I'm too busy looking after my duties as Governor to give any consideration to the matter."

Pressed as to whether he would consent to use of his name, he replied:

"I'll cross that bridge when I come to it."

Gov. Landon repeatedly has declined to discuss national politics or indicate whether he will be a Presidential candidate.

He said he did not know regulations governing entrance of names in the nearly score of States providing Presidential primaries for selection of delegates to national party conventions.

Interest in Landon's future course with regard to the primaries was raised as a result of reports that the name of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, will be entered in the Republican primaries.

Husband Arrested; Wife Failed to Go to School

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 20 (AP).—Augustus Bowers, 25, was arrested today, charged with failing to send his pretty 15-year-old wife to school. He posted bond for a hearing.

School officials said the wife, Bertha Williams Bowers, had not attended West Junior High School since last April. She was married shortly before last Easter.

Mrs. Bowers, her black eyes sparkling, asserted she did not intend to quit school, but was absent on the advice of her physician, because of nervousness.

Accused as Drunk, Man Dies in Cell

Hair Tonic Bottle Found in Prisoner's Pocket.

Stricken in a cell at the Third Precinct, where he was held on a charge of intoxication, George Dorsey, 48, 906 Twenty-sixth street northwest, was pronounced dead by a physician from Emergency Hospital, called by Station Clerk T. B. Hurdle, who found Dorsey ill.

Capt. Arthur E. Miller, of the Third Precinct, said Dorsey was arrested Tuesday night by Privates S. S. Bryant and C. F. Thompson for being drunk. At the time of his arrest, Dorsey had a bottle of hair tonic in his pocket. A small amount was missing, Capt. Miller said.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the body to the Morgue for an autopsy.

50 Ships Tied by Strike.

Glasgow, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Fifty ships were tied up here today, unable to discharge cargo due to a strike of 4,000 dock workers demanding better wages and improved working conditions.

Report on District-Virginia Boundary Dispute Due Dec. 1

By the Associated Press.

The reports of the commission studying the Virginia-District of Columbia-Potomac River boundary—a subject of controversy since 1791—yesterday was in the final stages of its draft.

Former Gov. Charles Brough, of Arkansas, chairman of the commission, said the report, which is to be submitted simultaneously to the Virginia General Assembly and Congress for ratification, will be ready for publication about December 1.

The dispute is over whether the Virginia boundary lies at the low water mark as the Government claims.

Taxes on property along the Alexandria water front and in the vicinity of Hoover Airport recently brought the matter to a climax.

Brough was appointed to the commission by the President. W. C. Gloth, of Arlington, was named by the Governor of Virginia. Together they appointed the third member, M. S. McConihe, of Washington.

Miss Moffett To Christen Navy Vessel

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Navy tradition goes on in the Moffett family, straight down to the youngest member, Miss Beverly Moffett, sub-debutante daughter of Mrs. William A. Moffett, and the late Rear Admiral Moffett, who lost his life in the Akron disaster. Miss Moffett, a charming, golden-haired miss, has been invited by the United States Navy to christen the destroyer which is to be named for her distinguished father. Mrs. Moffett and her daughter will go to Boston for the ceremony, December 11, at the Boston Navy Yard. After the ceremony, Miss Moffett will be eligible to become a member of the Society of Sponsors.

The Moffett family has long been outstanding in Navy, as well as residential circles, in Washington. Some years ago, Miss Janet Moffett, now Mrs. Elliott MacFarlane Moore, made her debut in Washington and was one of the most popular of the season's debutantes. Mrs. Moore is the widow of Lieut. Moore, U. S. N., and with her three small children spent last winter in the Capital with her mother in their home on Massachusetts avenue. At present, she and her children are in Coronado, Calif.

Lieut. George H. Moffett, also in the Navy, is stationed on the West Coast, while another son, Lieut. William A. Moffett, is in Washington. The youngest son, Charles S. Moffett, is a midshipman at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis.

The christening of one of Uncle Sam's ships is a great honor, only bestowed on those closely associated with the Navy, or some high dignitary of the Government. Last month, Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, the former Miss Helen Carusi, christened the new destroyer Cassin, named for her great-great-grandfather, Commodore Cassin, at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. About 20 years ago, Mme. Lombard, as Helen Carusi, christened the old destroyer Cassin, at Bath, Me., little realizing that it would become one of the most famous of our ships which took part in conflict with German submarines during the World War.

Two other young girls, cousins descended from an American naval hero killed in the harbor of Tripoli in 1804, have been chosen sponsors for the new destroyer Somers, named for Lieut. Richard Somers, who lost his life in the war against the Barbary pirates.

Secretary Stimson has announced that Miss Marie Ann Somers and Miss Suzanne Somers will do the honors. It is unusual for a child to be named sponsor for a warship, and yet all of these young ladies have been chosen to christen these great ships named for their fathers and forefathers. The launching of the Somers will not take place until June 1, and will be the third United States warship to be named in honor of the lieutenant. The first was purchased during the war with Spain, and converted into a coast torpedo boat. The second vessel, destroyer, served from 1920 to 1931, when it was scrapped.

Farley Named Party Sponsor

Sodality Benefit to Be Given Tonight at St. Matthew's Church.

The Postmaster General, Mr. James A. Farley, will be among the sponsors for the benefit card party which will be given this evening at 8:30 o'clock by the ladies of the B. V. M. Sodality of St. Matthew's Church at the Mayflower Hotel.

Among sponsors for the affair will be Frau Leitner, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy; Mme. Yoshizawa, wife of the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy; Mgr. Edward L. Buckey, Mr. Leo Crowley, Mrs. O. H. P. Johnson and Miss A. E. Murphy.

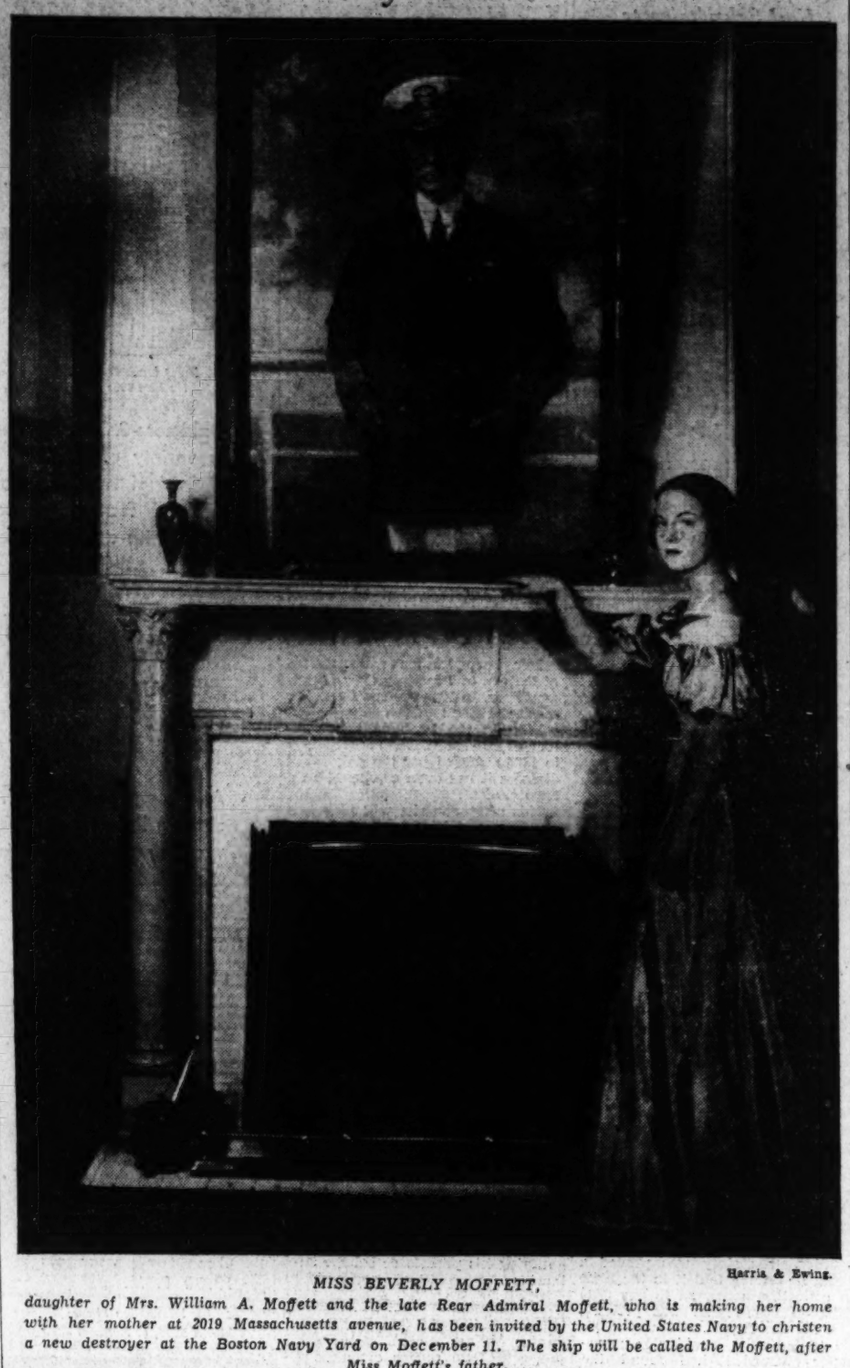
The reception committee will include Miss Catherine Burke, Miss Kathryn Griffin, Miss Mary Mangan, Miss Dait Daly, Miss Florence Eichen, Miss Matilda Haney, Miss Mary Riley, Miss Sarah O'Neill, Miss Mary Hannan, Miss Isabelle Mallon, Mrs. Helene Mahon, Mrs. P. F. Hannan and Mrs. Marion Martin.

Members of the committees in charge of the arrangements for the affair include Mrs. William Franklin, Mrs. A. D. Effer, Mrs. P. F. May, Miss A. Donlin, Miss Julia Donovan, Miss Frances O'Brien, Miss Yolanda Geraci, Miss Vernona Geraci, Miss Helen Fitzgerald, Miss Regina Coady, Miss Marion Curtin, Miss Laura Mary Daly, Miss Venita Hinkel and Miss Catherine Brown.

Hostesses Are Named for Rector's Aid Bazaar

Hostesses for the annual bazaar and turkey dinner which will be given this afternoon and evening by the Rectors Aid of All Souls' Church will include Mrs. Harry C. Grove, Mrs. Ira Shantz, Mrs. Dion S. Birney, Mrs. Charles D. Drayton, Mrs. John B. Hyde, Mrs. H. C. Whitehurst, Mrs. John Rubert Mohler, Mrs. Ward Evans, Mrs. Eugene Abadie, Mrs. Margery Huntress, Mrs. George Pegram, Mrs. J. G. Fields, Miss Liza Lane Wessells, Miss Pauline Block, Miss Charlotte Block, Mrs. Herbert Lee Smith, Mrs. Clifford Bangs, Mrs. T. C. Willis, Mrs. Halbert Payne and Mrs. Howell French.

To Christen Destroyer Named for Father



Harris & Ewing.

MISS BEVERLY MOFFETT,
daughter of Mrs. William A. Moffett and the late Rear Admiral Moffett, who is making her home with her mother at 2019 Massachusetts avenue, has been invited by the United States Navy to christen a new destroyer at the Boston Navy Yard on December 11. The ship will be called the Moffett, after Miss Moffett's father.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

The Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, has returned to the Legation after a week in New York. While there the minister attended several functions in his honor, and delivered a lecture on the Byzantine Churches in Constantinople.

Senator William H. Dieterich, of Beardstown, Ill., is visiting here for a few days. He is staying at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Representative and Mrs. Samuel B. Hill arrived here a few days ago from their home in Spokane, Wash., and have opened their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel, for the coming season. Representative Hill is the ranking member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Miss Nancy Leiter, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, was a guest last night at the ball given at the Ritz Carlton, in Boston, by Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield to introduce to Boston society her niece, Miss Pauline I. du Pont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. du Pont, of New York and Winterthur, Del.

Among the other out-of-town girls who were guests of Miss du Pont at the ball were Miss Anne Scull and Miss Mary Peabody, of Philadelphia; Miss Rosalind Everdell, Miss Martha Frick, Miss Eve Mortimer and Miss Susan Mary Jay, all of New York, and Miss Nora Bullit, of Louisville. Miss Leiter is expected to stay over for the Yale-Harvard footbal game week-end.

Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant will speak at 3 p. m. Monday at Tuxeden, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, in Edgemoor, Md., before the Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery County and guests.

Mrs. E. M. Pickens and her daughters, Miss Helen Pickens and Miss Winifred Pickens, have moved from their home at 3700 Massachusetts avenue, and have taken residence at the Shoreham for the winter.

The marriage of Miss Anne Wyant, daughter of Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, of Washington and Greensberg, Pa., and the late Representative Wyant, to Mr. Philip Larner Gore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Gore, will take place at 4 p. m. today in the Washington Club, and will be followed immediately by a reception.

A dinner was given last evening at the Woodmont Country Club, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Nat Aaronson, in celebration of their fifteenth wedding anniversary. Preceding the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Aaronson entertained the 30 guests at cocktails, in their apartment at the Ponce de Leon.

Dr. Margaret Justin, of Manhattan, Kans., is a guest at the Dodge. Dr. Justin is Dean of Kansas State College and is in the Capital attending the meetings of the Land Grant Colleges.

Mrs. Hollister Sturges has left Fairfield House, her country home in Stone Ridge, Ulster County, N. Y., and is at 65 East Fifty-fifth street, New York, for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturges spent a part of last winter in Washington, when they maintained an apartment at Wardman Park Hotel.

Miss Virginia Cowles, daughter of Dr. Edward S. Cowles, of New York City, will spend the Thanksgiving holidays in Washington as the guest of her sister, Miss Mary Cowles.

Miss Virginia Cowles recently returned from a trip to Italy and Africa, where she interviewed Mussolini and Gen. Balbo. Her sister will entertain at a cocktail party in her honor on Friday, November 29, at the home of Mrs. Austin Kautz.

Mr. John Russell Pope, of New York City, is at the Carlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cutler, whose marriage took place several weeks ago, have returned from their wedding trip and are residing at 2620 Adams Mill road.

Mr. Norman Paschal Davis, who has spent the past two weeks in Washington, will return to New York tonight. Mr. Davis is a son of Mr. Norman H. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guthman have returned to their home in New York, after passing several days in the Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sampson are entertaining their nephew and niece, Prof. and Mrs. F. R. Millard, of Showa-Machi, Kimitsugun, Chiba-ken, Japan.

This is their first visit to the East and they are leaving next week for St. Helena, Calif., where they will spend the winter with relatives, returning to Japan in August.

Mrs. H. Hagner To Sponsor Ball

Thanksgiving Dance to Be Held at Mayflower Next Friday.

The Thanksgiving ball which will be held in the garden at the Mayflower on Friday evening, November 29, will be an interesting dance, especially for the many boys and girls who are home from college.

The ball will be sponsored by Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, and receiving with her will be Mrs. Wrisley Brown, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., Mrs. John Edward Fowler, Mrs. Landra Beach Platt and Mrs. Lutz Wahl.

Miss Katherine Brown is chairman of the girls' floor committee, and Mr. Nathan D. Bartlett, chairman of the men's floor committee. The vice chairmen will be Miss Frida Frazer and Mr. Lyle O'Rourke.

Roberts Hosts To 30 at Dinner In Curtis Club

Secretary Morgenthau and Capital Visitors Among Guests.

The Curtis Club, at 1925 F street, was again the scene of a party last night when the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert entertained at a dinner for more than 30 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert, the popular "Chip" and "Evie," returned to Washington last month from Europe, where their marriage took place, and since they have been back have been in a continual whirl of entertaining, at which they were either guests or hosts.

The ranking guests at the dinner were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, who returned from a European trip shortly after the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Robert. Other guests included a number of Washingtonians and a distinguished group from out of town. Among the latter were the Governor General of Puerto Rico, Blanton Winship, who is spending some time in the Capital; Senator Millard Tydings, of Havre de Grace, Md., who speads a great deal of time in the Capital even when Congress is not in session; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Walker, of Meadville, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Elliott White Springs, of Lancaster, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson, of Atlanta, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Woodruff, of Wilmington, Del.

Cornell Experiment Seeks to Instill Emotional Maturity in Adults Still 'Adolescent'

Eyelid Lotion Supplies Oils Needed by Skin

Beauty Aid Also Makes a Superlative Base for Powder.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

MANY WOMEN vanquish age successfully by watching the first signs of its approach and tackling them. When they note permature indications such as crows' feet and wrinkles around their eyes they waste no time in getting to work on them.

Of course, there is regrettably a large number of women whose defensive action consists mainly in wishing the lines away and lamenting their appearance. It's this type of woman whom age conquers first. The other type which says, "Now let's see what causes this, and what can be done about it?" stays perennially young looking.

She it is who will welcome the news of a certain beneficial eyelid lotion, ideal for the delicate tissues around the yes and definitely anti-wrinkle.

When the lids are crepy, this lotion is just the thing for restoring them to normal. It supplies the natural oils that the skin needs to be smooth and soft.

When your eyes are tired, sore, or inflamed, just warm a bit of the lotion, apply it by means of a cotton pad, and it proves remarkably soothing.

Although this beauty aid was designed especially for the sensitive skin around the eyes, it is nevertheless a superlative powder base and skin tonic.

Informal Note Paper.

MANY TIMES the occasion arises for brief, informal notes. You want to drop a reminder, a casual invitation, or a thank you note, and you've nothing close at hand that serves your purpose. That's where the informal note paper, featured in a downtown store, comes in. Twenty-four folders monogrammed free, in either gold or silver letters, and 24 envelopes cost the surprising amount of 69 cents.

Naturally, the value is more. You can tell that when you see the quality of the paper. But this is a special and an extra, extra special at that.

Tailored Blouses.

A GROUP of beautifully tailored blouses made by a firm of men's shirtmakers are among the highly desirables in a downtown store.

These, in the words of one greatly impressed customer, are "blouses what are blouses!" And sure enough they are!

When you wear one of these, you may know that the seam isn't going to break loose at the least strain, and that a year from now it isn't going to look like a relic for the rag bag.

The blouses come in several attractive materials, most popular being Camel Spun and Firefly. They're available in a variety of colors and several different styles.

Sugar Cane Now Available.

THOSE OF YOU who hail from the Sunny South must have a soft spot in your heart (or should one say appetite?) for sugar cane. Until a short time ago it was almost impossible to ship this product hundreds of miles because it dried out before it arrived, and secondly there was no market for it. However, now that fast moving trucks are coming in from the Southern seaboard States they are bringing with them this sweet and juicy cane. You may buy it in a local shop for 10 and 12 cents a stalk.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Speaker Byrns Is Fond of Deep-Dish Apple Pie for Dinner.

By Pattie Ellicott.

AFTER a hard day presiding over the House of Representatives, Speaker "Joe" Byrns rejoices when he gets home and finds deep dish apple pie for dinner.

The guests who enjoy dinners in the hospitable Byrns apartment in one of the big hotels join in the rejoicing when the thoughtful chef has included the Speaker's favorite dessert in his dinner plans.

No chef or homemaker will go amiss by following this recipe:

First take 6 to 8 tart, juicy apples, 1 cup of sugar, 1 teaspoon butter, ¼ cup water and 1 teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg, if desired. Then you are ready to start making the pie.

Invert a heavy china cup or a custard cup in the center of a baking dish two or three inches deep. Line the sides of the dish with strips of pie paste, letting the paste come a little above the edge of the dish. Do not put any paste on the bottom. Fill with apples, pared, cored and cut in slices. Add sugar, spice and water, and dot with bits of butter. Cover the dish with pie paste, slashed to allow the steam to escape, and pinch its edge to the edge of the paste that lines the sides of the dish. Bake for three-quarters of an hour, or until the apples are thoroughly cooked, in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for ten minutes, then 425 degrees F. for 30 minutes. When serving, slip the knife under the cup to allow the confined juice to mix with the apple. Serve hot with hard sauce.

Practical Ideas For a Nursery Are Suggested

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IN EQUIPPING a nursery, the first consideration should be floors and walls. These are best kept plain and neutral, partly for the sake of cleanliness, partly for practical use, and partly for restfulness.

Plain painted walls and woodwork are especially good in a nursery because they can be scribbled on, or have pictures pasted or pinned on them, and can then be washed easily or done over. Parents who wish some typical nursery note can put a frieze of animals or fairy tale characters about the top of the room. But the walls should be left bare, at least as far as the child can reach.

A plain linoleum or oil cloth makes the best floor covering. It affords a level base for building enterprises, can be marked with chalk for games and is easily washed.

The table is the next consideration. It should be low and large so that papers or tools can be spread out on it. If the room is small, it may be a folding table which can be set aside when necessary. The chairs should be of a height to fit the table, and should be light and comfortable.

There should be ample cupboard space, low enough for the child to reach. Shelves for toys should be deep, from 12 to 14 inches if possible, and those for books about 8 inches. If possible a couch or window seat should be provided where the child can sprawl on his stomach and read.

A block box on castors, which can be moved from place to place and slipped out of the way at need, is a practical addition.

Curtains and upholstery, if there are any, should be light and washable.

The room should be airy, and above all, well lighted, whether by day or night.

Stag Line on Way Out Says College Bulletin

The stag line is on its way out, says a bulletin on manners for young men which has just been issued by the University of Vermont. The bulletin abjures the young man at a dance never to leave a young woman alone in the middle of the ballroom floor, never to introduce himself to a woman unless there is good reason and to eat quietly, "without putting food on the back of the fork."

Christmas Cookies Subject of Recipe Contest This Week

THIS WEEK'S Post recipe contest offers five more women an opportunity to win a weekly prize of $1 each and in so doing make their prize-winning recipes eligible for the three grand prizes.

This contest is the sixth and last. The subject is Christmas or holiday cookie recipes. Send recipes to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post and mail them in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

The three grand prizes are a hand carved wooden salad bowl with matching serving fork and spoon, a combination cake server and box smartly styled of nontarnishing chromium and white porcelain, and a Dutch oven.

Sugar Content Of the Blood Affects Health

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

SUGAR CANE was observed growing in India by the soldiers of Alexander the Great, who brought back stories of the wonderful grass that yielded a juice sweeter than honey; and records are extant indicating that sugar was grown and refined in Asia Minor in the tenth century. The Crusaders encountered sugar cane and sugar factories in Palestine. Through the Moors it was introduced into Spain and in turn was carried by the Spaniards to the new world.

Do we eat too much sugar? As a nation we probably do, since we use more per capita than any other country with the possible exception of Australia. Some writers associate this fact with our relatively high incidence of diabets. The desire for sugar is stimulated by its pleasant, sweet taste.

Long before we knew much about the chemistry of the body a fair amount of knowledge existed relative to sugar as a source of energy. But only within recent years have we understood just how our billions of cells are fed by sugar and how its storage in the body maintains reservoirs for emergency use.

We can, of course, overload the digestive tract with sugar. If we do so it is likely to appear in the urine.

Methods have been devised by which we can measure exactly the quantity of sugar in the blood. We know that it is relatively large in amount after eating, but it slowly drops and, within two hours, approaches the fasting level. If we eat a slice of bread or take a lump of sugar the quantity again increases.

Exercise and infections use up energy, deplete sugar, and generate heat. Should heat be produced in the body to an excess degree (more rapidly than it can be eliminated), we recognize that we have a fever, that is, the temperature is higher than normal. This means that toxins, the product of disease, have set up an excessive oxidation of foods or have destroyed the heat eliminating powers of the body.

Knitted Pajama Suits Cozy For These Chilly Evenings

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Nights when the window panes are silvered with frost, and the mercury seems determined to strike a new low, wise—and fashion-wise—ladies will tuck themselves cozily inside warm knitted things. Whether for lounging, or for the serious business of sleeping.

That two-piece, two-tone pajama suit sketched above, is cozy and and versatile as well. It can be worn for either lounging or sleeping, and comes in warm Renaissance color combinations, such as lilac and purple, pink and wine red, and different shades of greens and blues. Outfits like this will be filling the college "dorms" this coming winter.

The tuck stitch set sported by the lass sketched above at the right will keep her warm as toast, with its high shirtwaist neckline, and snugged-in cuffs at wrists and ankles. Even Aunt Agatha who's (perpetually cold in the winter) will welcome one like this on Christmas morning. It comes in restful colors, too. Pink, tearose and blue.

The military influence has certainly invaded all types of clothes with success. Even knitted robes. The miss sketched above at the left wears a robe with a high neck closing, and a row of military frogs parading up the front.

The old-fashioned bed jacket has certainly got up-to-the-minute fashion notions. Modern editions are gracious and elegant affairs. If you've all you need, one should be rushed instantly to a sick friend—or to one who just likes having breakfast in bed.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'M TIRED of sleeping on a day bed," a clever young business woman remarked the other day, "so I'm planning a real bedroom with a real dresser and all the rest—no more make-shifts."

And all because she visited a friend in the country for a week and slept in a big double bed with a head and a foot and quilts to turn down. She said she hadn't realized until after she got back to her apartment just why she had dreaded to leave that country bedroom. But it turned out that she missed that big old-fashioned bed most. "You've no idea how very much like a lady it makes you feel to sleep on a big bed after an era of being very sophisticated in a double duty apartment."

So she proceeded to shop for furniture and rugs and decided on a walnut poster bed that reminded her of the one she had slept on in the country. Then, of course, a walnut dresser and a chest of drawers. For the floor she selected a room-size flowered hooked rug—then added a little love seat and a slipper chair in jade-green chintz. At the windows she followed a rather new idea—having her curtains of jade chintz and made on a draw rod . . . with draperies in a flowered chintz on an ivory ground. The bedspread she made out of the same flowered chintz with jade welting.

"But don't forget the most important thing in making a bedroom that you'll really like—and that is the part that doesn't even show— good inner spring mattress and box springs. The chintzes may be pretty but you can't enjoy them if the bed isn't comfortable!"

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a young married woman with much time on my hands. Formerly my home was in the Middle West but after graduating from college last spring I came to this city. With Christmas approaching naturally I feel a little lonely and am inclined to get the blues. Yet I realize this is silly and must not be tolerated.

• • • •

Could you give me the address of some little girl whom Santa Claus might be apt to overlook? I would love to dress a doll for such a child and give her a few things which would make her happy at Christmas. I realize the charities take care of a great many cases, but I also think parents very often are too proud to appeal to such places. Perhaps you know of such a case. I am not trying to play Lady Bountiful, for our means are small, but would do this from more or less selfish motives. It is pleasant to give, and it would keep me busy. Sincerely, MRS. J. H.

Reaching Needy Children.

DEAR MRS. J. H.: The Christ Child Society of Washington, of which Miss Mary V. Merrick is founder and president, has for many years busied itself with gathering and making toys and garments which are distributed to children who write letters to Santa Claus telling exactly what they would like to find in their stockings Christmas morning.

• • • •

While the family names and addresses of these trusting petitioners are never given out, a sufficient description of the child is given his patron to enable the latter to invest her gifts with a gratifyingly personal touch. For instance, so Miss Merrick tells me, such a person as you might be given a copy of the letter from Edith, aged seven, who wants a yellow-haired doll with a blue sash and eyes that open and shut; also a pair of roller skates, a book and a woolly sweater. The clue to the child's identity is kept by number, and every effort is made to give her all she asks for. If one woman wishes to be fairy god-mother to one such child, the wish is granted, I understand, and the Christmas package reaches its destination by Christmas Eve.

• • • •

Miss Merrick lives at 2 East Melrose street, Chevy Chase, and her telephone number is WIsconsin 2517. On Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock there is to be a meeting of Christmas workers at her home, when plans will be completed for this year's program. If you would be interested in aiding the program, by collecting or distributing offerings or in making garments or dressing dolls, you are very welcome to attend the meeting, Miss Merrick says. The society gives to children regardless of age, creed or color; and help is gratefully received from persons of all denominations.

• • • •

Another suggestion is that you telephone Mrs. Ruth Montgomery, who has charge of the Christmas Bureau of the Council of Social Agencies. Her office telephone number is MEtropolitan 2284; her home, WIsconsin 4090. The Christmas Bureau is a collecting and distributing agency of Christmas gifts for underprivileged children. This bureau sees that Christmas packages are given into the hands of heads of families, who in turn play Santa Claus to their children.

• • • •

I don't happen to have the name of any one little girl to whom you might be Mrs. Santa Claus. But I have no doubt many column readers know such a little girl. If any communications are forthcoming, I shall forward them to you. I am glad you had the forethought to supply me with your name and address. M. H.

Strictly Speaking

What About This?

"In yesterday's 'Strictly Speaking' you gave under sentences containing errors this: "They built a beautiful nurse's home." Under the correction you gave the identical sentence. What about it?" J. T.

Check Here.

The correction should read, "They built a beautiful, nurse's home." The typesetter omitted the comma between beautiful and nurse's, which must be in the corrected sentence.

MISS FLORA ROSE.

Lack of Stability Is Blamed For Most of the World's Evils

By Malvina Lindsay.

THE DELIGHTFUL MRS. PETER PAN who simply can't grow up may not be regarded as so delightful in the future. The day may even come when devouring parents, adult stagers of temper tantrums, prima donnas of the home and the office, and even nations that act like spoiled brats may no longer be suffered.

This is a somewhat wishful picture of a society toward which an educational straw in the wind—an experiment under way at the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell University—is pointing. Miss Flora Rose, director of the college, defines it as "an attempt to meet the biggest task facing society, that of helping man achieve maturity."

Miss Rose, who is in Washington attending the convention of Land Grant Colleges, yesterday told modestly, even hesitantly, of the Cornell experiment in what is called "student guidance." "We are only feeling our way," she said. "We may not even be on the right track. But we think the biggest service the college can render is to help people grow up."

Most of the ills of the world today, Miss Rose believes, are due to adults' remaining children emotionally. That is often true of those most highly educated.

"It is no use for colleges to turn out brilliant babies," she said; "no use for graduates to achieve intellectual maturity unless it is accompanied by social maturity and emotional stability."

"Man has lagged behind the changes of his world of the last 100 years. He is more simple, immature and undeveloped than his environment. The educational forces of today—parents, teachers, colleges—must help the generations of the future to be adult ones."

Pursuant to this theory, the College of Home Economics at Cornell this year inaugurated the selection of students on the basis of their promise of maturity as well as their scholastic ability. Through simple questionnaires, personal interviews (posture and facial expression may even give clews to maturity) and study of family environment, members of the freshman class were selected. Only about one out of four applicants was chosen. The class, Miss Rose believes, is the most promising she has ever seen.

"We feel that the girl trained in home economics is a potential leader of the Nation either as a mother or teacher," she said. "And we believe that if she has emotional stability and maturity she will be able to carry furthest the training she receives."

Miss Rose would have it understood, however, that boys even more than girls need maturity training. "Women as a class are more mature than men," she said. "They have had to face reality to a greater extent. They have had as their basic responsibility human life and its continuance. Men have been able to take chances, to jump about more, to have temper tantrums and get away with it."

What were some other signs of immaturity?

"Possessiveness for one," promptly replied Miss Rose. "Possessive mothers are among he most immature persons at large. The patriarchal family may be vanishing in form but it continues in attitudes. Parents are mature enough to have babies and to rear them so long as they are children, but they are not mature enough to release them when they grow up.

Fear, indecision and an egocentric desire to be the center of the stage are other devils of immaturity the average person must fight, according to Miss Rose. "One uf our big troubles in teaching maturity," she said, "is that there are none' of us really mature enough to teach it."

How could one become mature?

Miss Rose laughed. "I'm almost afraid to say," she said, "because I can't practice what I preach. Too often I realize I'm hopelessly immature myself. However, I'm trying all the time to achieve more maturity. Just now I'm learning to design my own clothes. I never could make decisions about clothes unaided. Now I'm conquering my clothes problem. And that is a simple form of maturity every mother should help her children attain—the choice of their own clothes. Nothing gives such a sense of security as right and becoming clothes."

"Ongoing," is another term Miss Rose uses to denote the grownups of the world. "An ongoing person," she explained, is one "who adapts himself to the present in terms of the past and also looks ahead and lives as richly and effectively as possible. He sees things clearly. He uses his judgment; he is not given to day dreaming; he selects permanent instead of temporary values; he finds satisfaction in ongoing things.

"That is our ideal of maturity. We believe that if we can get it into the life of the family we can get it into the life of the Nation."

Menu Planned To Suit Adults And Children

Housewife Can Save Time and Money by Adopting Practice.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE WOMAN who must plan menus for adults as well as children will find it wise to base meals for both on one menu. Dishes that are easily eaten should be allotted to the children and if attractively served will be as acceptable to the adult.

An occasional fried dish that is perhaps too rich to be included in the diet of the younger child can be substituted by the same food prepared in a more easily digestible form for the younger members of the family.

The woman who follows this plan will save time as well as money, for a separate market order for the young child's meals and extra time given to the preparation of an entirely different menu is difficult to accomplish on a limited budget and in a household where there is one servant or none.

The menu suggested for today will be acceptable to the adult and with one or two exceptions to the small child.

Creamed Corn Fritters.

The corn served as fritters in today's dinner menu can be creamed if there are small children in the family. The sliced grapefruit and oranges are suggested rather than either fruit eaten from the skins because they are easier for the children to handle.

The bacon biscuits, if the children are too young to eat hot breads, can be substituted by crisp bacon and toast for the younger members of the family.

Gambling Law Charges Bring 15 Indictments

Grand Jury Also Names 3 Accused of Passing Counterfeit Bills.

Fifteen men were indicted on gaming charges and three others were named in indictments charging them with violation of the counterfeit money laws in indictments returned by the District grand jury yesterday.

James S. O'Donnell, Joseph Furr and Aubrey W. Jones were those named as having possessed and passed a number of counterfeit $20 bills.

On arraignment before United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage, O'Donnell and Jones denied their guilt, while Furr admitted his.

Forty counterfeit bills were passed in the District, police said.

Morris E. (Dutch) Irwin, Edward J. Gibson, Wilbur S. Carroll, Leonard F. Hill, Frank E. Crandall, Morris A. Mahone and James McIntyre were indicted as a result of a police raid on an establishment in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest. They were charged with violation of the gaming laws and with conspiracy to violate the gaming laws.

Others indicted on gaming charges were William Poe Moses, William Arthur, Oliver P. Wilkins, Bryan George, Vincent A. Marino, Charles H. Kesecker, Louis R. Rupp, Walter Edward Tipton and Harry Milloff.

His activities in a New York avenue lunchroom and the Greyhound bus terminal, almost opposite from the lunchroom, led to the indictment of James W. Rand on two robbery charges. Rand was captured by Policeman Paul Baicar and R. G. Ankney, a bus dispatcher, after the bus terminal cash register had been robbed of $400 last Armistice Day.

Baicar was summoned from his post at Fourteenth street and New York avenue by persons who witnessed the Greyhound office theft. The alleged robber was later identified as the one who terrorized patrons of the lunchroom and escaped with the contents of the cash register.

Charged with passing countergeit 50-cent pieces on street cars, George Lebyak was indicted on a charge of violation of the currency laws. He was arrested October 3, after complaints had been made that half-dollars of doubtful origin were being palmed off on conductors.

Those indicted were:

Robert T. Moore, Clinton L. Coleman, Theodore R. Hawkins, Rufus Shart, James P. Frazier, Percy Honesty, William Edward Hayes, Leo Fendall Queen, Leroy Norman, Borelle L. Robinson, James T. Murphy, Walter Brown, James R. Williams, William Johnson, James Beasley, George A. Thomason, Richard B. Heck and Harry E. Eury, housebreaking.

John Oliver Driver, John Johnson, William Claud Bearss, John Trezevant, Robert W. Winker, Howard Glenn, Wilbur M. Parham, grand larceny; Nicholas J. Forte, David Pare and James E. Heard, joy-riding; Brunis Tilenda, blackmail and robbery; Julius N. McLenden, Linwood R. Simpson, George H. Lamb and James W. Rand, robbery; Marie Williams, assault with intent to commit robbery.

George Lebyak, violation of section 277, title 18, U. S. Code; Sam Foti, violation of section 261, title 26, U. S. Code; Oscar W. Alexander and George W. Heacox, forgery and uttering; James A. McEaddy, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1935; William P. Moses, William Arthur, Oliver P. Wilkins, Bryan George, Vincent A. Marino, Charles H. Kesecker, Louis R. Rupp, Walter E. Tipton, Harry Milloff, Edward J. Gibson, Morris E. Erwin, Wilbur S. Carroll, Leonard F. Hill, Frank E. Crandall, Morris A. Mahone and James McIntyre, gaming charges; Harry Henry Hester, violation of the white slave traffic act, and George Albert Jones, second-degree murder.

Moon Over Broadway

New York, Nov. 20.

LISTENING to Libby Holman's torchy laments at her Versailles opening, I wondered to myself if there was any former so wealthy . . . . Mary Pickford, Eddie Cantor, Al Jolson—these are in the millionaire class, and Rudy Vallee is close to it . . . But the Holman girl is in the $7,000,000 brackets . . . Her son is worth $6,662,350 as the crow flies to the United States Mint . . . Libby herself won a bequest of $750,000 . . . . But money apparently is not everything . . . Miss Holman returns to her torch-singing because every performer gets a terrific kick from the roar of the crowd . . . Her two weeks' engagement at the Versailles will supply that.

Funniest crack of the evening occured when Harry Ritz, of the mad Ritz Brothers, danced by a table where sat Dorothy Fell and other socialites . . . "They're all of the 400," said Ritz to his partner, audibly . . . Then leaning quickly to Miss Fell, he said: "Act smart—act smart. Show her that you belong to fancy folks."

Peter Arno's new book, titled "For Members Only," is a gay and amusing collection of caricatures . . . I like best his drawing "Gay Young Set at Club Opening" . . . It shows a table of five bored youngsters in evening dress with this Arnoesque caption: "This gay and sparkling group of young socialites helped make the opening of swanky 'Le Cockatoo' a grand and glorious success. After enjoying several drinks on the house and borrowing $10 from the bartender, they went on to the Sirocco. The management is eagerly awaiting their next visit" . . . Earlier in the book, there is another idiocy which is amusing . . . A large lady is sprawled on a couch in the ladies' lounge . . . A bejeweled dowager is bending over her with smelling salts and saying: "And I say you couldn't have been slipped a Mickey Finn—not in the Rockefeller Rainbow Room."

Notes: Count Reventlow's real heart-attack is Elsie Plankinton, Bill's lovely sis . . . Bobby Le Branche and Will Rogers' daughter, Mary, are coupling . . . Capt. John McEwan, former Army coach, cracked down on Gen. Hugh Johnson before the Army-Notre Dame fracas . . . Recommended: Russell Swan, one of the defter magic men, at the Waldorf . . . Dempsey's party to Abe Lyman is the only afternoon affair most of us stayer-up-lates would attend . . . Morton Downey has canceled his London trip . . . Fred Astaire has taken this column's phrase, "Building Up to a Terrific Letdown" for a song title in his next flicker . . . Maestro Eddie Lane weds Dorothy Mitchell January 9 . . .

Add Curios: Because of the circus setup in the Hippodrome, more people light ciggies—and then stamp 'em out when they realize it's a theater after all. . . . "Thanks a Million," at the Center, is swell flicker entertainment . . . it will be Dick Powell's biggest money-maker . . . Dan Healy's brother, Tony, is eloping with Edna Chase.

On Friday, Al Rosen, manager of Loew's State Theater, received a letter from a gentleman . . . It was on embossed stationery and couched in a dignified tone . . . The writer pointed out that while leaving the box office with two tickets, a wind blew the pasteboards from his hand . . . He tried to follow their flight, but the crowds on Broadway prevented this . . . His conclusion was that the manager of the theater should send him a pass for two, because he was certain that the theater did not want to hurt, even unconsciously, a patron . . . In the ordinary course of events, the request would have been granted . . . That afternoon, however, Rosen had occasion to talk to Jerry de Rosa, manager of the Paradise Theater uptown . . . You've guessed the rest . . . The Paradise manager had received the identical letter from the same man . . . Calls to other Loew managers revealed that five letters in all had been received, at widely separated theaters, postmarked the same time and each reciting the same story of the wind blowing two tickets out of the plaintiff's hand . . . Yesterday Detective Johnny Cordes walked in on the chiseling letter-writer and the sequel probably would have made an excellent vaudeville blackout.

A reader forwards me a calendar pad of 1881 . . . The top of each page is decorated with some philosophical or moral sentiment . . . For Saturday, June 23, 1881, the author counsels: Innocent merriment and healthy wit are commendable; but if one aims to be a mimic or a wag, he loses respect, and is apt to be regarded as a buffoon" . . . Nevertheless, Sheila Barrett, the mimic, has been signed for the Rockefeller Rainbow Room and will double in G. White's "Scandals" and Mimics Eddie Garr and Al Bernie are doing very tastily, too.

Score up one for the movies . . . Frank Craven recently drew raves in this space by his fine performance in the flicker "Barbary Coast," in which he played the martyred editor of San Francisco's first newspaper . . . It was a splendid portrait of a courtly character . . . Craven returned to Broadway on Monday night in a piece called "For Valor" . . . The authors must have composed it while riding kiddie cars . . . Craven and June Walker's talents were wasted on a gentle, timid script and situations that were obvious . . . The oft-lampooned Coast tycoons gave Craven a part that he could get his teeth into, the Broadway stage gave him a lady finger.

AAA Proposes To Bar Traffic Lawbreakers

State Clubs Will Pass on Exclusion of Violators of Major Offenses.

Membership rolls of the American Automobile Association, under recommendations submitted yesterday to 800 affiliated clubs throughout the country, will be closed to any motorist convicted of a serious traffic violation charge.

The new policy, however, will not become binding until each State club has announced approval. In this connection, George W. Offutt, jr., chairman of the local A. A. A. advisory board, said:

"I have every reason to believe the board will support the policy. Also that our membership in adjacent Maryland and Virginia will approve. Our membership is composed of the more responsible and civic minded type of car owner and as a group has a fine traffic record. The advisory board will vote on the new policy within the next few days."

The plan was originally included in a resolution adopted recently at the national A. A. A. convention in Chicago. It read in part:

"State associations and A. A. A. clubs are urged to give serious consideration to the adoption of a policy whereby membership in their organization would be closed to persons whose licenses have been revoked, to persons convicted of drunken driving, leaving the scene of an accident and to those guilty of other major violations having direct and important relationship to public safety."

While studying the new policy, A. A. A. officials are continuing their program to promote safety on public streets and highways.

Sharp Boost In Tax Rate Seen for D. C.

Commission Study Forecasts Shortage in Annual Revenue.

Public Improvements to Lag Unless New Levies Are Given Approval.

Heavily increased taxation, relatively large increase in the annual Federal appropriation for the District, or a continued sliding behind in public improvements confronts District residents, it was disclosed by financial studies made public yesterday by the special tax committee appointed by the Commissioners.

Present District taxes, plus the $5,700,000 Federal appropriation the House lately has insisted on, will fall short by something like $7,350,000 a year of meeting the steadily increasing operating expenses and the burden of a "reasonable" program of necessary capital expenditures, such as schools, fire engine houses, parks and other needs, it was said.

Enactment of new utilities, inheritance, automobile weight and higher gasoline taxes, enumerated by the Commissioners for study by the committe, will produce only $4,350,000 additional revenue, it was estimated, leaving a balance of something like $3,000,000 which must be gotten through increased Federal appropriation or increase in existing tax rates or other new taxes, it was said.

Members Surprised.

Committee members were "appalled" by facts disclosed by their analyses of the fiscal history of the District for the last 15 years, a member said after the meeting at which no attempt was made to fix a detailed program of future expenditures or sources of requisite revenues.

E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel and committee chairman, has called another meeting for next Tuesday. He said a report to the Commissioners probably will be completed and submitted Wednesday.

Committee members indicated they do not intend to recommend increase in the present $1.50 per $100 rate on real estate. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has said real estate taxes should not be increased. Various other taxes have been suggested. These include an income tax, provided in a bill introduced in the House in the last session, a sales tax, amusement tax and others.

Financial Studies.

Financial studies prepared by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor and committee member, showed in five out of the six years ending with 1935, annual District expenditures exceeded revenues. During those same years, the Federal appropriation was cut from $9,000,000 in 1930 to $4,539,295 in 1935. This was done without incurring public debt because restricted appropriations in preceding years had accumulated a surplus of District moneys in the Federal Treasury.

Figures for the years were: 1930, revenue, $42,463,739; expenditures, $44,063,915; 1931 revenue, $43,635,349; expenditures, $48,918,233; 1932, revenue, $43,492,845; expenditures, $48,317,706; 1933, revenue, $40,063,808; expenditures, $43,724,835; 1934, revenue, $37,507,684; expenditures, $33,678,765; 1935, revenue, $37,543,084; expenditures, $38,952,733.

During the same years capital expenditures were: 1930, $13,143,277; 1931, $16,040,378; 1932, $14,189,102; 1933, $8,831,194; 1934, $4,037,881; 1935, $5,513,071. Capital expenditures carried in the appropriation act for the current fiscal year totaled $5,382,591.

U. S. Funds Separate.

These capital expenditure figures do not take into consideration any of the improvements which have been brought about through allocation of Federal funds, such as part of the cost of the sewage-disposal plant, adult tuberculosis sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., and others. Neither have the operating costs of the District, as set forth in the Donovan studies, taken into consideration the large amount of Federal funds which have been allocated for construction of highways, improvements of parks and playgrounds and other things. A good part of these moneys must be repaid with interest.

Maintenance and operating expenses have climbed from $17,378,359 in 1920 to $35,641,617 in 1936, the current year, the highest of any year. In only two of the 17 years was there any decrease. In 1923 they declined from the $19,404,335 of 1922, to $18,715,633, only to climb again the next year, 1934, to $20,067,810. In 1934 the cost dropped to $29,640,884, as compared with $34,693,641 in 1933. In 1935 the amount was $33,439,662.

In 1920 the total revenue of the District was $21,448,158 and the Federal appropriation, computed on a percetnage basis, was $9,953,256.

Each of the several members of the committee is to study further the figures discussed at the meeting and offer in the discussion at the next meeting such a program as he believes should be adopted. The committee is composed of Mr. Prettyman, Maj. Donovan, William A. Roberts, people's counsel; William P. Richards, assessor; Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, director of highways, and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

Hatless Heads, But Warm Feet, Held Targets for Sinus Infection

At the meeting of the Tri-State Medical Society: (left to right) L. Clark Schilder, chief of the laboratory of the Bureau of Identification, Department of Justice; Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington County (Va.) coroner, and Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner. They participated in the meeting.

No Excuse For Hay Fever or Asthma, Medical Society Meeting Is Told; Mothers Blamed For Many Illnesses of Child.

Persons who spend their days in warm rooms and then open their windows wide at night in zero weather are cultivating head colds which are almost certain to end in sinus infections, Dr. T. A. Poole, Washington nose and throat specialist, yesterday told the Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia Medical Society.

"There is no excuse," Dr. Poole declared, "for sinus infection, asthma or hay fever. There is no excuse for tonsilitis. All those troubles are caused by secretions in the nasal spaces which are the result of persistent head colds. Clean out the nasal passages and you will have removed the basis of the troubles."

Others who appeared on yesterday's program of the society's semi-annual meting at the Shoreham Hotel were L. Clark Schilder, chief of the laboratory of the Bureau of Identification, Department of Justice; Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner; Drs. Richard Dunkley, Thomas M. Foley and W. C. Stirling, all of Washington.

Mothers to Blame.

Mothers, Dr. Poole pointed out in the discussion which followed his paper on "Nasal Sinus Infections of Childhood," are often to blame for their children's contracting head colds.

"They keep the windows open during storms so that snow or rain sometimes actually falls on the child's bed," said the physician. "Fresh air is necessary, of course, but not to the extent where it induces a head cold. Some mothers permit their children to go hatless. That's bad, even for adults. Those same mothers usually see that their children's feet are warm and protected. Well, we only have one sense in our feet. We have five in our heads. It's time we were giving protection of our heads a little more thought."

Schilder, who addressed the 40 or more physicians at luncheon, explained that one reason the fingerprint is still the most important means of identification is the persistence of the fingertip to retain its identity despite attempted mutilation.

"John Dillinger spent $5,000 to have his fingertips mutilated but the operation was not a success," said the Department of Justice official.

He pointed out that although the ridges on the tips are fixed about two months before birth they give no clew to heredity or to race.

"Sometimes," he added, "there is a striking similarity in the prints of identical twins."

Aspergillus fumigatus infection, a disease often mistaken for tuberculosis, was described by Dr. Richard Dunkley. The infection usually affects the lower right lobes of the lungs and induces night sweats, fatigue, periodical rises in temperature and other symptoms typical of tuberculosis.

New "Death Masks."

Dr. Foley, in discussing "Fractures of the Pelvis," pointed out that this form of injury has increased greatly in the last decade due to automobile and airplane accidents. He advised the transporting in hammocks of all persons suffering with pelvic fractures from the scene of accident.

"Many times the position the injured must assume in the back seat of an ordinary car aggravates the injury before treatment can be started," he said.

Coroner MacDonald explained the value of moulage, a type of mask, in making permanent records to be used in the study of crime. He told how the paste-like substance can be applied to injured portions of a body, making a perfect cast which records all types of wounds.

"All bodies in the District must be buried within seven days," said Dr. MacDonald, "but through moulage we can have exact duplicates of the corpses which may then be studied indefinitely in criminal cases."

Scientists Add Blood Vessels To Heart Wall

Method of Furnishing Nourishment Tried on Animals.

How new blood vessels may be developed for supplying nourishment to the walls of the heart was explained to the Medical Society of the District last night in an address by Dr. Claude S. Beck, associate professor of medicine of Western Reserve University.

Dr. Beck's subject was "The Heart as a Surgical Organ." He called attention to the past treatment of heart diseases by internal medicine and said that it was becoming increasingly apparent that in the future certain aspects of heart treatment, including that of dreaded angina pectoris, would be aided by surgery.

The new method of furnishing new blood vessels to the heart wall itself, in hearts where these vessels have become impaired, has been developed by animal experimentation in which existing heart arteries have been gradually closed off artificially while grafts of muscle from the chest wall have been applied to the surface of the heart. These animals have shown that their hearts have been adequately supplied with nourishment through the new vessels.

Dr. Beck announced that this operation has been performed on some human beings with some success and that when it shall have passed out of the experimental stages, it promises to be of considerable value in giving relief to certain types of cases of angina pectoris.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Thomas Lee, of Washington. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the society and retiring president of the Washington Heart Association, under whose auspices Dr. Beck addressed the society.

After the meeting the Washington Heart Association held its annual election. The following officers were elected: Dr. Lewis C. Ecker, president; Dr. C. B. Conklin, vice president; Dr. James W. Esler, secretary, and Mr. Samuel H. Kauffmann, treasurer.

Phone Rates To Be Shaved By $100,000

Elimination of Monthly Surcharges May Be Included.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday advised the Public Utilities Commission it would soon file a revised schedule of charges which would amount to a reduction of approximately $100,000 a year.

Notice of the company's purpose was given by Ralph A. Van Orsdell, attorney, and John A. Remon, general manger, of the company in a conference with Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman. Details of the contemplated reduction in charges were not submitted, Elgen said after the conference.

The reductions would be aimed at present so-called "nuisance" charges and would extend also to charges now made to large telephone users in the commercial classifications.

Reductions for Deaf.

They are expected to include reduction in monthly charges for special sets for deaf persons, reduction in the monthly surcharge for extensions in private residences and charges for extension lines from private branch exchanges in Government departments, hotels, business concerns and others using private switchboards.

Neither commission officials nor William A. Roberts, people's counsel, would comment on the proposal of the company.

"The commission will, of course, approve any rate or charge reductions proposed provided the proposed reductions do not mean an increased burden on other classes of service," Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said.

"Reduction in such charges as have been generally described must be studied carefully before approval is given," Mr. Roberts said.

"The company is enjoying a much greater increase in business than it expected. This, of course, has resulted in increased earnings. The question is whether the company may not be going too far in proposing reductions in commercial charges and rates so that nothing will be left for reduction of rates of private users at the next rate readjustment period."

Expansion of the Government departments and bureaus, which are spread over the entire downtown section of the city, has resulted in a large extension of telephone service, especially in the number of long branch extensions between the subdivisions housed in different buildings at a distance from each other, all of which are connected through the common headquarters private branch exchange.

Gain in Business.

Increase in private business and professional activities in the National Capital also has boosted the telephone business beyond expectations.

"The danger," Mr. Roberts said, "is that further reductions in commercial rates and introduction of additional promotional charges may cause an undue expansion of the telephone company plant which would be left on its hands when the extraordinary governmental activity ends.

"Such an eventuality would mean the ordinary telephone user of the District would be left in the position of having to pay, through high rates, the many millions of dollars which the over-expansion cost."

The company recently reduced mileage charges for branch exchanges to an amount of about $120,000 a year. Service connection charges also were revised downward and a $12,000 reduction was put into effect covering special message service.

Supreme Court Termed Wall Against Fascism

George Washington Debaters Declare Tribunal Safeguards U. S. as English Collegians Argue for Its Abolition as Oligarchic Unit.

Arguing in favor of a Supreme Court with power to overrule acts of Congress and the Executive, debaters of George Washington University last night held such a court constituted a safeguard against the advance of Fascism here.

But two representatives from across the seas, debaters from Cambridge University in England, said that if Fascism were to be halted, it could be checked only by the people—that a court alone would be powerless.

The Englishmen—who stated some newspaper had attributed "subversive influence" to them—came to Washington yesterday in the midst of a six weeks' swing around American colleges.

Some 250 and more collegians packed the room in Corcoran Hall, where the debate was held. In line with university policy, Prof. W. Hayes Yeager, chairman, explained there was no decision.

For Cambridge, John Royle, of London, stated the Englishmen had consented to debate the court issue because they had been asked by the National Student Federation.

The Englishmen argued for a supreme legislature, saying this would be consistent with democratic principles of representative government, and pointing to the case of England. Royle said such a step here would mean a gain in constitutional responsibility and morality, compelling legislators to determine for themselves whether a law were constitutional.

His partner, Cuthbert Alport, pointed out the Supreme Court's ideas altered with the changes in its personnel and argued that a representative assembly would be closer to the will of the people.

At present, he said, it seemed to him that "America has become less and less a democracy and more and more an oligarchy of nine men."

For the court, Dix Price, of George Washington, went back to the writing of the Constitution by men who recalled that an unchecked Legislature had nearly stripped them of their liberties, and he said:

"We may question the limitations the Constitution sets upon Congress, but, given those limitations, can we question the right of the Supreme Court to override the acts of Congress?"

Both he and the other local debater, William Goodykoontz, stressed that the Constitution could be amended, and also emphasized technical need of a high court to settle disputes between State and national laws in a Federal system.

It was Goodykoontz who brought up Fascism, saying the tendency had been more and more to leave defense of the Constitution to the Supreme Court, pointing to President Roosevelt's counsel of "let the Supreme Court decide" on the Guffey coal act. Goodykoontz cited recent anti-World Court and probonus drives as instances when the Legislature has been swayed by "minorities," and said the Supreme Court was above such influence.

Clegg Tells How U. S. Agents Carry On War Against Gangs

J. Edgar Hoover's men are fighting a war like that waged by the crusaders in the Middle Ages, Special Agent Hugh M. Clegg last night told the monthly meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution.

He intrigued an audience of 150 at the Mayflower Hotel with his description of the strategy used by the 640 highly trained agents of the Bureau of Investigation against the gangsters, who, he said, levy an annual toll of $120 from the pockets of every man, woman and child in the country.

Attacking the parole system, Clegg said "more than 10,000 crimes of violence every year are committed by men who are out on parole."

Maj. Amos A. Fries, chairman of the committee on correspondence and safety, outlined his efforts to end the teaching of communism in the District schools.

"What we are after is the teaching of militant Americanism," he said.

In answer to those who had publicly asked him why he did not advocate the suppression of information about fascism, he asserted "the Fascists do not openly advocate the overthrow of our Government by force and violence."

The following new members were elected: James Riehl Arnold, Zelah Rice Farmer, Clarence B. Hewes, Edwin William Lovejoy, Holland Huntington and Phineas Towne. The last three, transferring their membership from South Carolina, Massachusetts and Oregon, discovered that their ancestors fought side by side in the battle of Lexington.

Hazen to Be Honored At Civic Fete Dec. 2

Predicting success for the Exposition of Progress of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday accepted an invitation as honor guest at the "Civic Night" celebration, December 2.

Plans for the exposition, to be held at Wardman Park Hotel, will be considered at a meeting of the federation at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Lafayette Hotel.

Legion Gives Party.

Victory Post, No. 4, American Legion, gave an entertainment last night at the home of Vice Commander Jerry Ruppert, 447 Newton place northwest, in honor of high-ranking Army and Navy officers, who have been guests of the post during the year.

Civic Groups Study Helps For Traffic

Chevy Chase Body Scores Police Failure to Aid in Speeding Buses.

Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Urge Out-of-Town Trucks Be Re-routed.

Traffic problems were discussed by two citizens associations last night.

The Chevy Chase association adopted a resolution of disapproval at the "continued lack of police co-operation" in the expediting of public buses.

The group charged traffic officers give preference to private autos in traffic tie-ups. The association also said buses are not dispatched at proper intervals during rush hours.

The Capital Transit Co. was urged to build a bus terminal near Chevy Chase Circle which would conform with nearby structures.

Police Chief Wins Thanksgiving Dinner

The Southwest Citizens Association had a door prize last night at their meeting. It was a huge turkey.

Among the guests at the meeting was Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. He won the turkey. Asked what he intended to do with the bird, the burly Brown replied, "Eat it."

The Dahlgren Terrace Association recommended that out-of-town buses and trucks use New York avenue instead of Rhode Island avenue in going through the city.

Corner Cut-Off.

The group also recommended that the northeast corner of Eckington place and Florida avenue be cut off to aid flow of traffic, that T street northeast be widened between Third and Fourth street northeast and that the loading stop of westbound street cars be moved from the east side of Florida avenue and Eckington place to the west side of Florida avenue and First street northeast.

Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, advocated national representation for the District when he spoke at the meeting of the Southwest Citizens Association. He also said that important positions in the District government should go to local persons rather than outsiders.

Member Program.

In announcing a new program to increase the membership and number of boys clubs, Maj. Ernest W. Brown stressed the reduction of jevenile delinquency through the formation of these clubs.

Other resolutions adopted included objections to the unnecessary destruction of trees in Potomac Park and the Mall area, and the urging of immediate and favorable action by the Public Utilities Commission on a sliding scale arrangement to reduce Washington gas rates.

Chisox Place Simmons on Block for $100,000, or Players

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

OUT at Dayton, Ohio, where they have no legitimate business inasmuch as the baseball sessions there this week concern the minor leagues exclusively, big league club owners and managers are coyly laying the groundwork for future trades. They are in attendance only because the minor league session is a meeting ground for all baseball men and a sly remark dropped in the proper company might sow the seed of a deal that otherwise might never mature.

POVICH.

This dealing in baseball flesh is as complex as a battle of chess masters. Only the uninitiated among the owners and managers would haul off and make a flat offer to buy or sell a player, or hint even broadly that a particular player is the object of their intentions. The trades mature in a round-about manner, after a cautious feeling-out of the prospects. The man so bold as to unmask his intentions from the start is a setup for the shrewd folks of baseball who would milk him for every last penny he intended to pay, and more.

I give you now a typical conversation between a pair of club owners attempting to trade a pair of ball players:

Owner A: "If I knew where I could get a hard-hitting right-handed outfielder I might give up a pitcher for him."

Owner B: "Well, I might take a pair of pitchers and $25,000 for Joe Doakes, my star slugger."

Owner A: "Joe Doakes, that bum? Why, man, I said a hard-hitting outfielder. The league is full of Doakes'. I wouldn't give you the bat boy for him."

Owner B: "Don't worry about that, we'll keep Doakes. I wouldn't trade him for your whole lot of pitchers. We're building up a young team. We can't use any of your Methuselahs."

Owner A: "My Methuselahs, why, man, you're crazy. Look at the records. With a little more hitting behind 'em we'd a-won that pennant. But I'm willing to sacrifice a pitcher for an outfielder of the right kind."

Owner B: "You don't want to talk trade with me, Mister. You want to talk with somebody who just came into this league with dough to toss away."

Owner A: "Ha, ha. How about you trying to palm Doakes off on me? He can't hit a curve ball with a tennis racket. You're wasting your time, Mister."

Owner B: "I ain't gonna let nobody hold me up. Not for the kind of pitchers you've got. You don't want to talk trade, you're looking for charity."

Owner A: "I'll take Doakes for my two pitchers in an even swap, take it or leave it."

Owner B: "You're on. It's a deal."

Owners A and B (aside to their individual friends): "That's the sweetest deal I've made in years. That guy was a setup for my talk. Leave 'em satisfied, that's my motto, after I get what I want."

FAVORITE target of the club owners at the trading sessions is Tom Yawkey, free-spending owner of the Boston Red Sox, who was not long in being singled out by the dealers in baseball flesh as the sugar daddy of the league. Connie Mack was the first to recognize Yawkey as fair game when he sold him Lefty Grove for $125,000 and Rube Walberg and Max Bishop for $30,000 more. Clark Griffith, however, was not long in assuming the leadership of the Milk Yawkey League when he traded him Joe Cronin for a cool quarter-million in cash.

That was at the end of the 1934 season. Last season, Yawkey shelled out $15,000 for Dib Williams, a Mackian cast-off, and paid the Browns $20,000 in addition to Outfielder Julius Solters and Pitchers Paul Andrews for Second Baseman Oscar Mellilo who, at the present rate of exchange, is valued below either Solters or Andrews, to say nothing of the $20,000 the Browns gained in the exchange.

But there's no stopping Yawkey. Currently, he is engaged in attempting to buy Jimmy Foxx for $150,000. Whenever Mack is convinced that Yawkey has reached his top offer, Foxx will go to the Red Sox. For two seasons now, Yawkey's prodigious offers have stifled trading among other clubs in the league, each owner with a player to sell gauging his price by what Yawkey has been paying and being laughed off by rival owners who don't possess Yawkey's pay roll.

Clark Griffith, who takes more than moderate pride in his sobriquet of David Harum of baseball, was himself maneuvered out of $5,000 by the shrewdness of Rogers (Trader) Hornsby in the Buck Newsom deal last summer. Hornsby had asked $50,000 for Newsom; Griffith had offered $35,000. Hornsby telephoned the home office in St. Louis for instructions. "Take the $35,000," he was told. "Not a penny less than $40,000, they say," Hornsby told Griffith. And Griffith made the deal at that figure.

Grid Leaders Stake Hopes For Title

Six of Seven Undefeated Teams Risk Records on Saturday.

California, T. C. U. Seen Exposed to Greater Upset Threats.

By Alan Gould

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Six of the seven remaining winning streaks in major intercollegiate football ranks will be at stake this Saturday on widely scattered gridirons. The possessor of the seventh, New York University, prudently takes the day off in preparation for a final stand against Fordham on Thanksgiving.

The latest reports from our operatives indicate California's Golden Bears and Texas Christian's Horned Frogs are being exposed to greater risk than any other inhabitants of the gridiron zoo. The Bears play at Stanford in the West Coast's annual "big game." T. C. U. entertains the Rice Owls, champions of the Southwest in 1934 and beaten only by Southern Methodist this season. Both games involve superheated rivalries.

California Choice.

California is a 7-to-5 choice in the betting, but the selection in this corner is Stanford. It looks like a struggle between two superb defensive lines in which Bobby Grayson's ball-carrying and Monk Moscrip's placement goal-kicking will be deciding factors. Last year Stanford won, 9 to 7, without Grayson or Moscrip, both casualties, and the presence of these two stars in good health certainly figures to balance California's admitted improvement over 1934 form. In addition, California is more likely to feel the well-known "Rose Bowl pressure," although the Golden Bear line, a stronger unit from end to end, may display enough stuff to offset Stanford's psychological advantages.

Rice, like Stanford, is in a superb spot to knock off one of the Nation's unbeaten pace setters. Texas Christian, like California, has an advantage in the line that may prove decisive, but Rice has a pair of All-America backfield candidates in Bill Wallace and John McCauley, known far and wide in the Southwest for their exploits as the "touchdown twins." The choice here is T. C. U., but it looks like a five-alarm affair.

S. M. U. to Play Baylor.

There's at least the outside chance of an explosion elsewhere in Texas. Southern Methodist comes back home crippled by the loss of Fullback Harry Shuford, to play Baylor's Bears. The "Pony Express" probably has sufficient resources to meet the emergency but Baylor sprang an upset last year and won't be likely to act sympathetic this time. Shuford's loss is a real blow to S. M. U. The best blocker and plunger on the team, he also has been calling signals and clearing the way for the spectacular Bobby Wilson.

Princeton's right to high ranking on the national list will be put to a severe test by another unbeaten and untied aggregation, Dartmouth, in the East's outstanding game. The Tiger powerhouse figures to win this one by at least two touchdowns. Last year the final tally was 38-13 in Princeton's favor with pretty much the same material involved, but Dartmouth has unquestionably made big strides under the coaching of Earl (Red) Blaik and Harry Ellinger, former West Pointers. No matter what the outcome, neither team will listen to Rose Bowl inducements.

West of the Alleghenies, football followers at large remain skeptical of Princeton's right to be classed with the country's foremost teams, especially those in the Big Ten or Southwest. This is based, first, on the generally misguided notion that Eastern football still is decadent, and second, the specific point, well taken, that Princeton has played a "creampuff" schedule.

Rugged citizens of the Midwest simply cannot visualize the presence, for example, of Minnesota manpower at so cloistered a spot

False Economy Blamed for Fatalities

Five Reforms Are Urged; Rules Committee Is Taken to Task.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The American Football Institute blamed "false economy" practiced by school boards throughout the Nation today as a major contributory cause of the annual toll of football fatalities and serious injuries.

In a report announcing the results of a recent national survey, John da Grosa, institute president, also took the national football rules committee to task because high schools are not represented on it, and pointed to such representation as one of the five major reforms necessary to make the game safer.

He listed four immediate causes through which his survey found serious injury and death has occurred, and held that each of these was tracable "straight back to the men who make financial budgets for the education of American youth."

"These causes," he said, are:

"Haphazard selection of coaches and improper teaching facilities; inadequate equipment, improper technique in the execution of fundamentals, and lack of proper medical supervision."

"Because financial budgets in high schools and small colleges," he explained, "rarely provide for more than one coach, the man selected is required to handle three and sometimes five coaching assignments in various fields. This is not only an unhealthy condition; it is practically suicidal. * * *

"Because of the necessary physical contact in sports as we know them in America, and especially in football, these existing conditions become at once false and dangerous economy. To correct them, it is necessary to accomplish the following reforms:

"1. Select coaches and assistants with the same care exercised in the employment of classroom teachers.

Protective Equipment.

"2. Insistence upon the use of approved protective playing gear and equipment, scientifically designed and laboratory tested—not necessarily meaning equipment indorsed by prominent coaches; for the endorsers rarely purchase this equipment for their own teams.

"3. Impressing upon the young coach the necessity of teaching sound fundamental principles, because players well grounded in fundamentals are rarely injured.

"4. Establishment of safety clinics, properly supervised.

Defense Is Stressed In Georgetown Drill

By Lewis F. Atchison.

ALTHOUGH Georgetown's plan of battle for Saturday's game with Maryland calls for strong, offensive football, Coach Jack Hagerty yesterday indicated that his men will be ready to meet Maryland's running game with an ironclad defense. Virtually all of yesterday's practice was devoted to removing rough spots from defensive work.

Hagerty has good reason for stressing defensive play. Only five teams have scored on his men in two years, but Georgetown lost all five games. Maryland was one of the three which turned the trick last season and the youthful Hilltop mentor is determined that history shall not repeat.

Lost to Richmond.

Until the Richmond game last season Georgetown was undefeated and unscored on, although it had been tied by New York University. The Spiders, too, found the Hoya line impregnable for three periods, but with precious seconds ticking away in the final quarter and Georgetown leading, 13-0, they unloosed a barrage of passes that netted tow touchdowns and a 14-13 victory.

Maryland scored and defeated Georgetown, 6—0, and finally Western Maryland scored and won, 13-0. The Terrors, it is interesting to note, were the only club actually able to gain through Georgetown's line. Richmond scored through the air, and it was a 76-yard run by "South" Sothoron, who intercepted a pass, that arranged the setting for Maryland's scoring play. At that it required four downs, actually five, as a penalty gave the Terps another chance, to get the ball over.

This year Georgetown's line has successully repulsed charges of opposing backs. Albright jolted the Blue and Gray with a surprising 7-0 victory in the season's curtain-raiser, scoring on a lateral pass to Ripple. The Hoyas got by the next two opponents before meeting with New York University. They were leading, 6-0, when Nate Machlowitz got loose with a punt and returned it for a touchdown, and again Georgetown lost, 7-6.

So Hagerty figures that to win his men will have to hold the Terps at bay. None of this two touchdowns to one, or three to two, but one or more to nothing. Otherwise, it looks like a holiday for the Hilltop cheering section.

Police Quell Riot as Palace A.C. Loses to Maryland A. C., 21 to 0

A POLICE riot squad won the lion's share of honors last night at Griffith Stadium as the Maryland Athletic Club continued its uninterrupted march through semi-pro ranks with a 21-to-0 victory over the Palace Athletic Club.

One of the bitterest games of the season, the fray ended in a riot that sent Ozie Wray, Maryland end, to the hospital with a badly cut lip that required several stitches. Police were summoned from nearby No. 2 Precinct and three scout cars and a patrol responded and dispersed the crowd. The game attracted less than 1,000 fans.

Wray exchanged blows with Joe Healy, Palace halfback, who accused the Maryland player of "kneeing" him. Both teams were penalized frequently and heavily for rough tactics, and one was directed at Healy, who, officials allege, struck Wray after a scrimmage. The incident interrupted play about a half-minute before time expired.

The riot attained its greatest fury as the teams and spectators were leaving the field. Wray and Healy had heated words and followed with a flurry of blows, one of which landed flush on Wray's lip. Two policemen on the scene were unable to control the mob and sporadic fighting broke out around the goal posts. Reserves finally brought the situation under control.

Willis Benner, Maryland quarterback, accounted for all of the winner's points, scoring a touchdown in the first period and two in the last. A passing attack, Dick Nelson to Benner and Wray, aided in the rout.

Arkansas Plans Game with G. W.

Tentative negotiations are under way for a George Washington-Arkansas football game at Little Rock during the Arkansas State Centennial celebration next year, Dr. J. C. Futrall, president of the University of Arkansas, told the alumni association of that institution at a dinner last night at the University Club, Fifteenth and I streets northwest.

If completed, the plans would include a return game here in 1937, the speaker said. A game here in 1936 would be prevented, he went on, by an Arkansas "suicide schedule," the Southwest Conference rules requiring each member to play every other member of the conference, and an intersectional trip being regarded as too heavy to add to the strain of meeting such schools as Southern Methodist, Rice, and Texas Christian in rapid succession.

G. U.'s Home-Coming Is Under Way Tonight

Georgetown University's homecoming program, which will be featured by the game Saturday with Maryland, will begin at 7 o'clock tonight with an alumni smoker and pep rally at Ryan gymnasium on the campus. Father Vincent McDonough, S. J., Father John Kehoe, S. J., and Head Coach Jack Hagerty will address the rally.

Several boxing and wrestling bouts have been arranged and the Georgetown Band and Glee Club will perform for the returning guests.

Army Gridders Start Drill For Navy

Yale and Harvard Work for Meeting; Princeton Shows Spirit.

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Planning to take Saturday's clash with Vermont in their stride, Army's gridmen began practice for the Navy game today with a dummy scrimmage and a view of Navy formations. The regulars, including those who had been resting since the Notre Dame game, watched the second team go through a stiff defensive scrimmage against Navy plays put on by the scrubs.

New Haven, Conn.—The Yale Junior Varsity demonstrated Harvard plays in a spirited two-hour dummy scrimmage with the regulars. Each of two varsity elevens ran through its repertoire of plays against the Jayvees before going on the defense.

Cambridge, Mass.—Dick Harlow, Harvard coach, announced his starting line for the Yale game after a drill in which the defense against passes was featured. Harlow named Capt. Shaun Kelly and Emile Dubiel, ends, Wilton Burton and Francis Maser, tackles; Frank Gaffney and Joe Nee, guards; Bobby Jones, center. He didn't announce the backfield order.

Princeton, N. J.—Displaying a snappy, confident spirit, the Princeton Tigers went through their semi-final hard practice before the Dartmouth game. A 45-minute defensive scrimmage, bringing good results, featured the long drill. Garry Levan, flashy back who has been on the sidelines with injuries most of the season, made a fine showing.

Baker Renamed To U. L. T. A. Post

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—President Walter Merrill Hall, a former "first ten" luminary, and fellow officers of the United States Lawn Tennis Association are slated for re-election by the association's nominating committee. Hall has been president for two years.

The other officers renominated are Holcombe Ward, of New York, first vice president; Joseph W. Ivy, of Kansas City, second vice president; Ralph W. Estcott, of Chicago, secretary, and Lawrence A. Baker, of Washington, D. C., treasurer. The annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A. will be held at Philadelphia February 8.

Giants Trade Parmelee, Is Report

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 20.—Rumors and denials fought to a noisy 24-hour draw today at the annual minor league baseball meeting.

Except for an admission by the New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals that they had made a deal, and a few scattered minor league swaps, every rumor was up in the stratosphere with the managers firing at them with denials.

Managers Bill Terry of the Giants and Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals said their deal would not be announced until the major league meeting in Chicago next month. The general impression was that the Giants swapped either Pitchers Roy Parmelee or Fred Fitzsimmons for Second Baseman Burgess Whitehead, a fine fielder held on the Card bench by Manager Frisch.

Parmelee Seen Involved.

Frisch has been hot after a pitcher; Terry has admitted he was just desperate for a second baseman. Of the two guesses on the Giant pitcher involved, the leading one was Parmelee.

The only other certain development of major league importance was that the Chicago White Sox hal Al Simmons, slugging outfielder who didn't slug enough last season, on the block for $100,000 in cash or a flock of players. Manager Mickey Cochrane, of Detroit, went into a huddle with the White Sox officials, ostensibly to discuss a deal whereby Simmons would go to the world champions for Outfielder Gerald Walker, a pitcher and Third Baseman Gilbert English, a recent Tiger import of promise from Portland.

Reports that the Philadelphia Athletics had sent Jimmie Foxx, Roger Cramer and Eric McNair to the Boston Red Sox for Third Baseman Bill Werber and a big wad of Tom Yawkey's money drew such a stormy denial from Eddie Collins, general manager of the Red Sox, Duke's Use of Movie Cameras In Scouting Draws Fire of N. C.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Nov. 20.—Disclosure that Duke scouted North Carolina with movie cameras for their game last Saturday today brought a denunciation of the tactics as "ungentlemanly and unethical" from the Tarheel campus and the rejoinder from Coach Wallace Wade, of Duke, that there was no rule against it.

Latest development in the post-mortem on a game which saw North Carolina's previously unbeaten team wrecked, 25 to 0, set a Southern attendance record of 47,000 and worked this section up to a new high in football fervor and fanaticism. Reports of Duke's movie scouting were brought into the open by the Daily Tarheel, North Carolina student newspaper.

Wade, at Durham, admitted his scouts had used cameras, but said it was done openly.

"Aren't the others doing the same thing?" he asked. "What agreement is there against it?"

Queried as to what other opponents had been scouted with movies, Wade said the cameras had been used only to scout North Carolina.

He then asked Forest Fletcher, of Washington and Lee, president of the Southern Conference, for an opinion and later made public the following telegram from Fletcher:

"Inasmuch as there is no conference rule against using pictures in football, I can see no reason for an objection."

Coach Carl Snavely, of North Carolina, was reticent when the subject was broached to him, but he asserted he had never used that method of scouting.

"I have made no protest," said Snavely, "and I have no comment to make except that I have never used moving pictures for scouting purposes."

The Carolina coach said he made use of movies in coaching his own squad.

Both Duke and North Carolina are members of the American Football Coaches Association and the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Daily Tarheel's editorial pointed out that both organizations have outlawed movie cameras for scouting.

Although there was some loose talk among alumni of a possible break in athletic relations, there was no indication from authorities of either school that any such step was likely or that anything more would come of the matter.

Little Says Methods Are Not in Disfavor

New York, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Lou Little, Columbia coach, chairman of the football coach rules committee, commenting on the tactics employed by Duke University in scouting football games, said that Wallace Wade's methods were not in disfavor.

"There is nothing in the rules, written or unwritten, that would prevent it," said Little. "The methods used in scouting, as I understand it, are almost entirely up to the college doing the scouting."

Further support came from Forest Fletcher, of Washington and Lee University, president of the Southern Conference, who telegraphed the Duke coach that "there is no conference rule against the use of motion picture cameras for scouting purposes and I see no reason why the motion picture camera should not be employed in scouting games."

Apprentice, Under Booker's Ride, Wins in Bowie Feature Race

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov. 20. Trainer Hirsh Jacobs, who leads the men of his profession by a wide margin in the number of winning horses for the year, added his 107th and 108th successes at this track today. Apprentice, a veteran son of Vulcain, won the Cecilius Purse, the day's feature race, and Saintlite, a 5-year-old, won the first race of his career in the day's fourth event. Both horses were flying the white and green of the B. B. Stable, owned by Isadore Beiber, of New York.

While Trainer Jacobs sent two very fit horses to the post, he also placed them in good hands for Ray Booker, a diminutive colored boy, gave each a "million-dollar" ride in every sense of the expression. In both cases he brought his mounts from behind after using rare judgment in keeping them free from trouble and retaining their punch for the all-important stretch run.

Masterpiece of Saddle.

Booker's exhibition on Apprentice was a masterpiece of saddle generalship, although it was conceded that he had the best horse in most quarters. Apprentice broke alertly, but Booker refused to be lured into trying to match the swift pace of Fortification. Instead, he placed his charge under slight restraint, while Sun Apollo went out to chase the front runner. Along the backstretch Booker had Apprentice always within striking distance, but made no move until the swing for the stretch.

When he called on Apprentice for speed, Booker saw an opening along the rail where he could save precious lengths. He sent the horse through the gap, emerged in second place and then went on to the front after collaring Fortification. The remainder of the mile and an eighth rout was a mere formality.

Fortification stuck to his running guns long enough to be second, two lengths behind Apprentice and a length in front of Sun Apollo. Three others competed, but might as well have stayed in the barn. They were Silent Shot, Best Bid and Scatter Brain.

Leaders Heavily Backed.

Both Appentice and Saintlite were heavily backed and paid $3.60 and $7.70, respectively.

The "daddy" of the day's finishes came in the sixth race. Ramus, Ross and Hail drove up to the finish like a three-horse team. The judges called them in the order named and the chartmakers took their word for it and said it was a nose-and-nose finish. Ramus was the medium of some spirited last-minute betting, including some $1,400 in comeback" money, indicating that the bookies were overloaded with bets on him. This is said to account for the usual across-the-board mutuel on Ramus, which paid $8.10 to win, $4.80 to place and $5.30 to show.

The daily double struck a new low for the meeting with the payoff being a mere $17 after King Bee and My Kin filled the important positions.

as Princeton. But it happens to be there, just the same. Obviously, Princeton has not played a "big league" schedule. However, on the day they trounced Navy, 26 to 0, the Tigers were as high-powered a gridiron machine as any in the land.

It is not only the conviction in this corner, but the opinion of all unbiased critics and coaches familiar with the facts, that Princeton's manpower compares with that at any college in the country. There have been Tiger players riding the bench at the start of each Saturday's games who would be first-string performers on any team you care to name, including Southern Methodist and Minnesota.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KING BEE, $4.40, $3.50, $2.70; NARISE, $5.80, $3.70; COUNT ME, $4.00.

KING BEE, away nicely and hurried to the front, moved clear when reaching the turn, saved ground but tired and had to be hard ridden to withstand NARISE. Latter improved her position steadily, secured racing room on the inside and was wearing the winner down at every stride approaching the finish. COUNT ME raced prominently and continued with good courage for the closing test. NIGHT COURT was strongly handled, but failed to stay when the real issue came. PEPPER PATCH suffered early interference. She closed stoutly when finding racing room. MIN ORMONT went evenly. FAIRIO was held safe. PRINCE DANNY had early foot.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Foaled in Maryland. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 1:38. Off at 1:40½. Winner, Mrs. A. P. Doyle's br. g. (5), by Trojan—The Squaw. Trained by A. Hullcoat. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACAUTAW, $3.20, $2.50, $2.30; TIGHT WAD, $3.80, $2.60; MAJOR GENERAL, $2.90.

ACAUTAW, kept in close attendance of the leaders after getting away nicely, assumed command midway of the turn, saved ground thereafter and held TIGHT WAD safe under mild urging. TIGHT WAD, slow to get into full stride, worked his way up steadily and closed with good courage. MAJOR GENERAL, rated within striking distance of the leaders, finished full of run after coming very wide during the final drive. BALLY RAY had a lot taken out of him to get to the front and he tired in the last furlong. BOOCORD was under pressure for the entire trip. ADAMS EVE lost ground and could not threaten.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:09. Off at 2:13. Winner, L. J. Marks' ch. f. (2), by Misstep—Kindred. Trained by H. S. Hart. Value to winner, $650; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY KIN, $7.60, $3.60, $2.50; LOTOFUS, $3.50, $2.50; IN FRONT, $2.80.

MY KIN, away fast and steadied behind the pacemaker for the first half mile, challenged strongly after reaching the home stretch, then closed strong to get up in the last 50 yards. LOTOFUS sprinted into a clear lead in the first three furlongs, saved ground, but failed to rally when vigorously shaken up nearing the end. IN FRONT was under urging from the beginning, but could not threaten the first two. STROPHE was in tight quarters on the inside most of the trip. She finished gamely when clear. LOLLIES was unable to threaten while racing forwardly. SCOUT ON was held safe.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For maidens of all ages. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:41. Off at 2:47. Winner, B. B. Stable's dk. b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAINTLITE, $7.70, $5.00, $3.70; ROCKY PRINCE, $6.10, $3.70; CHAMBERSBURGER, $2.80.

SAINTLITE, away sluggishly, bettered his position on the outside until reaching the home stretch, luckily secured racing room on the inside when straightened into the home stretch, closed steadily and was up in the final strides. ROCKY PRINCE, kept forwardly placed and in near pursuit of the leaders, was repeatedly interfered with by CHAMBERSBURGER after reaching the home stretch, overcame his interference and just failed to get up. CHAMBERSBURGER wore MARKME down after going five furlongs, but swerved repeatedly all during the stretch drive when he began tiring. EVENING HOUR weakened after making a determined effort, entering the home stretch. BUNKY closed with good courage. HASTY HANNA faltered after moving up stoutly at the final turn. COUNTER PASS was away poorly and closed a good gap. MARKME began tiring after six furlongs. MISS GLORY stopped. REIGH TETRARCH had early foot.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:14. Off at 3:15½. Winner, B. B. Stable's b. h. (6), by Vulcain—Teacher's Pet. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50 3-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:42 3-5, 1:56 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—APPRENTICE, $3.60, $2.50, $2.10; FORTIFICATION, $3.20, $2.40; SUN APOLLO, $2.90.

Booker eased APPRENTICE back off the pace after reaching the back stretch, moved up fast going into the final turn, came through on the inside of FORTIFICATION when straightened into the home stretch, took an easy lead and drew out steadily. FORTIFICATION was hurried to the front, shook off SUN APOLLO after six furlongs, but could not resist the winner. SUN APOLLO was rushed around his field at the first turn, forced a steady pace for seven furlongs and held on gamely. SILENT SHOT was close up but could not threaten seriously in the closing drive. BEST BID had no excuses. SCATTER BRAIN was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:44½. Winner, Ascot Stable's b. g. (7), by Volta—Poppy II. Trained by P. E. Kraft. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:26, 0:52, 1:19 2-5, 1:46 1-5, 2:12 1-5, 2:41.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RAMUS, $8.10, $4.80, $5.30; ROSS, $4.90, $4.90; HAIL, $5.50.

RAMUS, reserved back of the leaders for the first mile, came through on the inside when the leaders swung wide at the stretch turn, withstood a stout drive willingly and outstayed ROSS. Latter went up on the inside entering the back stretch, took command after seven furlongs, swung wide into the home stretch but fought it out stubbornly until the finish. HAIL lost command after six furlongs, remained in the thick of contention, then came again when the final test came. SUN ABBOT outstayed tiring horses. DARKLING raced close up for the first mile, then weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:14. Winner, H. H. Briner's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAURA KIEV, $24.50, $11.30, $5.50; CANIMAR, $6.10, $4.70; SAMBO BROWN, $6.60.

LAURA KIEV, saving ground during the early running, swung to the outside of the leaders after moving into contention approaching the home stretch, responded to a good drive and wore SAMBO BROWN down inside the closing furlong. CANIMAR was hurried along from the beginning, entered contention when straightened into the back stretch, then continued strongly until the finish. SAMBO BROWN was steadied in front, saved ground, but weakened nearing the end. ZEMBLA, badly messed about, was permitted to fall back badly after reaching the final bend when attempting to go up between horses, was finally taken to the outside and finished on her own courage.

Dunbar Gridders Triumph, 13 to 6

A fast and light Blue Plains eleven was defeated by Dunbar High School gridders yesterday at Walker Stadium, 13 to 6.

Off to an early start, Blue Plains essayed the aerial route, which carried through Dunbar territory to the 25-yard stripe, from which point Shinker tossed 30 yards over the goal line into the waiting arms of Ferguson.

Dunbar scored at the beginning of the second period, Aiken rushing through center for a touchdown after Gordon's 40-yard pass to Pinderhughes had placed the oval on the Blue Plains 1-yard line. A second touchdown was made in the next period by Aiken, when he recovered Gordon's lateral pass and skirted the Blue Plains' end for 15 yards.

Will See Sharkey Try a Comeback Against Winston

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Even though it be at the cost of considerable discomfort to me, since I must report at Princeton the following morning for the great game of undefeated champions of football in the East, I still cannot deny myself a little peek at the comeback of Jack Sharkey, of Boston, the former heavyweight champion of the world. This pregnant event will be celebrated in Boston Friday night, and I am going thither to bear eyewitness to it.

Squire Sharkey, the Chestnut Hill landholder, during his period of activity first as challenger, then as champion, and finally as former champion of the heavyweights, has furnished me with some of the finest material for copy that I have ever had. Perhaps the squire needs me now. Perhaps he has more copy for me. I shall not fail him.

The party of the second part to this sudden re-flaring up of ambition in the squire is a large gentleman of color, a fourth-rate heavyweight by the name of Unknown Winston, who has been operating out of Hartford, Conn., for some years with no better than fair to middling success. In 1933, for instance, he was defeated by such parties as King Levinsky, Donald ("Red") Barry, Lee Ramage, and the quite timid Bob Olin. One can hardly accuse Sharkey of overmatching himself on his first return trial as an active heavyweight fighter.

There is, however, the further possibility that to protect himself from unforseen accidents such as a wild swing, or a cut eye, that the squire may be wishful that Unknown Winston should not exert himself too strenuously during the limit of the engagement.

IN FACT, it is usually customary to make such arrangements whenever one is engaging a Senegambian brother. The only sepia no one has ever seemed to be able to handcuff is that piece of living dynamite, Joe Louis.

The birdies have whispered that Sharkey is trying to build himself up to a match with Joe Louis for a nice piece of change, because there are actually very few young men about who might be expected to draw a gate with the great colored fighter. This is fairly high business acumen on the part of the squire. There might be the sum of $100,000 in it for Squire Sharkey, and one or two minutes of extreme travail or suffering is a cheap enough exchange for that amount.

I happen to need $100,000 very badly myself right now, and I would be perfectly willing to fight Joe Louis for it. It can't be much worse than having been in a severe automobile accident and waking up in the hospital, which I have done, and I didn't get a nickel out of that.

THE squire is used to having his chin massaged and his belly punched, and one more pain more or less in those parts will not send him to an earlier grave.

Thus, I may have to wear my raincoat and galoshes, and carry my umbrella at the ringside in Boston, because this Winston is a very big and beefy party, and if he goes into the tank the splash is liable to be terrific. People ten rows back will get soaked. And the match is just as liable to be on the level, because Sharkey may wish to test himself out, try his timing, his punch, his distance, and get a real fight under his belt.

I had a talk with the old squire at the ringside before the Louis-Baer fight in which he bemoaned the fact that an athlete only acquired real wisdom when he was too old in the muscles to have it do him any good. "If I only had known as a kid fighter, what I know today, boy, nobody would have licked me."

YOU can lick that guy. He shouldn't be able to get near you. He wouldn't have laid a glove on you ten years ago. You would have kept that stiff jab in his face for 15 rounds. It's still the same old jab. And think how much smarter you are now. . . . Go ahead, Sharkey, why not have a try at it . . . ?

Well, there is no telling what will happen in Boston, but some kind of queer drama always surrounds the performances of the squire. Rages, tears, hysterics, comedy. Yes I must see that. I must try to judge whether it is an honest fight, or an arrangement. It's ten to one they'll fool me, though I wasn't fooled the night Sharkey fought Delaney in Madison Square Garden, and I never believed that he was very seriously harrassed in the fight with Carnera in which he lost the championship.

In this he succumbed to an uppercut and was counted out, writhing and wriggling. Later, Carnera hit Loughran with ten of the same punches in succession, practically, and brought no more than a faint rosy glow to Tommy's chin.

Gridmen in Spelling Bee.

Football teams from Georgetown and Maryland, who meet on the gridiron at Griffith Stadium Saturday, will indulge in an unusual bit of joint skull practice before the microphone at Station WMAL tonight. The two local rivals for football honors will compete in the Thursday night spelling bee of The Washington Post, which goes on the air at 8 o'clock.

Johnson No. 1 Nat Owner Contends

CLARK GRIFFITH, gray-haired, sun-tanned owner of the Washington Ball Club, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday yesterday by picking an all-star, all-time baseball team.

Griffith and Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, are the only living founders of the American League.

Asked at a party given him by ball club attaches to pick an all-time, all-star team, Griffith paused a moment, looked out the window and began to name the players. Here's the team:

Catcher—Buck Ewing.
First base—George Sisler.
Second base—Nap Lajoie.
Short stop—Hans Wagner.
Third base—Home Run Baker.
Right field—Ty Cobb.
Center field.—Tris Speaker.
Pitcher—Walter Johnson.

The Washington owner was unhesitating in all his choices with one exception. He paused when he came to the second base selection. Significantly, Griffith's star player last season, and one he admires greatly, was his second baseman, Buddy Myer. Twenty years ago even a doubt as to the "Nap's" ability was fighting material for any fan.

The greatest thrill in his 66 years, Griffith said, came when Washington won the World Series for the first time back in 1924. This was a bigger thrill than the time when his pitching beat the immortal Christy Mathewson, 6-0, or when at 16 he received money for playing baseball—$10 it was.

The greatest ball player of them all, says Griffith, was Walter Johnson.

Asked by the United Press whether he might retire sometime this year, Griffith said:

Mount Rainier Wins Title

INSPIRED by the sparkling play of Field Captain Tillie Scott, who scored all of his team's points, Mount Rainier yesterday defeated Marlboro in one of the most sensational soccer games of the season, 6-2, to win the Prince Georges County championship and the right to enter the State tournament conducted by the Playground Athletic League of Baltimore. The game was played at Hyattsville.

The Mounts were forced to go into the fourth extra period by a hard-fighting Marlboro team before they could claim victory. At the end of the regulation game the score was tied 2-2. The first extra period brought no score. The second extra period as well as the third saw the teams battling desperately for the goal needed to win. It was not until late in the fourth extra period that the Mounts made the two-pointer necessary for victory. At this point Marlboro's defense seemed to crack and only a minute elapsed before the black and gold jersied boys scored again. The length of the extra periods was 10 minutes.

Clean Sweep.

The victory gave the District Line school a clean sweep in all fall athletics in the county. The junior team took top honors in its league. The girls were crowned champions in field ball yesterday by winning over Baden. It is the first time in the school's history that such an impressive record has been hung up.

Friends Honor Clark Griffith on 66th Birthday

Two Grid Tilts In Alexandria On Sunday

Cubs to Oppose Midgets; Pirates Will Meet Virginia A. C.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 20.—Two football games will be played here Sunday afternoon in Baggett's Stadium. In a preliminary, the Pirate Cubs and the Virginia Midgets clash at 1 p. m. Immediately following, the Alexandria Pirates and the Virginia A. C. will play. Both games are being billed as city championship affairs, the former for the 125-pound championship, and the latter to settle the senior superiority.

The Pirate Cubs will be the defending champs in the first game. They wrested the championship from the little Virginias last season in a hard-fought 6-to-0 game. They rule as favorites to retain their crown.

In the major attraction the Virginias and Pirates continue their series of games, which have become an annual attraction for local fans. The Virginias are the present champions, having won from the Pirates, 7 to 2, last season, and will rule as favorites to retain their title.

Sunday afternoon basketball may be played in Alexandria this season for the first time in many years. A petition is being circulated throughout the city in favor of the plan. It probably will be decided at the next meeting of the city council.

The Alexandria Fraters held another hard practice tonight at Baggett's Stadium, with the full squad in attendance. Coach Colasanta presented the team with a number of new plays, which are to be used in Sunday's game with the Clancy A. C. of Norfolk. Practices are listed for tomorrow and Friday nights, also.

The Columbia Fire Department basketball team travels to Fort Meyer Friday, where it will play the post team.

Fire Keeps Team Idle.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 20 (AP).—The Oklahoma City University football squad, which includes 17 members of the city fire department, had no practice session today. Coach Toby Greene decided a $175,000 fire, which kept them up most of the night, was enough.

135-Pounders Notice.

Rift Over Grid Contest Admitted by W.-L. High

Ballston, Va., Nov. 20.—Although Washington and Lee High School will not withdraw from the Virginia State Literary and Athletic League, W. and L. school officials frankly admitted today that a rift existed between the Ballston institution and Newport News High School because of unfair treatment received at a game there last Saturday, Principal S. P. Vanderslice, of Washington and Lee, said:

"We are not interested in having any further relations with Newport News High School until there is a much better understanding between the two schools. We are not interested in signing any contracts with Newport News right now."

G. W. Team Drills For Final Contest

Works on New Plays for North Dakotans.

George Washington's gridmen yesterday buckled down to serious preparations for the season's finale against North Dakota next week, working on a new basis of spread plays to greet the Nodaks. The entire squad has been taking it easy, as no game is scheduled this week.

Bruce Mahan, who was injured, is back in uniform and probably will be able to play. It was first thought his hand was broken.

Blakeney Rolls 178 Game in League

Collects 7 Spares and 2 Strikes to Set New Record for Season.

EDDIE BLAKENEY, local duckpin star, came through with the best individual maple-shooting performance in league competition this season last night at the Georgetown Recreation alleys. Rolling with the Salesman team of the Heurich's Employes League, Blakeney collected seven spares and two strikes for a brilliant 178 game. Aided by this exhibition of duck shooting, the Salesman's climbed into second place with two triumphs over Cube Ice. The brewery aggregation is still atop the 14-team league with a two-game advantage.

The champion Rosslyn girls established a new season record set in the Ladies District League last night at the Arcadia, rolling games of 548, 567 and 521 for a total pinfall of 1,636. Their record set supersedes the mark formerly held by the Bill Woods by seven sticks. Lucy Rose, Rosslyn anchor, featured the high scoring with a 136 game and 386 set. Blanche Wooton also shared the limelight with a 132 game and 368 set.

The league standings remained unchanged, with Rosslyn still two games in front of Lucky Strike, the latter gaining a clean sweep over Swanee at Rosslyn. The Bill Woods took an odd-game decision from National Beer at Lucky Strike.

The leading Heurich Brewers will endeavor to protect its slim lead in the District League tonight when they meet Lucky Strike on the latter's drives. The second-place Arcadia team locks horns with Convention Hall and Occidental Restaurant and Grand Central Valet meet. Both the latter matches are scheduled for Convention Hall.

Crashing the maples for a season record game of 613, York Auto Supply gained the leadership of the Petworth League last night at Petworth by virtue of a greater total pinfalls than Brotman's Market. The Auto men swept to the front with three wins while the Market team were forced to bow three games. "Fireman" Jack Mooney, of Petworth, rolled a 132 game and Oliver (Auto Supply) a 359 set, to share high individual laurels.

High School Highlights

By John R. Vosburgh.

IT seems rather funny now but when those big bruisers who play football for Franklin and Marshall Academy mistook young Emerson Roberts for Adam Zinkievich, Devitt Prep's big triple-threat man, it was anything but funny to Emerson.

According to the Devitt players, Franklin and Marshall, which slammed Devitt around freely last Saturday at Lancaster, Pa., to win, 30 to 7, had been warned that Zinkievich was a combination of Red Grange, Jim Thorpe and Bronco Nagurski. Zinkievich was truly on the spot.

As things turned out, Zinkievich was suddenly called home by the serious illness of his father at Worcester, Mass. Young Roberts, a Richmond boy, was thrown into the breach, but somebody failed to notify Franklin and Marshall. Consequently, Roberts took what his teammates say was "an awful beating."

Two effectively blackened eyes are the more obvious results of his experience. The mauling, hauling, piling-up, leg-pulling and arm-twisting punishment customarily saved for the star players was showered upon Roberts. He found himself hit not by one, nor two, but three and four players. He was taken out of the play whether he was to be in it or not. He says he was on the ground more than he was upright. His teammates assert it would take an adding machine to count the bruises left on him by his young rivals.

Zinkievich, hardened and grizzled, probably would have been able to weather the assault. But Roberts had the added inconvenience of being out of condition. He had joined the squad less than two weeks previously.

At Central, Coach Hardy Pearce's tackle problems for the next two years are 50 per cent solved by the presence of Hugh Cramer, a 16-year-old Sophomore lad. Ross Chaimson, the other tackle, graduates in June.

Young Cramer has been a clever performer in the Central line throughout the series that saw Central romp to the championship. This writer was in error recently when, in a signed article, he included the name of Cramer among the several outstanding Central stars of Catholic faith.

Individual Tilts Due Saturday

THE principal attraction at Griffith Stadium Saturday will be Georgetown's home-coming football game with Maryland, but there are several individual arguments to be settled that promise to divert attention from the center ring.

It is surprising what queer rivalries football breeds. Co-Capt. Wally Herron, of Georgetown, for instance, probably will be pitted against Waverly Wheeler, Maryland's promising young sophomore back. Herron, Georgetown's most spirited player, its best defensive back, its best blocker and its most consistently overlooked hero, a veteran of three years—performing against a rookie who hasn't played a complete game.

Then there is Vic Willis, Maryland's star end, embroiled in a dispute with Red Hardy, Georgetown sophomore center, over the matter of catching passes. Much of Maryland's offense will be short, flat passes over the line to Willis. If they work the Terps are going places, and if they fail it looks like a good day for Georgetown. Willis thinks he's going to get them as he has in the past, and Hardy doesn't think so. A center against an end, veteran against rookie.

Again, Georgetown will use another rookie at quarterback—Tommy Keating, who will match wits with Charley Ellinger, a reserve of last year. Here, too, should be another interesting duel. Both are clever and yet reckless field generals, willing to gamble for victory.

International Game May Aid Boys' Clubs

Surplus at Nov. 29 Contest Would Be Given to Police Group.

THE international football game November 29 between a Mexico City high school team and Central High is likely to provide funds for the use of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs, it developed yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Education. The board approved a suggestion made through Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou that a surplus above receipts used for expenses be turned over to the Boys Clubs. Central was officially named as the team to meet the Mexicans.

In the report of the superintendent it was disclosed that 40 per cent of the gate receipts will be taken to cover expenses of the game. Any portion of this not needed for expenses will go to the Boys Club movement. On the other hand, if more than 40 per cent of the receipts is necessary to keep the game sponsors from losing money, there will be no hesitation in using an added portion of the receipts.

Under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Stephen E. Kramer and Birch E. Bayh, head of the department, it has been calculated that 40 per cent of the receipts will cover all expenses, thus allowing the other 60 per cent to be turned over to the Mexican team.

The report of the superintendent stated that admission to the game would be 25 cents for high school students, 75 cents for grandstand seats and $1 for reserved seats.

Mexico City, Nov. 20 (AP).—Accompanied by the 55-piece Tecnica Orchestra, the Federal District Technical School's football squad entrained tonight for Washington for a game against Central High School on November 29.

The party was headed by Capt. Gonzalo Herrera, military aid to President Lazaro Cardenas, and special representative of the Mexican government on the trip.

The Parade of the All-Stars of U. S. Colleges

Southern California—Its All-Time Honor Roll

Pinkert, Shaver, Drury, Warburton Stand Out in Backfield.

By George Trevor,
Nationally Known Football Authority.

GANGWAY for the all-time Trojan team, a war chariot that would shake the walls of ancient Ilium! Behind this devastating U. S. C. line, with Ernie Pinckert heading interference, such gifted backs as Drury, Shaver, Warburton, Kaer and Saunders would travel from Oregon to Mexico in the course of a season.

Hollow-cheeked tow-haired little Rabbit Warburton could eel through tiny chinks of daylight, ghost past clutching arms and lead the hounds on a fox chase. A great competitor he reached inspired heights under pressure as a passer and runner. Rus Saunders, now a motion-picture director, used to "cut-back" camera fashion, "fade out" of a tackler's grip, and "irisin" on the enemy goal. He ran and passed a vaunted Pitt team ragged at Pasadena in 1930.

Howard Jones' brother, Tad, thought Gas Shaver was the greatest back he had ever seen. Shaver just refused to be stopped. He filled each game with 60 minutes' worth of distance run and blocked unselfishly for his mates. Gus was a coach's ideal of what an all-round football player should be.

Morley Drury, perhaps the flashiest of all Trojan ball carriers, now mans a microphone during games and chats with equal facility about the deeds of his successors. Morton Kaer rivaled Drury as a Climax stepper. What a pair they made! Orv Mohler, son of a baseball player, blazed a sparkling trail for Warburton at quarterback. He could field kicks on the run.

There was only one Ernie Pinckert. How he could knock 'em flat so that some colleague might grab the headlines! A self-sacrificing blocker, Pinckert got a taste of glory now and then via a reverse play which was his "go-to-town" specialty. It was on this reverse that Ernie whip-sawed Tulane's defense for touchdown-gallops in 1932.

Ernest Smith, Hector of Trojan tackles, teamed with Capt. Tay Brown to form the greatest tackle pair that ever wore cleated shoes. Smith's "dogs" were something to marvel at. Bootblacks charged him double-price for a shine. In position technique Brown had an edge on Smith, but lacked the latter's superhuman strength. Jesse Hibbs, kingpin of the 1928 line, would have been a handfull for either of these tackle titans.

At one guard you would want tenacious Johnny Baker whose talented place-kick toe nosed out Notre Dame in that 1931 uphill thriller. Baker was a low-slung chap, hard to upset. He blocked savagely. Aaron Rosenberg, a rawboned giant with a penetrating charge, would be Baker's mate. "Rosy" had no superior as a defensive guard, though Larry Stevens and Clark Galloway were pipins.

Stan Williamson would snap the ball for our Trojan immortals because of his wide tackling range and terrific charge, with Jeff Cravath of 1927 renown as his alternate.

Francis Tappaan and Ray Sparling have a shade on the other U. S. C. wingmen. Sparling carried the ball on Jones' pet end around play in addition to smearing the defensive tackle. Tappaan was a whiz under kicks and a sure pass snatcher. Morris Badgro could do a grand job of taking out the tackle as his record with the professional New York Giants attests. Garrett Arbelbide reached dramatic heights but was less consistent than the other three.

Broad Demand In Steel Points To Price Rise

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—The rate of steel ingot production has climbed to 54½ per cent of capacity from 54 per cent last week in response to a sharp increase in orders from the automobile industry and expanded takings of railroad and construction material, Iron Age stated today in its weekly review.

"After weeks of steady but moderate orders from the automobile industry, business from that quarter has suddenly swollen to unlooked-for proportions," the summary declared.

Reflecting the improved outlook for prdouction, steel scrap has advanced 50 cents a ton at Chicago and 25 cents a ton at Pittsburgh.

Concerning purchases by the motor manufacturers, the review said that "sheet mill backlogs have become so large that certain producers are virtually sold out for the year on all regular grades except heavy hot-rolled sheets.

"Reluctance on the part of a number of steel producers to advance prices is vanishing as evidences of widening demand become more convincing.

"Pressure for deliveries is replacing price as the concern of the motorcar trade, and a number of buyers in the automotive field are now requesting mills to reserve rolling space for their first quarter requirements subject to the prices prevailing at that time.

"The transition to a strong market has been a sudden one. Only recently persistent reports of price irregularities, especially on tonnage business placed in the Detroit area, made the steel trade apprehensive of attempting price advances, notwithstanding increased material costs.

"Barring a sudden and unexpected change in market conditions, it now seems likely that virtually all finished steel items except sheet steel piling and tubular products will be increased in price before January 1.

"The likehood of an advance in rails has suddenly spurred the railroads to action. The Burlington has placed orders for 20,000 tons of rails and 13,600 tons of fastenings. The St. Louis-San Francisco has asked for court authority to buy 17,600 tons of rails. Tentative inquiries from other Western roads total 60,000 tons, while an Eastern line expects to purchase 30,000 tons."

Stock Averages Up 228% Since 1932

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Stock prices, as measured by the Associated Press average of 60 issues, have risen 228 per cent from the 1932 low, 59 per cent from the low of March, 1935, and 17 per cent since October 2. The recent broad advance has stimulated Wall street's old controversy: "Are stock prices too high?" The affirmatives point out that the average yield is approaching the 1929 level. The bull proponents answer that industrial activity has shown a sturdy improvement—17 per cent since May—and, for the first time since 1929, included the heavy industries.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 20.—A better tendency developed on the stock exchange today despite international uncertainties. Renewed speculative buying caused an improvement in gold shares, oils and transatlantic issues. Gilt-edged and aviation shares hardened on investment buying, and the market closed steady.

Paris—Trading on the bourse displayed nervousness today with most attention being attracted by the fluctuation in rentes, which declined early but later regained their losses. The closing tone was irregular.

Westinghouse Cuts Capital, Adds Surplus

Stockholders Will Get Half the Transfer in Dividends.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 20.—Directors of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co. proposed today to transfer $12,688,000 of its $47,581,000 capital to "paid in" surplus, one-half of which would be returned to stockholders in quarterly payments. The 19,000 stockholders would receive 25 cents a share for two years beginning April 30, 1936.

Board Chairman A. L. Humphrey and President Charles A. Rowan in a letter calling a special meeting December 20, said in effect:

The business outlook is good, but the board does not feel it can continue declaring regular dividends after next January 31, until earnings warrant. The company has paid $15,628,000 in dividends, more than $11,000,000 in excess of net earnings, since January, 1931.

Westinghouse has $16,000,000 in securities, most of which is in Government obligations, and could sell $6,344,000 of this sum to make the quarterly payments without impairing its working capital.

The letter asserted the move would insure payment of twice the present rate of dividend. The reduction in capital would amount to $4 per share on the 3,172,110.72 shares of no par value now outstanding.

Am. Tel. & Tel. Votes Its Regular Dividend

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Directors of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared today the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 payable January 15 to stock of record December 16. The dividend calls for a distribution of around $42,000,000 to the stockholders.

The company has paid this quarterly rate of dividend uninterruptedly since 1921.

The Market

Stock Prices Yield to Selling Volume in Active Trading; Bonds Lower.

New York, Nov. 20.—In a volume of trading which approached the heaviest of the year, the stock market ran into the first serious selling it has had since the bull movement began in earnest early in July. Trading volume was 4,000,000 shares. Half of the business was done in the first hour, when prices were shoved a little higher in most departments, but the trading ended with another rush of activity and a scramble for profits, which dented the price structure. Bonds were draggy. December wheat dropped half a cent at 96¾ cents a bushel.

Stocks began the trading with a boom, the turnover in the first two hours being but slightly under 2,000,000 shares. The ticker tape ran hopelessly behind, as it did much of the time during the later trading, but the mild advances in prices seemed to give a signal for profit taking. At first the response of the market was nothing but a slackening of the pace, but by the middle of the hour selling quickened its pace, stop-loss orders were uncovered and prices ended the day definitely lower. The setback, or shakeout, as some put it, was the most pronounced that the market has seen in a long time. Many of the leaders, including Steel, were down 1 to 3 points from the best prices.

Trading Leaders.

About half a dozen stocks made up about half a million shares of the turnover. The active ones were Radio, Commonweath & Southern, International Telephone, Baldwin, and Timken Axle. I. T. T., the highest of the group, was quoted around $14 a share. Utilities had a good run for a while, but the movement died out. Rails were lower nearly all day, and fell off quickly in the late selling, but not before Northern Pacific had exceeded its highest price of the first week of this year. L. & N. reached a new top. Columbia Pictures dropped on the dividend announcement after the close yesterday. Oils were heavy, with one or two exceptions. Packing stocks were active and firm, but Morrell lost 3 points on dividend reduction.

Francs Under Pressure.

Foreign exchange was not much excited with sanctions in effect, but francs were heavy for other reasons. The prospect of a cut in French trade with Italy is not helping the outlook for maintenance of the franc on a gold basis or at the present valuation, nor will the exhortation policy of this country with regard to shipment of our cotton, oil, copper and other products to Italy do much to promote firmer prices and trade expansion.

French franc futures for 90 days fell to a discount of 20 points as the market worried over the French budget position and the continued large-scale drain upon Paris gold stocks, still running at the rate of $15,000,000 a day to this country alone. Of the $602,400,000 in gold which has been imported here or engaged for future import since September 1, $338,400,000 has come or is due from Paris. This afternoon there were some trades in spot francs just under 6.58¾, which meant that the gold flow would be accelerated if the lower price for Paris funds was maintained.

Spending.

Without premonition of what is bound to come, if the Government keeps on its present spending course, or will come in spite of everything, the public is steadily becoming more anxious over the state of Federal finance. So far only promises have been had of anything looking to reduction in spending, although actually the outlay has been held down by inability of even the brain trusters to think up ways of getting rid of it more rapidly. Undoubtedly taxation is the great bugbear of business. It is preying on the corporate as well as upon the individual mind, and wage earners and the destitute will learn soon or late that what hampers business prosperity acts also as a drag on employment and wages.

New Treasury Tables.

The Treasury daily statement for November 15 contains an interesting table showing in great detail the "financial status of appropriation provided in the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935, as of October 31, 1935." The table shows allocation by the President, obligations actually created, payments actually made and the unexpended balance, by governmental departments and by projects. The act was signed last April 8 and the President allocated $4,000,000,000 for various purposes.

The new table discloses that, more than six months after the act became law, obligations created under the $4,000,000,000 allocations total $1,460,886,314, of which $1,100,645,561 has been paid by check, leaving unexpended balance of $2,899,354,439. Of the $898,422,844 allocated for grants to States for work-relief projects only $46,035,470 actually has been paid out by check. The figures give a good illustration of the physical difficulty in spending fantastic sums quickly and explain why the Treasury has not had to borrow more than it has in recent months.

Morgan and the Market.

Reading the press headlines, some people around the brokerage office boardrooms got the impression that J. P. Morgan, returning from England, didn't like the bull market. What he actually was quoted as saying was that he didn't believe a bull market created prosperity, which seems to be a theory generally held, except in Government circles. President Hoover, it was sometimes suspected, subscribed to the belief that prosperity was merely a state of mind and that prosperous feelings, as might be reflected in high spending of private funds and a rise in markets, might restore actual prosperity. The present Administration also at times has given some people the impression that rising markets are a cause rather than a symptom of prosperity. When bull markets go beyond the business line (as they almost always do) they swing back again. The state of business is the boss, except when that authority is swept aside, temporarily, by a wave of inflation or speculative hysteria.

Savings Gains In Washington Lead Nation

Increase Per Inhabitant Is 333.3 Per Cent in 20 Years.

The District of Columbia, with $103,337,000 in savings deposits, 234,524 depositors and an average of $208 per inhabitant on June 29 this year, has gained 333.3 per cent per inhabitant in the past 20 years, larger than any gain in that period reported by any State. Texas was second with a gain 328.6 per cent.

The figures are from reports received by the savings division of the American Bankers Association which reveal that New York State leads in total savings with $6,934,976,000, and in number of depositors with 9,802,782. In savings per inhabitant on June 29 Massachusetts was the leader with $578, New York next with $531 and Connecticut third with $523. At the bottom of the list was South Carolina with $17.

Increase 4 per Cent in Year.

Savings, including time deposits and postal savings deposited in banks in the United States, increased 4.1 per cent for the year closing June 29, 1935, in comparison with the preceding year, according to the report. This percentage gain is nearly double that registered a year ago over the year closing June 30, 1933, which was 2.4 per cent.

The gain in the United States amounting to $899,979,000 is general and only in seven States is a loss shown. Savings in banks now stand at $22,652,489,000, about $6,000,000,000 less than ten years ago and almost $500,000,000 below the high point of 1930.

Perpetual Building Reports Best Year

At the annual meeting of the Perpetual Building Association the present officers and directors were re-elected for the ensuing year as follows: Marvin A. Custis, president; Vernon G. Owen, vice president; Edward C. Baltz, secretary; Franklin W. Harper, treasurer; Raymond K. Espey, assistant secretary, and William H. Dyer, assistant treasurer. In addition to the officers the following are directors: Arthur G. Bishop, chairman; John C. Scofield, Dr. William G. Shafhirt and Samuel Scrivener.

In commenting on the year's activities Mr. Bishop reported the most successful year in the history of the association. "Our records show an increase of $4,000,000 in assets, which bring the total assets over the $40,000,000 mark, a 40 per cent larger gain than any previous year of our existence. We have made over $12,000,000 worth of new loans, of which approximately $2,000,000 were for new construction."

Shorts in Sugar Squeezed Again

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 20.—Members of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange were notified today they must settle "long" positions in the December No. 1 sugar contract or face terms to be imposed by the exchange at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

A squeeze in the No. 1 December contract has prevailed since September when open trading was suspended by the exchange owing to limitation of the eligible supply.

Members having "long" positions must either receive delivery of any 1935 quota raw cane sugar duty free or duty paid at the contract price plus 0.90 cent a pound, or they must make final settlement of the contract at 2.51 cents a pound in cash.

French Gold Drops $66,000,000 in Week

Paris, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Havas News Agency says gold losses of nearly a billion francs ($66,000,000) in one week appear in the weekly statement of the Bank of France, to be published tomorrow. The period covered is from November 7 to November 14.

Raising the discount rate has slowed up the drain on the bank's gold reserves, but the outflow has continued, the statement continues.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchange rates were narrow and slightly mixed in most centers yesterday. In New York the British pound sterling was unchanged at $4.92⅛. French francs were .00⅛ of a cent lower at 6.58¾ cents and Holland guilders dropped .01 of a cent at 67.90 cents.

In London the dollar was slightly lower at 4.92⅛ to the pound, and in Paris the American unit was about unchanged at 6.586 cents to the franc.

Strange As It Seems —By John Hix

WHENEVER there is an eclipse of the sun, the temperature of the affected area on earth drops slightly due to the fact that during the eclipse the rays of the sun are shut off by the moon. This temperature drop is slight, and is not noticeable to the average person. The earth is protected by its layer of atmosphere.

The moon does not have this protection, and its surface temperature is greatly affected by the rays of the sun. Normally the surface temperature of the moon is 250 degrees at the hottest point. During the few minutes that the sun is cut off in an eclipse of the moon, however, this temperature may drop to 150 degrees below zero.

In the June 14 eclipse of 1927, Seth B. Nicholson, of Mount Wilson Observatory, and others measured a drop of 345 degrees. When the moon was exposed to the sun's heat again, the temperature began a swift climb—it increased 345 degrees in les than two hours. These masurements were made on a spot on the moon that has a normal temperature of 160 degrees.

Strange as it seems, water conducts electricity only when there is an ionizing agent in it—such as salt or acid. Pure water is a non-conductor, but a pinch of salt or a little hydrochloric or sulphuric acid added to it allows electricity to pass through it.

Eight consecutive shut-out victories in their 1934 8-game schedule was the record of Wheeling High School in Oregon—a school with only 29 boys enrolled and 17 of them out for football. Coach "Buck" Hammer concentrated on line plays, and every touchdown of the season was made on running plays. Half their games the Wheeler team did not even punt during the games. Under high school rules, they played 12-minute quarters.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Listen! By Harry J. Tuthill

Oh I'm just stunned. The idea that Mr. Oakdale who, I'm sure, never saw that tintype, knew about the marks on the back of...
Sh-h! Go on, Hartford.
Yes! Yes! Since I'm forced to say so, I admit I'm an Eldorado. And Aunt Tessie will testify to...
What's that? Aunt Tessie? Fellow, where did you stumble on that name?
Unhand me, Monty Eldorado, or by heavens I shall....
No rough stuff here, Monty.
Pardon...forgot myself. Ah..Mrs. Bungle, I'd like to talk with Oakdale privately. May we step into this next room for...?
Certainly, Mr. Eldorado. Certainly.
Oh how thrilling. Like a play.
It was drama plus. Especially when good old Hartford squared his shoulders and said....
Peggy! George! Sh-hh!

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

LEADERS of more than 2,000,000 State, county and municipal employes throughout the country have been invited to a convention in Chicago, beginning December 9, under auspices of the American Federation of Government Employes, to map plans for affiliation with the American Federation of Labor through the AFGE, it was announced last night by E. Claude Babcock, AFGE president.

BAKER.

For the purpose of this convention, Mr. Babcock said, local unions already affiliated with the A. F. of L. will be granted representation on the basis of their average membership during the past year. Each local union will have representation, but the exact character of it, with respect to votes, will be determined later.

The AFGE was granted jurisdiction over these groups by the San Francisco convention of the A. F. of L., but was unable to exercise it until its own constitution was revised at the recent Cincinnati convention.

Mr. Babcock points out that there are at least 28 groups of such employes now operating under Federal charters. They are eligible to membership in the AFGE and presumably will affiliate with it, but one of the aims of the convention will be to work out an organization of these State, county and municipal employes which can co-operate with the AFGE in problems of mutual interest, yet which will be sufficiently autonomous to preserve full liberty to all groups in their individual problems.

Ted J. Waggy (F), Federal Housing Administration, who is president of the National Association of Air Legions, has been discussing with Lieut. Walter Hinton, transatlantic flier, plans for the preparation of a ground school course for the N. A. A. L.

Internal Revenue Retirements.

Two internal revenue employes, Dr. Jasper N. Baker (F) and Samuel C. Heliker (P), retired this week after enviable periods of Government service of 45 and 17 years, respectively.

Dr. Baker's retirement becomes effective January 1, but he is now taking leave. He received many gifts, including a radio, from his fellow workers. Frederick I. Evans (P), chief of Administrative Division, made a presentation speech at the retirement ceremony. Dr. Baker entered the service with Treasury as a clerk in September, 1890. He resigned to accept a position in the Postoffice Department in August, 1920. He then re-entered the Treasury in March, 1922, as chief clerk, Bureau of Internal Revenue, which position he retained until 1926. Since then he had been chief of the Supplies and Equipment Section.

Mr. Heliker, who was with Technical Staff, expects to leave this week for Holdrege, Nebr., where he will live on his farm. His fellow workers presented him with a purse of $100 as a retirement gift, testifying to his efficient service and popularity in the bureau.

R. T. Buckingham, Personnel Division, Internal Revenue, is in Emergency Hospital suffering from a fractured knee sustained when hit by an automobile Friday evening near his home in Georgetown.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Bob Hope; Shepard, Carltons Revue and other acts; screen, Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray in "Hands Across the Table"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone, in "Mutiny on the Bounty"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (stage, Adrienne, international psychic; screen, Alice Faye and Bebe Danials in "Music Is Magic").

Last night I ate hot dogs,
And oh what a dream I had!
The dream itself was glorious,
But the waking up was bad:
I fancied myself in Congress
As adjournment bells were ringing;
With four months' rest ahead
Naturally my heart was singing,
It was only my alarm going off
And I awoke to hear Samuel say,
"Get up and hustle to work!
How do you get this way?"

MATTIE RICHARDS TYLER (P), Register's Office, Treasury.

Parking Problem Is Topic.

Interstate Commerce Commission employes will study the parking problem tomorrow at 4:05 p. m. at a meeting in Hearing Room C under auspices of Lodge No. 58, American Federation of Government Employes. E. Claude Babcock, AFGE president, will speak, and will assist in installing recently elected officers, headed by Lloyd Wymer, president. Alternates to the District Department, AFGE, also will be named.

Employes of the Bureau of Dairy Industry will gather in the "Patio" of the Administration Building, Agriculture, for a social program tomorrow beginning at 8 p. m. Dancing, refreshments and entertainment are scheduled.

$1,800 to $6,500 Jobs.

Examinations for several positions with salaries ranging from $1,800 to $6,500 are announced by Civil Service Commission as follows:

Associate metallurgist (recovery), $3,200 a year; associate metallurgist (physical), $3,200 a year; assistant metallurgist (recovery), $2,600 a year; assistant metallurgist (physical), $2,600 a year. Optional branches are: Ferrous, nonferrous, and ore dressing.

Director, Division of Maternal and Child Health, $6,500 a year; director, Crippled Children's Division, $6,500 a year; Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.

Farm agent, $1,800 a year, Indian Field Service, Interior Department. Separate registers of eligibles will be established as follows: General farming, stock raising under range conditions, irrigation farming and dry farming.

Members of Resettlement Administration Lodge, No. 206, American Federation of Government Employes, invite all Government employes to its open meeting at 8 p. m. today at 1328 G street northwest. John Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, No. 91, will speak on "The Coming Economy Wave and the Government Transfer Agency."

NRA Employes.

Q. How many employes are there now at the NRA?—Edith Alnow at the NRA?—Edith Aldrich (P).

A. There are about 2,300 employes left at the NRA, about 600 of whom are in the field. More than 5,300 were employed by the NRA at the peak of its activities. The present force probably will remain until Congress decides the ultimate fate of this establishment.

'Cat-naper' Asks $5.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Agnes Craig, whose Persian cat, Skippy, disappeared last week, was warned today she'll never see her pet again unless she pays $5 ransom. A note directed that the money be left in a tin can in Mrs. Craig's front yard. She turned the note over to police.

Culbertson on Bridge

With more sorrow than anger I quote from a recent article in a bridge magazine published in England: " . . . One more example should suffice to settle once and for all time the superiority of British bridge over the American variety.

"Now, I have nothing but the kindliest feelings toward my British contemporaries. But may I be permitted to remark, apropos of the above, that it is just a 'bit thick?' "

They are permitted, of course, to ignore the trivial fact that American teams have defeated British teams in every important match so far played. (Perhaps it is unsporting of me even to mention this.) But I really must object quite mildly and without rancor, to an opinion such as the above when it is based on arrant ignorance.

The "first example" used by the British authority was this:

WEST	EAST
♠K 8 7	♠A Q 10
♥A Q 9 3	♥J 10
♦K 10 9	♦A J 7 6 2
♣Q 8 7	♣K 5 4

Again I quote: "They threw this hand in! Hhey . . . were playing 'Culbertson' . . . they were vulnerable, which meant that 'Culbertson' caused us to gain 660 points."

Now, really! Is this malicious, or merely naive? Does our critic actually believe that any bridge player in America would fail to bid the East hand, or that more than a handful would pass the West?

The "one more example" previously referred to was this gem:

NORTH
♠K Q 10 9
♥10

WEST	EAST
♠J 6 5 3	♠7
♥Q 8 5	♥J 7 6 4 3 2
♦A 6	♦9

SOUTH
♠A 8 4
♦K Q J 7 5

He writes: "East-West were vulnerable and West dealt. At our table the bidding went:

"West, pass; North, 1 diamond; East, pass; South, 5 diamonds.

"There is a certain directness here which I find pleasing.

"West, pass; North, 1 heart; East, 2 heart; South, double.

"Of course, East could not fail to make two hearts. The swing in our favor against that particular N.-S. was, therefore, 1,020 points.

"And so on! I could give a score of examples of this character, but I feel that the case is finally proved . . . "

Perhaps the same "American method" user who passed the East hand in the first example bid one spade on the North hand in the second. The hand is, of course, a "pass" in any American system I know, but even so, if it were opened as a semi-psychic, the proper bid would be one diamond. Moreover, a double of two hearts should be promptly "taken out" by North, since he bid on less than minimum honor trick requirement.

Aside from these trifling discrepancies my British friend's case is "finally proved."

Today's Question.

Question: Should I announce to my opponents that I use the new Culbertson void-showing bid?

Answer: It is necessary only to say that you play the Culbertson system, unless our opponents are not thoroughly familiar with it.

No Jobless for Jobs.

Santa Maria, Calif., Nov. 20 (AP). Prosperity note: Work on four Federal relief projects had to be held up today, Manager I. M. Burloa said, because there weren't enough unemployed men available to fill the jobs.

Miami Bans 'Slots.'

Miami, Fla., Nov. 20 (AP).—Miami's city commission today banned slot machines, although they are legal under a State law. The commission unanimously adopted an ordinance specifying jail sentences up to 60 days and fines up to $500 for operating the devices in Miami.

On the Air Today

WHAT happened to—and on—all those instruments carried by the record-breaking stratosphere balloon a few days ago will be explained to the public tonight (WMAL, at 7:15) by United States Army and National Geographic Society officials.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society; Dr. L. J. Briggs, of the Bureau of Standards; Gen. Oscar Westover, acting chief of the Army Air Corps; Thomas McKnew, of the Geographic Society staff, and Capts. Albert W. Stevens and Orville A. Anderson, who made the flight, will participate.

Among other things, the official altitude will be discussed. It will also be shown that the earth, in truth, is round, because photographs from the extreme height reached show a distinctly globular shape. The program, to reach the country at large, originates in the society's building on Sixteenth street.

The Northern Dramatic Company returns to WOL for a short season of six weeks, beginning tonight at 10, with "Clouds Hang Low," from the pens of Ronald Dawson, who directs the company, and Charles Warren, a motion-picture writer. Advance information indicates that "Clouds Hang Low" is tense with love interest and exciting action. In this year's company will be Meredith Smith, Charles Gillman, Paul Alexander, Paul Murphy, Harold Weinberger, Ruth Perrott, Claire Sergant, Paul Arlt, Lamort Hill and Marvin Beers. Mr. Dawson returns to Hollywood about the first of the year.

• • • •

Lanny Ross will present a full hour of Jerome Kern music—16 of the composer's best loved numbers, in the "Show Boat," WRC, at 9. Clyde Barrie has been drafted to sing "Old Man River" and Helen Oelheim's featured song is to be "Once In a Blue Moon." Kern's success as a composer is illustrated in a most emphatic manner when the program is studied. In addition to the above, these selections will be played and sung: "Wild Rose," "Look for the Silver Lining," "Don't Ever Leave Me," "I Got Love," "Why Do I Love You," "My Bill," "I've Told Every Little Star," "I Dream Too Much" and "I'm the Echo" (from a recent production), "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" and selections from "Cat and the Fiddle."

Other high spots:

Jeritza: Sings in Kent hour, WJSV, at 8:30.

Four pianos: Vera Brodsky, Harold Triggs, Ramona and Roy Bargy combine talents in Whitman "Music Hall," WRC, at 10. Also Edna Thomas, interpreter of Southern melodies.

"Winterset:" Scene portrayal by Burgess Meredith and Margo, of current Broadway cast, Rudy Vallee Hour, WRC, at 8.

Brigadiers: Present the comedy novelty "Shooting of Dan McGrew" (by request) and two martial numbers, WJSV, at 10.

Attorney General: Homer S. Cummings speaks in "Pearce" program, WJSV, at 9:30, with Rosa Ponselle.

Town meeting: Dr. John Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, in "Young America States Its Case," WMAL, 9:30.

Tonight brings another of those gigantic and stupendous spelling bees under the direction of "Pops" Bill McCormick and Judge Charles Stofberg. The Post presents in this week's edition the two football teams of Georgetown and Maryland universities. These two home-town elevens meet Saturday on the gridiron, but their clash tonight on words will be no less hard fought.

Two weeks from tonight two scholarly teams from the Patent Office and the Department of Agriculture will fight out another chapter in the inter-Government duel of consonants and vowels.

The time is 8:00; the station, WMAL. J. H. H.
